Husband sought in suburb slaying

NILES POLICE surround a gold Eldorado where they found the body of Sally Fritz, 29 Apple Hill Ln., Prairie View Friday. Mrs. Fritz, who had been shot in the back of the head, was found wrapped in blankets in the back seat of the car, police said. Cook County Sheriff's police said they were searching for her husband, Herbert, who allegedly fled to Wisconsin.

by KEN VANDERBEEK

Seventeen-year-old Russell Fritz of Prairie View telephoned the police Friday afternoon to report that "something is wrong with my house."

What was wrong, he said, was that his mother's bedroom was spattered with blood and the blankets were stripped from her bed.

At about the same time, Niles police discovered the body of 45-year-old Sally Fritz, 29 Apple Hill Ln., Prairie View, wrapped in blankets lying in the back seat of her late-model Cadillac.

She had been shot once in the back of the head.

A FEW HOURS LATER, police issued an arrest warrant for her husband, Herbert J. Fritz Jr., and said he probably had fled to a farm he owns near Kenosha, Wis.

Police discovered Mrs. Fritz' body at about 2:30 p.m. Friday after receiving an anonymous phone call from a man who said there had been "an accident" near the Golf Mill Shopping Center at Golf Road and Milwaukee Avenue in Niles.

"The man who called said there was someone seriously injured in a car," said Capt. Russell Beavers.

"It appears there was some concern that the body be found," Beavers said. "It was so noticeable, it seems the killer wished us to find it."

Mrs. Fritz was discovered after a 15-minute search by police for her car. The 45-year-old woman, dressed in a brown pull-over blouse, gray slacks and blue mocassins, was found face up under blankets reportedly removed from a bedroom in her home.

POLICE SAID she was murdered "sometime before noon" Friday.

Assistant States' Atty. Terry Sullivan said Mrs. Fritz probably was killed in her home and later driven by her killer to the shopping center. Her car was discovered parked about 200 feet from the east entrance of Sears Roebuck and Co., police said.

"Evidence indicates the crime was committed at her residence," Sullivan said. "We've found a 32-caliber revolver and blood on her bedroom walls. And we've also discovered that a bed had been stripped of its blankets."

Fritz was known locally as the owner and operator of the "Kiddieville" amusement park on Milwaukee Avenue near Golf Road until he sold the property to a toy store more than six years ago.

His neighbors described him as a good father to his five children.

"There never was any evidence of difficulty over there," said Marion Slaga, 11 Apple Hill Ln. "But everyone on the street is beside themseves now. This kind of thing is only expected to happen on TV."

AS HE TALKED, Linda Fritz, 14, one of the five Fritz children, ran from a friend's car to her house where Cook County detectives were collecting blood samples from her mother's bedroom. The young girl sobbed husterically.

"No, no," she cried. "Why?"

Adele Heyden, 21 Apple Hill Ln., said she last saw Mrs. Fritz Thursday night when Mrs. Fritz stopped by to deliver an anniversary card for the Heydens.

"She seemed so happy," Mrs. Heyden said. "Nothing seemed to be wrong."

John DeNinno, 13 Apple Hill Ln., said he saw Fritz leaving his home at about 4:15 p.m. Friday. At the time, DeNinno said he assumed that Fritz was taking his daughter Linda to her job at a McDonald's restaurant. Later, however, he could not recall seeing the girl in the car.

Merchants irate over downtown underpass

Businessmen in downtown Arlington Heights Friday took a strong stand against the proposed Arlington Heights Road underpass at the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks saying it would destroy the downtown area.

At a special meeting of the downtown Merchants Assn. businessmen told village officials they were "unalterably opposed" to the underpass.

"This thing could destroy the downtown," Edward Paweiko, Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce president, said. "The chamber has been working for years to unify the north and south sections of the central business district because of the barrier caused by the railroad. But this (the underpass) we feel would be an insurmountable barrier to unify the north and south," he said.

A PUBLIC HEARING on the $5.7 million underpass proposal will be at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the municipal building, 33 S. Arington Heights Rd. The chamber will file a formal objection at the hearing.

The underpass plan recommended by the engineering firm of Metcalf & Eddy, Inc., calls for Arlington Heights Road to run under the railway tracks with a minimum vertical clearance of 14½ feet. The plan also suggests that Northwest Highway be depressed to the same level as Arlington Heights Road. This would force the closing of nine businesses and the Evergreen Avenue railroad crossing.

Many of the merchants complained Friday that eliminating the Evergreen Avenue railroad crossing will cause additional traffic congestion in the downtown area.

"THE DAMAGE this would do to the business community is just intolerable," said Donald Morton, president of Arlington Heights Federal Savings & Loan Assn., 25 E. Campbell St.

"The downtown merchants association is unalterably opposed to this plan. To cut the north side from the south side more than it already is is something the Village of Arlington Heights just can't tolerate," Morton said.

The improvements related to the underpass also would mean Davis and Wing streets will no longer have access to Arlington Heigihts Road.

The only cost estimate made on the proposed underpass, $5.7 million, was developed in 1975. Gary Alstot of Metcalf & Eddy, Inc. said the final cost may be as high as $8.6 million because of inflation. Federal financing to cover 70 per cent of the cost has been obtained and the state and village are expected to divide the remaining 30 per cent.

DOWNTOWN MERCHANTS said Friday the underpass shouldn't be built just because the money is available. "We don't have to spend it at the expense to the guts of the downtown area," said Fredric Marks, who also works for Arlington Heights Federal Savings & Loan.

Environmental impact studies for the underpass proposal have been approved by federal highway officials, making Tuesday's public hearing the next stop. If the village board decides to proceed with the underpass plan, final design plans must be approved by the federal highway administration and right-of-way needed for the project must be acquired before bids can be let, meaning construction could not start for at least another year.

Several downtown businessmen said Friday they would prefer having the Chicago and North Western Ry. station moved west of Vail Avenue, rather than build an underpass at Arlington Heights Road.

Bank paid Lance campaign bills

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Denying any illegality was involved, Bert Lance confirmed Friday he financed his 1974 Georgia gubernatorial campaign by having the bills sent to his family-owned bank, which paid them even when his account contained insufficient funds.

"That's like having the goose that laid the golden egg," Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md., told Lance at the Senate hearings into his tangled financial affairs. Another legislator called it "the neatest way" to finance a campaign he'd ever heard of.

But the embattled White House budget director, still cool and unruffled in the witness chair, maintained that this — one aspect of his much publicized bank overdrafts — was quite legal and caused no financial loss to his Calhoun, Ga., National Bank.

MUCH OF FRIDAY'S testimony before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee was marked by hostile, sometimes sarcastic probing of the overdraft issue, plus some dramatic support for Lance from committee Democrats.

Lance maintained the huge overdrafts involved no breach of banking ethics and listened impassively as one senator compared him to a scofflaw "who goes through a red light when nobody is looking."

Lance also made an issue of his claim that he had given the committee "a total and full disclosure" of all the major allegations now under review before it confirmed him as director of the Office of Management and Budget in January.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., the panel chairman, promptly announced he would check that claim by calling the staff investigators allegedly involved as witnesses once the panel finishes with Lance.

But the first fresh disclosure of the hearings came when Sen. Ted Stevens, the assistant Senate Republican leader from Alaska, got Lance to discuss how the overdraft issue related to his unsuccessful campaign for governor of Georgia in 1974.

ALTHOUGH IT was not clear how much of the $450,000 in Lance family account overdrafts were involved in the campaign funding, the issue has been central to the allegations of improper, if not illegal, personal conduct on Lance's part when he was a Georgia bank president.

"As I understand it," Stevens said, "the campaign expenses were presented to the bank and paid by the bank. The bank then charged the account. Is that correct?"

"That's correct," Lance replied. But, he added the bank, a family-owned institution in Calhoun, of which he was president, "suffered no risk and no loss," because he repaid all of the overdrafts created in his account by this practice.

"The bank kept meticulous records about those expenses and then submitted them to the campaign ctmmittee," he said.

Lance said the Justice Department has ruled there was "no illegality involved" in the practice under discussion.

"We're all politicians here," Stevens replied, "and that's the neatest way to handle a campaign expenditure account that I've ever heard of."

Ordeal still haunts threat, crash victim

by PAUL GORES

With her right leg in a cast and traces of cuts still showing on her forehead and arms, Denise Duignan returned home this week.

She had spent more than two weeks at Alexian Brothers Medical Center recovering from serious injuries she suffered when her car was demolished as she tried to escape a would-be assailant on Schaumburg Road.

Denise has been overwhelmed to the point of tears, her mother said, by the number of friends and strangers who called or wrote to wish her well.

Their genereosity and prayers have helped ease the pain and trauma of what happened to her on the morning of Aug. 29, her mother said, but they have not erased the ordeal from her mind.

"IT DOESN'T bother me too much during the day," Denise said, "but at night . . ."

What she remembers is her assailant handing her a note stating, "I've got a gun," through her partly opened car window while she was stopped for a traffic light at Salem Drive.

She recalls her fear as his right hand grabbed the steering wheel when she tried to speed away.

She recalls sounding the horn while struggling for control of the car with the stranger as he was dragged a half-mile to Braintree Drive, where the vehicle finally smashed into a utility pole.

Denise Duignan

It is all part of a recurring nightmare.

THOUGH HER hips and right knee were broken in the crash, Denise managed to crawl out of the wreck and across two ditches to get help. She said she recalls very little of what happened after the crash.

"I remember crawling, but I don't know for how long," she said. "I saw my blouse and slacks were covered with blood. When I was crawling I could feel the blood in my eyes."

Police told her mother, Jean Garcia, 1522 Chatham Ln., Schaumburg, it was a miracle that she was able to crawl away in her condition and get to a doorstep on nearby Tybourn Lane to cry for help.

"I think she started realizing what kind of pain she was in when she got to the hospital," Mrs. Garcia said.

Both Denise and her alleged assailant, Everett D. Correa of Arlington Heights, were taken that morning to Alexian Brothers Medical Center in serious condition. Correa was found near the scene of the crash with a broken arm, the result of his high-speed, half-mile ride dangling from the car widdow.

THE CAST WAS put on Denise's leg Sept. 7 — her 20th birthday — and her mother said it is not known how long it will have to stay on.

She said it also is uncertain whether Denise's injuries permanently will hamper her walking.

"We've just got to wait and see what the doctor says and what else turns up," Mrs. Garcia said. "She can't really plan anything right now."

Denise spends most of the day in bed, though she is able to walk on crutches. The cuts on her forehead are healing well.

She was a waitress at the Raleigh House Ltd. in Barrington. She was coming home from work the morning she was attacked.

Denise said she is "living day by day now" now, taking medication to ease the pain and trying to forget the ordeal each night as she goes to sleep.

BOTH SHE AND her mother said the letters and cards she received while in the hospital were an emotional boost.

"I couldn't believe it, getting letters

Arlington Heights Police Capt. M. J. English said the two suspects "have tentatively been identified and are being sought."

One suspect was described as a white man between 5-foot-4 and 5-foot-9, 160 pounds, blond hair and green eyes and wearing a "bloody T-shirt that he's probably discarded by now," police said.

The other suspect is between 27 and 28 years old, police said, with a dark complexion and wearing a blue jacket and blue trousers.

Suspect found unfit to stand trial

NORMAL, Ill. (UPI) — A judge Friday found David Wittmer unfit to stand trail for the 1975 beating death of an Illinois State University coed.

Police said Wittmer at one time confessed to salying Carol Rothstad, 20, of Elk Grove Village, on the ISU campus. He now denies committing the murder.

Wittmer, 40, has been in and out of mental institutions for 20 years. McLean County Circuit Court Judge James Keneck, after hearing testimony from two psychiatrists, said Wittmer was unable to understand the proceedings and therefore was unable to help in his own defense.

Keneck remanded Witmer to the custody of the Illinois Mental Health Dept. and ordered another competency hearing in 90 days.

Daily Herald leads field at IPA meeting

The Daily Herald received more awards than any other daily newspaper in the 1977 contest of the Illinois Press Assn. The awards, including three first place plaques, were given at the association's annual meeting Friday in Decatur.

The Daily Herald's women's department received first place recognition for a section with eye appeal and human interest.

"Good graphics and a nice, open-look" earned The Daily Herald first place in the typography and make-up category.

Craig Camp's photograph of an auto crash victim received a first place award for news photography. The judges said the photograph was an "excellent job with good composition, and excellent technically."

In addition, The Daily Herald won second place in the category of general excellence, covering all phases of the newspaper product.

Third place awards were won in the following categories: illustrative material, sports photography and advertising excellence.

Honorable mention was earned by The Daily Herald's entries for feature photography, news story, sports column, feature story and best special section.

In addition, four awards were won by The Daily Herald's sister newspaper, the weekly Mundelein Herald.

Zoo's problem is de-splaying clumsy giraffe

WINCHESTER, England (UPI) — What do you do with a one-ton, 18-foot giraffe who did the splits and can't get up? Fly him up? Float him up? Haul him up?

Keepers discovered Victor, a 15-year-old giraffe at Marwell Park Zoo, spreadeagled in his compound Thursday.

"He may have been trying to mate one of the females and slipped," said zoo owner John Knowles.

THE FIRE BRIGADE was called in to help, but their attempts to raise him by slipping air bags under his body and pumping them up failed.

When Victor's picture appeared in morning newspapers, animal-loving Britons responded by the dozens with suggestions about how to get Victor back on his feet.

But zookeepers vetoed the offer to lift him by helicopter because "he will thrash his legs and neck about and possibly cause himself serious damage."

They said he couldn't be floated to his feet because giraffes don't like water.

AND HAULING him up by crane could break his ribs.

"Our vet says the best thing is to leave him alone and hope he gets enough strength to stand on his own," Knowles said.

He said Victor was being given a glucose drip and energy-producing drugs, and had eaten some foliage from a bucket offered him by a woman perched on a fireman's shoulders.

"He is still rather weak and the excitement yesterday of having the firemen, reporters and photographers around took a lot out of him," one of Victor's keepers said.

FOUR-YEAR-OLD Philip Wietrick of Pelion, S.C., had his education cut short because of his long hair. Philip was sent home from Grace Christian School in West Columbia, S.C. with a note from his kindergarten teacher saying his curly hair violates the school dress code which requires the ears to be fully visible.

Track worker dies from stabbing

Robert R. Scroggins, room 43, dormitory 2, was pronounced dead at 6:40 p.m. at Northwest Community Hospital.

A witness said Scroggins and two other men ran from the dormitory room late Friday afternoon. Scroggins fell on the sidewalk with blood coming from his stomach and chest, the witness said, and the other two men ran north from the dormitories.

Arlington Heights Police Capt. M. J. English said the two suspects "have tentatively been identified and are being sought."

One suspect was described as a white man between 5-foot-4 and 5-foot-9, 160 pounds, blond hair and green eyes and wearing a "bloody T-shirt that he's probably discarded by now," police said.

The other suspect is between 27 and 28 years old, police said, with a dark complexion and wearing a blue jacket and blue trousers.

Suspect found unfit to stand trial

Police said Wittmer at one time confessed to salying Carol Rothstad, 20, of Elk Grove Village, on the ISU campus. He now denies committing the murder.

Wittmer, 40, has been in and out of mental institutions for 20 years. McLean County Circuit Court Judge James Keneck, after hearing testimony from two psychiatrists, said Wittmer was unable to understand the proceedings and therefore was unable to help in his own defense.

Keneck remanded Witmer to the custody of the Illinois Mental Health Dept. and ordered another competency hearing in 90 days.

Dissident Episcopalians pick bishop in major split

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Dissident Episcopalians Friday selected a bishop in the first major split from the 2.8 million-member mother church over ordination of women priests and revisions in the 1928 Book of Common Prayer.

The Rev. Canon James D. Mote, rector of St. Mary's Church in Denver, was chosen to head the Diocese of the Holy Trinity. His church was the first to secede after the 1976 Episcopal General Convention at Minneapolis.

Leaders of the three-day Congress of Concerned Churchmen presented to the 1,800 delegates a statement urging continued efforts to re-establish traditional beliefs and form a continuing church structure.

THE STATEMENT presented at the closing session said: "In this gathering witness of Anglicans and Episcopalians, we continue to be what we are. We do nothing new. We form no new body, but continue as Anglicans and Episcopalians."

The statement called for a convention "at the earliest appropriate time" to draft laws by which their new structure, provisionally titled the Anglican Church in North America, can be governed.

The election of Mote as bishop of one of two newly formed dioceses was one of few firm steps taken at the conference called primarily to rally opponents of the liberalization of Episcopal standards approved at the Minneapolis convention.

"I feel very flattered by the honor given by my brother priests," said Mote, whose parish was joined by 15 others in breaking away from the church.

PRESIDING BISHOP John M. Allin, who came to the conference but was denied permission to speak, has fought the move towards schism and sought further talks with the conservatives to try to resolve differences.

The CCC statement urged those wishing to continue traditional beliefs to break ties with the Episcopal Church and influence more congregations to secede.

A key problem for dissidents seeking to form a new church structure has been the reluctance of bishops to come forward and lead the laity. The necessary three bishops required to consecrate new bishops in the line of apostolic succession have not declared their readiness to make a formal break.

Fighters' fete honors the heavies

by TONI GINNETTI

Ringside. Holiday Inn, Rosemont.

Assembled are some of the great names in American boxing history, names from the 40s and 50s whose bouts are trivia on the tips of fight fans' tongues.

Names like Lou Ambers, lightweight champion in the late 1930s, Tony DeMarco, lightweight champ in 1954, Joey Maxim, light heavy weight from 1949-1951.

They look different now, far from the form of their days in the ring, but Friday night they drew just as big a crowd as they had 20 years ago.

Some 2,300 were on hand to honor them and their fellow fighters at a premiere fund-raising dinner for the Italian-American Boxing Hall of Fame.

AN ALMOST regal turnout crowded the lobby, hallways and banquet room of the hotel. Many were looking for "name" heavy-hitters, particularly Sylvester (Rocky) Stallone, the movie star whose name is the greatest thing in boxing since Muhammad Ali.

But by well into the evening, Rocky hadn't showed and promoters of the dinner were mum about the scheduled appearance of the celluloid slugger.

No matter. The assemblage of Italian-Americans seemed to be enjoying the fete that was scheduled to last to 1 a.m. today.

Other dignitaries had come, including U.S. representatives Henry Hyde, R-6th, Marty Russo, D-3rd, and Frank Annunzio, D-11th. Gov. James R. Thompson also was scheduled to appear before the night's end.

THE DINNER was held to induct into the Boxing Hall of Fame five past greats including Sammy Angott, lightweight champion in the early 1940s; Carmen Basilio, welterweight champion in the mid 1950s; Jake LaMotta, middleweight champion from 1949-1951; Willie Pep, featherweight champ of the 1940s; and Rocky Graziano, middleweight champ of the 1940s.

Graziano could not attend the dinner but the bally-hoo that met the other champs made Graziano's absence hardly noticeable.

The event was a kind of kickoff for the Hall of Fame, founder George Randazzo said. A building has yet to be constructed although a location will be selected in the Chicago area, he said.

THE FOUNDERS were looking for monetary support Friday night and they got it. Red, white and green banners adorned the lobby and T-shirts promoting the Hall of Fame were selling for $5 each along with posters for $1 and bumper stickers for 50 cents.

They were doing a brisk business as were the raffle ticket sellers hawking chances to win a new Chevrolet Vega donated by Celozzi-Ettelson, Elmhurst.

But while the drinks were flowing and the T-shirts changing hands, the VIP's in the special cocktail reception were delighting in the presence of boxing's history makers.

"Let's bring forth the champeens," promoter Ben Bentley announced. "We're going to line these champeens up." And they reminisced while the flash bulbs flashed.

And the background melody was the theme from "The Godfather."

Chiefs deny Panama pact bugging

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Intelligence Committee Friday met in secret session reportedly to discuss rumors Panamanian negotiators had blackmailed American representatives into a canal treaty after discovering the treaty talks had been bugged.

Ellsworth Bunker, one of the U.S. co-negotiators of the treaty, appeared before the committee for three hours.

Chairman Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, said the committee will meet again early next week to hear from CIA Director Stansfield Turner, currently out of the country, and Bunker's co-negotiator, Sol Lindwitz.

Both American and Panamanian officials issued denials of the CBS Morning News story.

ACTING CIA Director John Blake, questioned at a suburban convention of former intelligence officers, said "When I left the office this morning . . . I knew nothing about the matter."

Bunker said as he entered the committee hearing room there was no truth "whatsoever" to reported coercion of the U.S. officials.

Increased support for Lance: Powell

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter's spokesman said Friday there has been a dramatic jump in communications to the White House in support of Budget Director Bert Lance.

Press Sec. Jody Powell also said Carter has not made a decision on whether to retain Lance.

"He and Bert have a decision to make," Powell said.

UP TO NOON Friday, Powell told his daily briefing, there had been 130 telephone calls during the day in support of Lance and 25 opposed, or a favorable percentage of 84 per cent.

On Thursday, Powell said, 116 calls, or 72 per cent, were in support of Lance and 45 were opposed; on Wednesday, 11 calls, or 23 per cent, in support and 36 calls opposed; and on Tuesday, 74 calls, or 36 per cent, in support and 132 opposed.

Powell said that during the week ending last Friday, 400 letters and cards, or 20 per cent, were in support of Lance and 1,599 were opposed.

Powell said there was no orchestration by the White House of the expression of public opinion on the Lance matter. He also said he was not aware that Carter's pollster, Patrick Cadell, was doing any sampling on the matter.

"I'm not aware the President has decided one way or the other," Powell said. "He and Bert have a decision to make which he hopes and expects to be acceptable to the people of this country inasmuch as that they feel he has indeed tried to do what he felt was the right and proper thing."

Powell said Carter had watched replays of at least parts of the Senate hearings.

Correa is scheduled to go on trial in the Schaumburg branch of Cook County Circuit Court on Sept. 21.

According to the Cook County Sheriff's Dept., Correa currently is free on bail. When he was released from the hospital Tuesday, he was arrested by Schaumburg Police for aggravated battery. He posted 10 per cent of his $20,000 bond and was released.

He then was picked up by Cook County Sheriff's Police for an Ohio parole violation. A public information spokesman for Cook County said he posted bond again and was released. If he is convicted of aggravated battery, Correa could be sentenced to from 1 to 10 years in prison.

AFTER THE TRIAL Denise and her family hope to put the incident behind them and look forward to her recovery.

Prison hard on Watergate figures

Haldeman and Mitchell want out

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Watergate prisoners H. R. Haldeman and John Mitchell asked Friday that their terms be reduced — Mitchell saying he may need a hip transplant and Haldeman charging Richard Nixon confessed guilt during television interviews.

Mitchell's lawyers said in a petition that prison X-rays disclosed the former Attorney General suffers degenerative arthritis of his right hip and may need the joint replaced surgically with an artificial one.

Haldeman's attorney asked U.S. District Judge John Sirica to cut Haldeman's 30-month to eight year sentence on grounds Nixon made a "confession of guilt" in his television interviews with David Frost.

"NIXON ADMITTED in a series of Frost-arranged broadcasts that he was the principal actor in the obstruction of justice," attorney John Wilson said.

Mitchell's attorneys William Hundley and Plato Chacheris also said his confinement is having a destructive effect on Mitchell's finances and on his family, particularly on a "daughter of sensitive years."

Both Mitchell and Haldeman, once Nixon's top White House aide, were convicted Jan. 1, 1975 of perjury, conspiracy and obstruction of justice in the scandal that drove Nixon from office. The two received similar sentences.

On Haldeman's behalf, Wilson argued Nixon "has proclaimed to the world that he ordered the destruction of tapes which would have incriminated him, but Haldeman omitted to do so.

"NIXON'S STATEMENT is a clear confession of guilt and, moreover, he brags about a desire to destroy incriminating evidence and thus, for a second time, obstruct justice."

Wilson asked Sirica to reduce Haldeman's sentence to the time already served. The present sentence amounts to Haldeman's "destruction" while Nixon is "wrapped in an immunizing pardon and his pockets are lined with $600,000," the money he was supposed to have received for the Frost interviews, Wilson said.

Haldeman began serving the sentence at the Lompoc, Calif., open prison on June 21 and will become eligible for parole on Dec. 20, 1979.

Mitchell's attorneys did not ask for any specified sentence reduction. Their petition said "The Watergate tragedy has had a traumatic and devastating effect on his family life."

Mitchell entered the Maxwell AFB minimum security facility in Montgomery, Ala. on June 22.

Wilson said Haldeman works seven days a week in the institution's sewage plant, and spends the rest of his time exercising to keep in shape and "trying to while away the hours" reading or talking. "Despite his education, training and experience, his time is totally wasted."

"He has experienced the indignity, shame, horror, fear, disgust and all the other overwhelming emotions that assail a thinking man who is required to enter prison," Wilson said. "Society has had its retribution."

Dissident Episcopalians pick bishop in major split

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Dissident Episcopalians Friday selected a bishop in the first major split from the 2.8 million-member mother church over ordination of women priests and revisions in the 1928 Book of Common Prayer.

The Rev. Canon James D. Mote, rector of St. Mary's Church in Denver, was chosen to head the Diocese of the Holy Trinity. His church was the first to secede after the 1976 Episcopal General Convention at Minneapolis.

Leaders of the three-day Congress of Concerned Churchmen presented to the 1,800 delegates a statement urging continued efforts to re-establish traditional beliefs and form a continuing church structure.

THE STATEMENT presented at the closing session said: "In this gathering witness of Anglicans and Episcopalians, we continue to be what we are. We do nothing new. We form no new body, but continue as Anglicans and Episcopalians."

The statement called for a convention "at the earliest appropriate time" to draft laws by which their new structure, provisionally titled the Anglican Church in North America, can be governed.

The election of Mote as bishop of one of two newly formed dioceses was one of few firm steps taken at the conference called primarily to rally opponents of the liberalization of Episcopal standards approved at the Minneapolis convention.

"I feel very flattered by the honor given by my brother priests," said Mote, whose parish was joined by 15 others in breaking away from the church.

PRESIDING BISHOP John M. Allin, who came to the conference but was denied permission to speak, has fought the move towards schism and sought further talks with the conservatives to try to resolve differences.

The CCC statement urged those wishing to continue traditional beliefs to break ties with the Episcopal Church and influence more congregations to secede.

A key problem for dissidents seeking to form a new church structure has been the reluctance of bishops to come forward and lead the laity. The necessary three bishops required to consecrate new bishops in the line of apostolic succession have not declared their readiness to make a formal break.

Fighters' fete honors the heavies

by TONI GINNETTI

Ringside. Holiday Inn, Rosemont.

Assembled are some of the great names in American boxing history, names from the 40s and 50s whose bouts are trivia on the tips of fight fans' tongues.

Names like Lou Ambers, lightweight champion in the late 1930s, Tony DeMarco, lightweight champ in 1954, Joey Maxim, light heavy weight from 1949-1951.

They look different now, far from the form of their days in the ring, but Friday night they drew just as big a crowd as they had 20 years ago.

Some 2,300 were on hand to honor them and their fellow fighters at a premiere fund-raising dinner for the Italian-American Boxing Hall of Fame.

AN ALMOST regal turnout crowded the lobby, hallways and banquet room of the hotel. Many were looking for "name" heavy-hitters, particularly Sylvester (Rocky) Stallone, the movie star whose name is the greatest thing in boxing since Muhammad Ali.

But by well into the evening, Rocky hadn't showed and promoters of the dinner were mum about the scheduled appearance of the celluloid slugger.

No matter. The assemblage of Italian-Americans seemed to be enjoying the fete that was scheduled to last to 1 a.m. today.

Other dignitaries had come, including U.S. representatives Henry Hyde, R-6th, Marty Russo, D-3rd, and Frank Annunzio, D-11th. Gov. James R. Thompson also was scheduled to appear before the night's end.

THE DINNER was held to induct into the Boxing Hall of Fame five past greats including Sammy Angott, lightweight champion in the early 1940s; Carmen Basilio, welterweight champion in the mid 1950s; Jake LaMotta, middleweight champion from 1949-1951; Willie Pep, featherweight champ of the 1940s; and Rocky Graziano, middleweight champ of the 1940s.

Graziano could not attend the dinner but the bally-hoo that met the other champs made Graziano's absence hardly noticeable.

The event was a kind of kickoff for the Hall of Fame, founder George Randazzo said. A building has yet to be constructed although a location will be selected in the Chicago area, he said.

THE FOUNDERS were looking for monetary support Friday night and they got it. Red, white and green banners adorned the lobby and T-shirts promoting the Hall of Fame were selling for $5 each along with posters for $1 and bumper stickers for 50 cents.

They were doing a brisk business as were the raffle ticket sellers hawking chances to win a new Chevrolet Vega donated by Celozzi-Ettelson, Elmhurst.

But while the drinks were flowing and the T-shirts changing hands, the VIP's in the special cocktail reception were delighting in the presence of boxing's history makers.

"Let's bring forth the champeens," promoter Ben Bentley announced. "We're going to line these champeens up." And they reminisced while the flash bulbs flashed.

And the background melody was the theme from "The Godfather."

Chiefs deny Panama pact bugging

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Intelligence Committee Friday met in secret session reportedly to discuss rumors Panamanian negotiators had blackmailed American representatives into a canal treaty after discovering the treaty talks had been bugged.

Ellsworth Bunker, one of the U.S. co-negotiators of the treaty, appeared before the committee for three hours.

Chairman Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, said the committee will meet again early next week to hear from CIA Director Stansfield Turner, currently out of the country, and Bunker's co-negotiator, Sol Lindwitz.

Both American and Panamanian officials issued denials of the CBS Morning News story.

John Prine, 2, and his brother, Scott, 4, died at Condell Memorial Hospital in Libertyville. They had been at the hospital since the fire Monday night at the family's Round Lake Beach home. Their mother, Carol Prine, 22, originally was charged with two counts of attempted murder and one count of arson. Police said the attempted murder charges probably will be replaced with murder charges. Mrs. Prine was being held in the Lake County Jail in lieu of $75,000 bond.

Girl starts treatment at Wyler

An experimental drug was administered in Chicago Friday to a 17-year-old Colorado girl who suffers from a rare and usually fatal brain disease. Dr. Peter P. Huttenlocher, chief of the pediatric neurology department at Wyler Children's Hospital, said the experimental drug isoprinosine was given to Linda Madden, Colorado Springs. Linda has been suffering from subacute sclerosing pancephalitis since she was 10. The disease attacks the brain and nervous system, causing loss of muscular and intellectual functions. Wyler is one of the few hospitals in the nation licensed to experiment with the drug in treating the disease. Huttenlocher said 10 persons have received the drug since 1974, but it worked on only three of them. Persons reading newspaper accounts of Linda's illness and her family's inability to pay for the plane fare to Chicago for the experimental drug financed the trip for Linda and her mother.

Judge delays Hill sentencing

Cook County Circuit Court Judge John J. Moran has postponed until Oct. 18 the sentencing of convicted murderer William R. Thompson signs ban on redlining

Gov. James R. Thompson Friday signed legislation outlawing geographic discrimination or "redlining" in writing of homeowners insurance policies. The bill (S1102) prohibits any company from refusing to write an insurance policy for a homeowner solely because of the location of the property to be insured. Redlining has been cited as one factor encouraging changes in neighborhood patterns. The bill was sponsored by Sen. John Merlo, D-Chicago, and handled in the House by Rep. William A. Marovitz, D-Chicago. It was drafted by the Illinois Department of Insurance. The bill will not in itself cure the redlining problem, the governor said. "However, I think it is clear that the General Assembly and I are both committed to continue working to eliminate redlining wherever it exists."

Reum named to racing board

Gov. James R. Thompson has appointed Lucy Reum chairwoman of the Illinois Racing Bord, making her the country's first female chief of a state racing board. Mrs. Reum, an Oak Park resident, was appointed to the board in 1973 by then Gov. Daniel Walker. She said selection of 1978 racing dates will be the first major job the racing board must handle under her stewardship. "Mrs. Reum has been a hardworking member of the racing board for four years and has shown outstanding leadership as acting chairman for the past four months," Thompson said Thursday in making the appointment. "She deserves the job permanently."

Carving is the apple of her eye

Sharon Maynor is quite a cut-up. Armed with a 95-cent paring knife, the 37-year-old Elkville housewife carved 298 inches of apple peelings in three minutes Thursday to win the national apple peeling contest at the Murphysboro Apple Festival. Mrs. Maynor topped by 10 inches the cuttings of Mrs. Brenda Harrison, Murphysboro. She also had the longest peel of the 12 contestants, a cutting 32 inches long. Mrs. Maynor's sister, Irene Shewmaker, Vergennes, took home the trophy in 1975 and 1976 and her 1975 record of 476 inches still stands. Mrs. Shewmaker declined to compete this year, however, saying she wanted to retire as a champion. "There's no way I could have beaten Irene if she had entered this year," Mrs. Maynor said.

'More places needed for voter signup'

Suburban Cook County residents are being shortchanged on opportunities to register to vote, County Comr. Carl R. Hansen and Friday.

"The residents of Chicago enjoy the opportunity to register in their precinct polling place prior to both the primary and general elections. Suburbanites get such an opportunity only prior to the general election. This is discriminatory and unfair to suburban citizens," he said.

Hansen said he would introduce a rsolution at the county board meeting Monday to establish precinct registration in the suburbs before primary elections.

COUNTY CLERK Stanley T. Kusper said the issue is "purely budgetary." It would cost several hundred thousand dollars to register voters in their precincts before the primary, he said.

In addition to missing primary precinct registration, suburban voters are canvassed only once a year while a canvass is held in Chicago twice a year, Hansen said.

"The canvass results in more accurate voter registration lists, which in turn decrease the time a voter must spend in the polling place," Hansen said.

"In even numbered years, when major elecetions are held, including those for county office, a better opportunity to register is provided for residents of Chicago than for suburbanites," Hansen said.

Kusper said he proposed primary precinct regeistration for the suburbs in the past but that it was judged too costly by the county board. He said he may again recommend the registration in the 1978-79 county clerk budget proposal.

Mikva to discuss SST with Carter

Huttenlocher, chief of the pediatric neurology department at Wyler Children's Hospital, said the experimental drug isoprinosine was given to Linda Madden, Colorado Springs. Linda has been suffering from subacute sclerosing pancephalitis since she was 10. The disease attacks the brain and nervous system, causing loss of muscular and intellectual functions. Wyler is one of the few hospitals in the nation licensed to experiment with the drug in treating the disease. Huttenlocher said 10 persons have received the drug since 1974, but it worked on only three of them. Persons reading newspaper accounts of Linda's illness and her family's inability to pay for the plane fare to Chicago for the experimental drug financed the trip for Linda and her mother.

Hotline for truck complaints

The Illinois State Police Friday inaugurated a hotline for motorists who wish to complain or ask questions about trucks or truckers. Tyrone Fahner, director of the Illinois Dept. of Law Enforcement, said the hotline is part of a plan to better enforce traffic laws and load limits. Persons with any information or questions about truckers should call 217-782-7762.

Judge delays Hill sentencing

Cook County Circuit Court Judge John J. Moran has postponed until Oct. 18 the sentencing of convicted murderer William R. Hill, who could become the first person executed under the state's new capital punishment law. Hill was convicted Aug. 13 of killing pharmacists Allen Ziperstein, 61, and Robert Fields, 47, on contract from a dentist. The jury which convicted Hill also recommended he be put to death. Hill's attorney, William O'Malley, asked for the delay so he can prepare a motion for review by a three-judge appeals panel.

Trial set for maid held in killing

Merri Tennyson, 55, Elgin, accused of beating to death her 84-year-old employer, will stand trial Oct. 5, Kane County Circuit Court Judge John Krause ruled. Miss Tennyson, who worked as a maid, is accused of killing Mabel Beljean last November. She was found incompetent to stand trial last January, but was judged fit during a hearing this summer.

Thompson signs ban on redlining

Gov. James R. Thompson Friday signed legislation outlawing geographic discrimination or "redlining" in writing of homeowners insurance policies. The bill (S1102) prohibits any company from refusing to write an insurance policy for a homeowner solely because of the location of the property to be insured. Redlining has been cited as one factor encouraging changes in neighborhood patterns. The bill was sponsored by Sen. John Merlo, D-Chicago, and handled in the House by Rep. William A. Marovitz, D-Chicago. It was drafted by the Illinois Department of Insurance. The bill will not in itself cure the redlining problem, the governor said. "However, I think it is clear that the General Assembly and I are both committed to continue working to eliminate redlining wherever it exists."

Reum named to racing board

Gov. James R. Thompson has appointed Lucy Reum chairwoman of the Illinois Racing Bord, making her the country's first female chief of a state racing board. Mrs. Reum, an Oak Park resident, was appointed to the board in 1973 by then Gov. Daniel Walker. She said selection of 1978 racing dates will be the first major job the racing board must handle under her stewardship. "Mrs. Reum has been a hardworking member of the racing board for four years and has shown outstanding leadership as acting chairman for the past four months," Thompson said Thursday in making the appointment. "She deserves the job permanently."

Carving is the apple of her eye

Sharon Maynor is quite a cut-up. Armed with a 95-cent paring knife, the 37-year-old Elkville housewife carved 298 inches of apple peelings in three minutes Thursday to win the national apple peeling contest at the Murphysboro Apple Festival. Mrs. Maynor topped by 10 inches the cuttings of Mrs. Brenda Harrison, Murphysboro. She also had the longest peel of the 12 contestants, a cutting 32 inches long. Mrs. Maynor's sister, Irene Shewmaker, Vergennes, took home the trophy in 1975 and 1976 and her 1975 record of 476 inches still stands. Mrs. Shewmaker declined to compete this year, however, saying she wanted to retire as a champion. "There's no way I could have beaten Irene if she had entered this year," Mrs. Maynor said.

850 strike Allis-Chalmers

About 850 employes of the Allis-Chambers engine division plant in Harvey went on strike Friday. The employes, members of Local 1091 of the United Steel Workers of America, rejected a company contract offer Thursday night. The old contract expired Thursday. Paul Marconi, spokesman for the union, said there are "no future plans for negotiations." The plant manufactures parts for aircraft engines.

'More places needed for voter signup'

Suburban Cook County residents are being shortchanged on opportunities to register to vote, County Comr. Carl R. Hansen and Friday.

"The residents of Chicago enjoy the opportunity to register in their precinct polling place prior to both the primary and general elections. Suburbanites get such an opportunity only prior to the general election. This is discriminatory and unfair to suburban citizens," he said.

Hansen said he would introduce a rsolution at the county board meeting Monday to establish precinct registration in the suburbs before primary elections.

COUNTY CLERK Stanley T. Kusper said the issue is "purely budgetary." It would cost several hundred thousand dollars to register voters in their precincts before the primary, he said.

In addition to missing primary precinct registration, suburban voters are canvassed only once a year while a canvass is held in Chicago twice a year, Hansen said.

"The canvass results in more accurate voter registration lists, which in turn decrease the time a voter must spend in the polling place," Hansen said.

"In even numbered years, when major elecetions are held, including those for county office, a better opportunity to register is provided for residents of Chicago than for suburbanites," Hansen said.

Kusper said he proposed primary precinct regeistration for the suburbs in the past but that it was judged too costly by the county board. He said he may again recommend the registration in the 1978-79 county clerk budget proposal.

Mikva to discuss SST with Carter

U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th, will meet with President Carter Tuesday morning to express his opposition to supersonic jet aircraft landing at O'Hare Airport.

With Mikva will be U.S. Rep. Leo Ryan, a San Francisco Democrat, and several Congressmen from the New York City area. Sec. of Transportation Brock Adams also is expected to attend.

The United Staes is nearing the end of a test period of the Anglo-French supersonic jet Concorde at Washington's Dulles Airport. And Carter reportedly is considering landing rights for Concorde at other airports including O'Hare.

Mikva, whose 10th Congressional district includes Des Plaines, Park Ridge and other communities near O'Hare, is opposed to higher levels of jet noise associated with the SST.

BIG, SMILING Bob Albrecht stands next to the bulldozer he uses to demoish buildings such as the old Des Plaines City Hall, 1412 Miner St., which Albrecht Enterprises now is tearing down. Albrecht salvages as much as he can from a building, sometimes getting $8,000 to $9,000 through the sale of marble, steel, light fixtures, copper-pipe tubing and here, old jail cells.

This man wrecks havoc in city, town

by THOMAS LEE

Meet big Bob Albrecht, a cowboy on a bulldozer. When he lassoes a building, its walls come tumbling down — under 50,000 pounds of Caterpiller.

Albrecht's friends call him a homewrecker. He is that. And he is a tavern wrecker, an office wrecker, a store wrecker. These days he is a library wrecker, jail wrecker and city hall wrecker. The bronco he is busting is the old Des Plaines City Hall to make room for a parking lot.

Once, when he was wrecking an old tavern in Elk Grove Village, he fought a battle against rats, and barely won.

"There was this big pile of rubbish," Albrecht began as he took a breather the other day. "The place used to be a tavern, and in the past few months the people had pitched their garbage out back.

"TO LOOK at the pile, you'd never suspect anything. Just a pile of junk and debris. So I started pushing my bulldozer into the pile and then I heard this strange squealing noise.

"I looked over the side of my machine and saw literally a sea of rats. Now, one or two rats, I expected. But this was a sea of rats. They were everywhere. They were coming out of the bucket, and the bulldozer's tracks were crushing them, one after another.

"And they were loud. Geeze, they were load. They were so loud, you could hear them squealing over the bulldozer.

"Suddenly one of them jumped out the bucket and ran up the draft arm — the arm of the bulldozer bucket. He ran rightup the machine and jumped in my lap.

"I KNEW HE was going to bite me. But d'you think I could grab him? I couldn't do anything. Then he jumped on my arm. It iooked like his teech were bigger than a shark's. They weren't, of course, but it looked like it. Then he jumped off.

"Well, this machine has two speeds. A high speed and a low. It was in low, and I jammed it into high. And I plowed right through that pile as fast as this thing can go. It lasted a couple of seconds. But geeze, it seemed like four days."

Then there was the time when Albrecht tore down a building with a lady inside. Sort of, anyway.

It was only five months ago, down on Ashland Avenue. The owner had warned the woman, but she wouldn't move, Albrecht recalled.

"FINALLY HE told her to get out. She said she couldn't find a place, and asked for one more week. She got down on her knees to ask. So the owner said, 'OK, one more week, and meanwhile we'll start work at the other end of the block.'

"The week came and went, and the woman was still living there. So the owner said work will start tomorrow. 'We'll start with the front proch and the tree out front.' And so the next morning, I got there, and no one answered the door, so I figured she was gone.

"So I started up my machine and pushed off the front proch. And she came out the back door yelling and screaming that she was still inside." As it turned out, she moved. Right away.

One time one of his employes stayed inside a building as it was wanted to see wnat it's like." The emwrecked, Albrecht said. "He said he ploye, John Huegge, 34, of Des Plaines, says now he'll never do it again, Albrecht said.

ALBRECHT, 33, grew up in Des Plaines but now lives in Chicago. His company, Albrecht Enterprises, has torn down "hundreds" of buildings in the Northwest suburbs. "I made way for Superblock," he said, pointing across the tracks to Des Plaines' downtown redevelopment project.

Albrecht put his elbow on the Caterpiller bucket. "I think this thing is a part of me."

He said he takes care of the huge machine by himself, mainly because Caterpiller charges hundreds just to look at a mechanical problem. "I've rebuilt both its engins (the main engine is so big it is started by a smaller engine), added a new bucket, new tracks,everything."

How does Albrecht demolish a building?

"TAKE THAT HOUSE over there," he replied. "First I'd take off the porch and the little room next to it. Then I'd drive my machine into those two windows and push the first floor into the basement. Then I'd go over to the other side. I'd grab a hold of the house and turn it upside down. There's no other way to put it."

But that's a house, not a building the size of Des Plaines' old city hall. Moreover, the building, which is coming rown now, is inches away —from the new city hall, which could make things difficult.

Someone asked Albrecht what he'd do if the old city hall fell the wrong way.

The trick, he explained, is to weaken more support beams on the side where you want the bulding to fall. If he goofs, he'll have to buy Des Plaines a new police station.

"I'm gonna put an airline ticket in my pocket," he said. "If it goes the wrong way, I'm getting out of here."

Report states Roosevelt Univ. is incompatible

A satellite campus for Roosevelt University is incompatiable with the Miner Junior High School area, according to a preliminary report of the Arlington Heights Environmental Control Commission.

The commission's final report on the environmental impact of locating university campus at Miner Junior High School, 1101 E. Miner St., or Thomas Junior High School, 303 E. Thomas St., is expected to be ready Tuesday.

Residents from both areas have opposed a campus at either school.

Dist. 25 school officials are expected to have a special meeting to review the ECC study before deciding whether to lease Miner Junior High School to Roosevelt University.

THE SCHOOL board agreed last month to close Miner Junior High School, rather than Thomas Junior High School, next spring because of declining enrollments.

The first draft of the long-awaited ECC report states that a satellite campus at either junior high school would create traffic safety problems, but that the total environmental impact would be greater in the Miner area because it is more of a residential neighborhood. Thomas Junior High School is along Arlington Heights Road, "which already experiences very heavy traffic, (so) it is anticipated that the impact would not be as extreme."

As many as 900 automobiles may be arriving at a satellite campus at one time, the ECC report states. "Additional traffic generated by use of the Miner site as a satellite campus by Roosevelt University would be detrimental to the Miner area and would adversely change its environmental character," the report states.

ROOSEVELT University's plans to have its suburban campus open days, evenings and weekends is too intense a use and "not compatible with the residential portion of the Miner area," according to the report.

Traffic would not cause a serious impact on the surrounding area if the satellite campus was located at Thomas and the character of the area would not be greatly changed, the report states.

However, it is likely cars would be parked along residential streets. While additional parking lots could be constructed at either school, they would not be sufficient, the report said.

being built between Evergreen and Dunton avenues.

"THE WHOLE PROBLEM is the railroad going through town and screwing everything up," said Ed Busse of Annen & Busse Realtors, 28 E. Northwest Hwy.

"You could remove the problem to a great extent by just moving the train station," said Don Welch of the Hair Directors Inc., 121 W. Wing St.

Village Engineer Allen J. Sander said the idea of moving the train station was not explored in the Metcalf & Eddy study because in the past people have opposed such a move. "But if that is now the will of the people of Arlington Heights, that may be the way things will go," he said.

Sander and Alstot said that the underpass could improve traffic circulation in the central business district. The underpass would allow the 70 commuter trains that stop daily in downtown Arlington Heights to stop farther east than they do now and allow crossings at both Vail and Dunton avenues to remain open during on and off loading operations.

Could take month to control cholera

Health officials Friday said it could take a month to control the cholera epidemic raging in the Middle East. New cases were reported in Israel, where an American teen-ager was quarantined, and in the Netherlands and the Gilbert Islands in the Pacific. Health ministers of all Arab countries called a meeting in Cairo for Sept. 24 to coordinate efforts to halt the spread of the disease before the peak season of the annual Moslem pilgrimmage to Mecca over the next two months. So far, at least 68 persons have died in Syria from cholera, where the epidemic is centered and where there are more than 2,100 confirmed cases.

Bail for jailed nun refused

A judge in Salisbury, Rhodesia, refused bail Friday for an American nun jailed for more than two weeks and said she was "a dedicated supporter of the terrorist cause" and a "grave security risk." "To her, the ends justify the means," Magistrate C.J. Stanley Stainer said of Sister Janice Ann McLaughlin, 35, of Pittsburgh. Sister Janice, who has been in Rhodesia only since May, has been accused of "spreading alarm and despondency" in this racially divided state, a charge that carries a maximum penalty of seven years' imprisonment. Prosecutors said Friday there "quite possibly" could be additional charges, however. The nun has worked with the Roman Catholic Commission for Justice and Peace in Rhodesia, a group founded by the bishops' conference here which has published a series of reports critical of the white regime.

PLO claims raid by Israelis

The Palestine Liberation Organization charged Israeli warplanes bombed the Lebanese border town of Khiam Friday. But military sources in Israel and other Palestinian groups denied the charge. A Lebanese reporter in the area said Palestinian guerrillas and Christian rightists were fighting the fiercest battle of their 10-month war for control of southern Lebanon. The PLO's WAFA news agency said Israeli pilots flew battle runs over Lebanon during the fighting. "There were air raids — the first in three years," a PLO spokesman said. "This is a serious escalation."

British seek missing missionary

Scotland Yard alerted Britain's air and seaports Friday to search for a young American Mormon missionary who disappeared in "most unusual circumstances" and possibly was kidnaped back to the United States. Detectives said they were hunting for Kirk Anderson, a 21-year-old missionary from Provo, Utah, who disappeared Wednesday after meeting a man who said he was interested in joining the Mormon Church. The young missionary had left the United States to escape "harassment" by a wealthy American woman, Scotland Yard said. Mormon officials said they believed Anderson's past problems had no connection with his work in England, however. Anderson's roommate, 21-year-old Kimball Smith, alerted police when the young missionary "mysteriously disappeared" after a meeting with the "convert," who called himself Bob Bosner.

El Salvador group kills rector

A terror squad made up of four men and a woman shot and killed the rector of the national university, in El Salvador, his chauffeur and a bodyguard Friday in an ambush about 50 yards from the school. Rector Carlos Alfaro Castillo, 46, one of the country's wealthiest men, and his chauffeur, Francisco Humberto Ramirez, where pronounced dead at the scene. Police said one of his bodyguards, Jorge Lopez Arqueta, died later in a hospital from wounds in the attack near El Salvador's largest university. The Farabundo Marti Popular Liberation Forces, which claimed responsibility for the killings, called Alfaro Castillo "the black servant of the oligarchy and the military regime."

Dayan flies to U.S. for talks

Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan Friday flew to the United States for crucial talks with President Carter on the deadlocked Middle East crisis. During his 24-hour stopover in Brussels, Dayan met with Israeli ambassadors before continuing on to New York and Washington, where disagreement over the presence of Palestinian representatives at the Geneva conference could cause problems in his talks with Carter and Sec. of State Cyrus Vance.

Report Carter makes Park offer

Official South Korean sources said Friday President Carter has offered businessman Tongsun Park criminal immunity if he returns to the United States for questioning in connection with the congressional influence-peddling scandal. But the sources said Park, the central figure in the South Korean bribery scandal, has rejected the offer reportedly conveyed to him in a letter Carter sent to South Korean President Park Chung-hee. The sources reiterated the Korean government's insistence that it would not force Park to return to the United States against his will. "The U.S. government has been steadfastly seeking Park's extradition under an offer of criminal immunity. The offer was included in a personal letter from President Carter to the Korean government," the sources said.

Quiz 2 in death of 4 children

Sheriff's deputies in Climax Springs, Mo., questioned two fishermen Friday in connection with the murder of four children shot to death in their rural farm home while their parents played bingo in a neighboring town. The two men were arrested by Missouri Water patrol officers while fishing on Lake of the Ozark near where the murders occurred Thursday night. Camden County sheriff's deputies refused to say if the two men were suspects in the case. Camden County Sheriff Larry Whitten said investigators had not established a motive in the Thursday night murders, but that it definitely wasnot robbery.

Judge halts Florida execution

U.S. District Judge William Stafford in Tallahassee, Fla., Friday halted the execution of convicted murderer John Spenkelink for an indefinite period. The stay brought an abrupt halt to plans to put Spenkelink to death in the electric chair at the state prison at 8:30 a.m. Monday. Stafford put no deadline on the stay, but said he will set a hearing soon on claims of Spenkelink's lawyers that persons who kill white victims are more likely to get the death penalty in Florida than those who murder black victims. Both Spenkelink, 28, and his victim are white. The stay came after nearly two hours of lawyer's arguments and after two state courts had ruled there were no legal grounds on which to delay the execution. The state Supreme Court earlier denied a stay in a 7-0 decision.

Limits on suburb growth urged to save older areas

Severe limits on suburban growth may be needed to save the older neighborhoods in the region, according to the first draft of a residential plan prepared by the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission.

The plan, which soon will be released for public hearings, says suburbs may have to limit the size of their roads, sewers and water mains to restrict growth.

Although the plan carefully avoids a recommendation on the matter, it indicates there will be severe problems if the region as a whole fails to adopt a growth policy.

"Past public policy in this area generally has accommodated private demand for new suburban development while at the same time doing whatever possible to halt older community decline," the report states.

"EVIDENCE NOW suggests that such a strategy is not possible — that new development in suburban locations is necessarily at the expense of older neighborhoods," the report continues.

Noting that the population of the regaion has not grown substantially since 1970, the plan says the 25,000 drop in Chicago's population indicates a heavy shift to the suburbs.

Moreover, the plan says the Illinois Bureau of the Budget suggests the region will fare less well than expected in competing with the sunbelt regions.

"If the region's total growth is to be even less, it may be expected that moe than ever new suburban housing and jobs will be at the expense of established areas within the region," the plan said.

THE REPORT says the region has two options — to restrict suburban growth to force conservation in older neighborhoods or to continue regional expansion.

"To pursue the conservation option would require a conscious effort by suburban communities to curtail growth," the report states, noting zoning would have to be tightened and communities would have to scale down their roads, sewers and water lines.

The plan calls for area leaders to begin talking about the matter so that a regional planning policy can be developed.

Noting that some middle-of-the-road options might appear more acceptable, the report warns that the compromises might "result in the worst of each of the essential choices."

State EPA says water conditions improving

A dramatic improvement in the quality of Illinois waters over the past three years indicates that pollution abatement programs are beginning to work, according to the acting director of the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency.

"The frequency of lead pollution violations in the Ohio River and its tributaries, for example, has decreased 96 per cent, and the frequency of dissolved oxygen pollution has decreased 70 per cent in the Mississippi River from Rock Island to St. Louis," said Michael P. Mauzy, EPA spokesman.

Mauzy said the mild drought this summer provided significant proof of an improvement in water quality.

"IT WAS EXPECTED that there would be more quality violations due to the resulting reduced capacity of the streams to dilute the waste load," he said. "In actuality, however, this expectation was not supported by field observations made on streams."

The state EPA periodically checks stream quality at 550 stations, not including Lake Michigan. Samples are taken either monthly or quarterly and analyzed.

Mauzy said there has also been a significant improvement in the levels of fecal coliforms, common indicators of human and animal waste contamination. The figures also drop considerably for ammonia and mercury.

While only 10 per cent of the state's waters were considered of highest quality from 1972-74, more than 50 per cent are in this category since 1975.

"What this means to the citizens of Illinois is that cleaner water will provide a better habitat for aquatic life, including fish and cleaner water means esthetically better water-based recreation such as swimming, canoeing, water skiing and hiking," Mauzy said. "Despite these improvements in the quality of water, there is little indiction that the sediment load in Illinois Rivers is decreasing."

Earl Tedrahn and his wife Paula have operated Tedrahn's Spot-Lite near Hanover Park for 33 years. His grandfather started it in 1888.

He's just 'keeping up with the times'

It used to be, Earl Tedrahn says, that all the merechandise was stored on shevles behind the counter.

A farmer from down the road would come in, talk a little bit and give him a list of supplies that he needed.

Then Tedrahn or his wife or his sister — whoever happened to be clerking at the time — would get it for him.

"But we went self-service in '51. We took the counters out," Tedrahn says. "We modernized to keep up with the times."

INDEED, THERE are signs of the times rising up around Tedrahn Spot-Lite, a small family-owned store at the corner of Gary and Army Trail roads in unincorporated Cloversale.

It is an old gray building a couple of miles east of Hanover Park where earth movers busily clear the way for more homes in the Woodlake Trails subdivision and just past the sign that advertises, "McDonalds — 2 Miles."

The truckers come and park off Army Trail next to the store in the mornings and grab a cup of coffee and a roll and maybe a little conversation. Or a farmer stops for a few gallons of gas. Or one of the new homeowners drops in for a loaf of bread and a few apples.

The floor is unpolished hardwood, and the store is cooled by a large fan in the back.

TEDRAHN'S SISTER Margaret works the cash register from behind the circular counter, and Tedrahn, toying with a fly swatter, talks about how he's spent most of his 66 years here.

His grandfather built the store in 1888, he says, and he's not really sure why he got into the business in the first place. He only knows that in 1900, he turned it over to his son, Tedrahn's father, and went off to Wheaton and an insurance business.

But, although he grew up behind the store, just like his kids have done, Tedrahn says he doesn't remember much about it as a child.

"There wasn't that much business in those days," he says. "There wasn't that much population around here then."

MEANWHILE, AS a student in high school, Tedrahn got interested in the saxophone, and when he got out he joined up with the Johnny Heller Orchestra, a little dance band that played all over the western states.

"Did that for 10, 12 years, something like that," he recalls. "We had a lot of fun. Never made any money, but had a lot of fun.

"You never get anywhere in a group like that unless there's a fella in back to give you the support."

But then, in 1944, his father died at age 57 of cancer and Tedrahn put away his saxophone to come back to handle the store. He always kind of figured he'd end up at the store, he says, he just never figured it would be so soon.

HE LOOKS UP as a customer calls his name and nods, "Hi, Jim," then he takes the opportunity to point over toward his sister.

Right after his father died, Tedrahn says, she took and passed the civil service exam three or four times so they could keep operating the post office.

But, he says, starting to swing the fly swatter, she was a registered Republican and the county was run by Democrats back then, so they took the post office away from them and gave it to a woman they moved out of the city to operate it.

She didn't know what she was doing, he says, and for the last 27, 28 years, Cloverdale's been without a post office.

"We ran that old post office for 61 years," Tedrahn says, "and then we lost it through politics."

THE SMALL cubicle, with its teller's cage and post office boxes are still here, in the back. In fact, the lettering, "Post office" is still painted on one of the windows, but it is covered by a spice rack.

A woman comes over and asks for gas, and Tedrahn tells her he'll be right out.

"It's more of a help-out store than anything else," he says. "We try to get friendly with people that come in. We try to call them by their first name. We've tried to be that way all our lives."

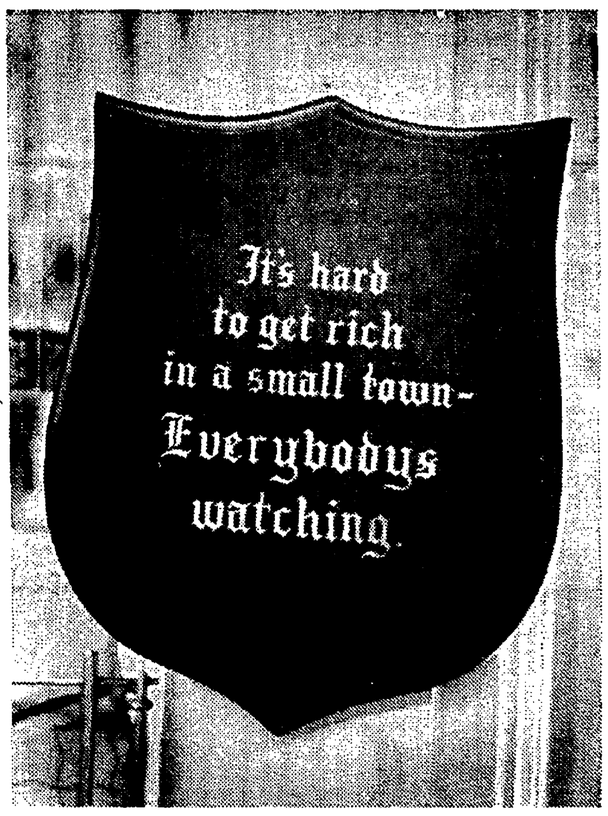
He reaches for his raincoat, and somebody asks how he's been able to stay in business while all the chain stores have been growing, and Tedrahn says he can't really say.

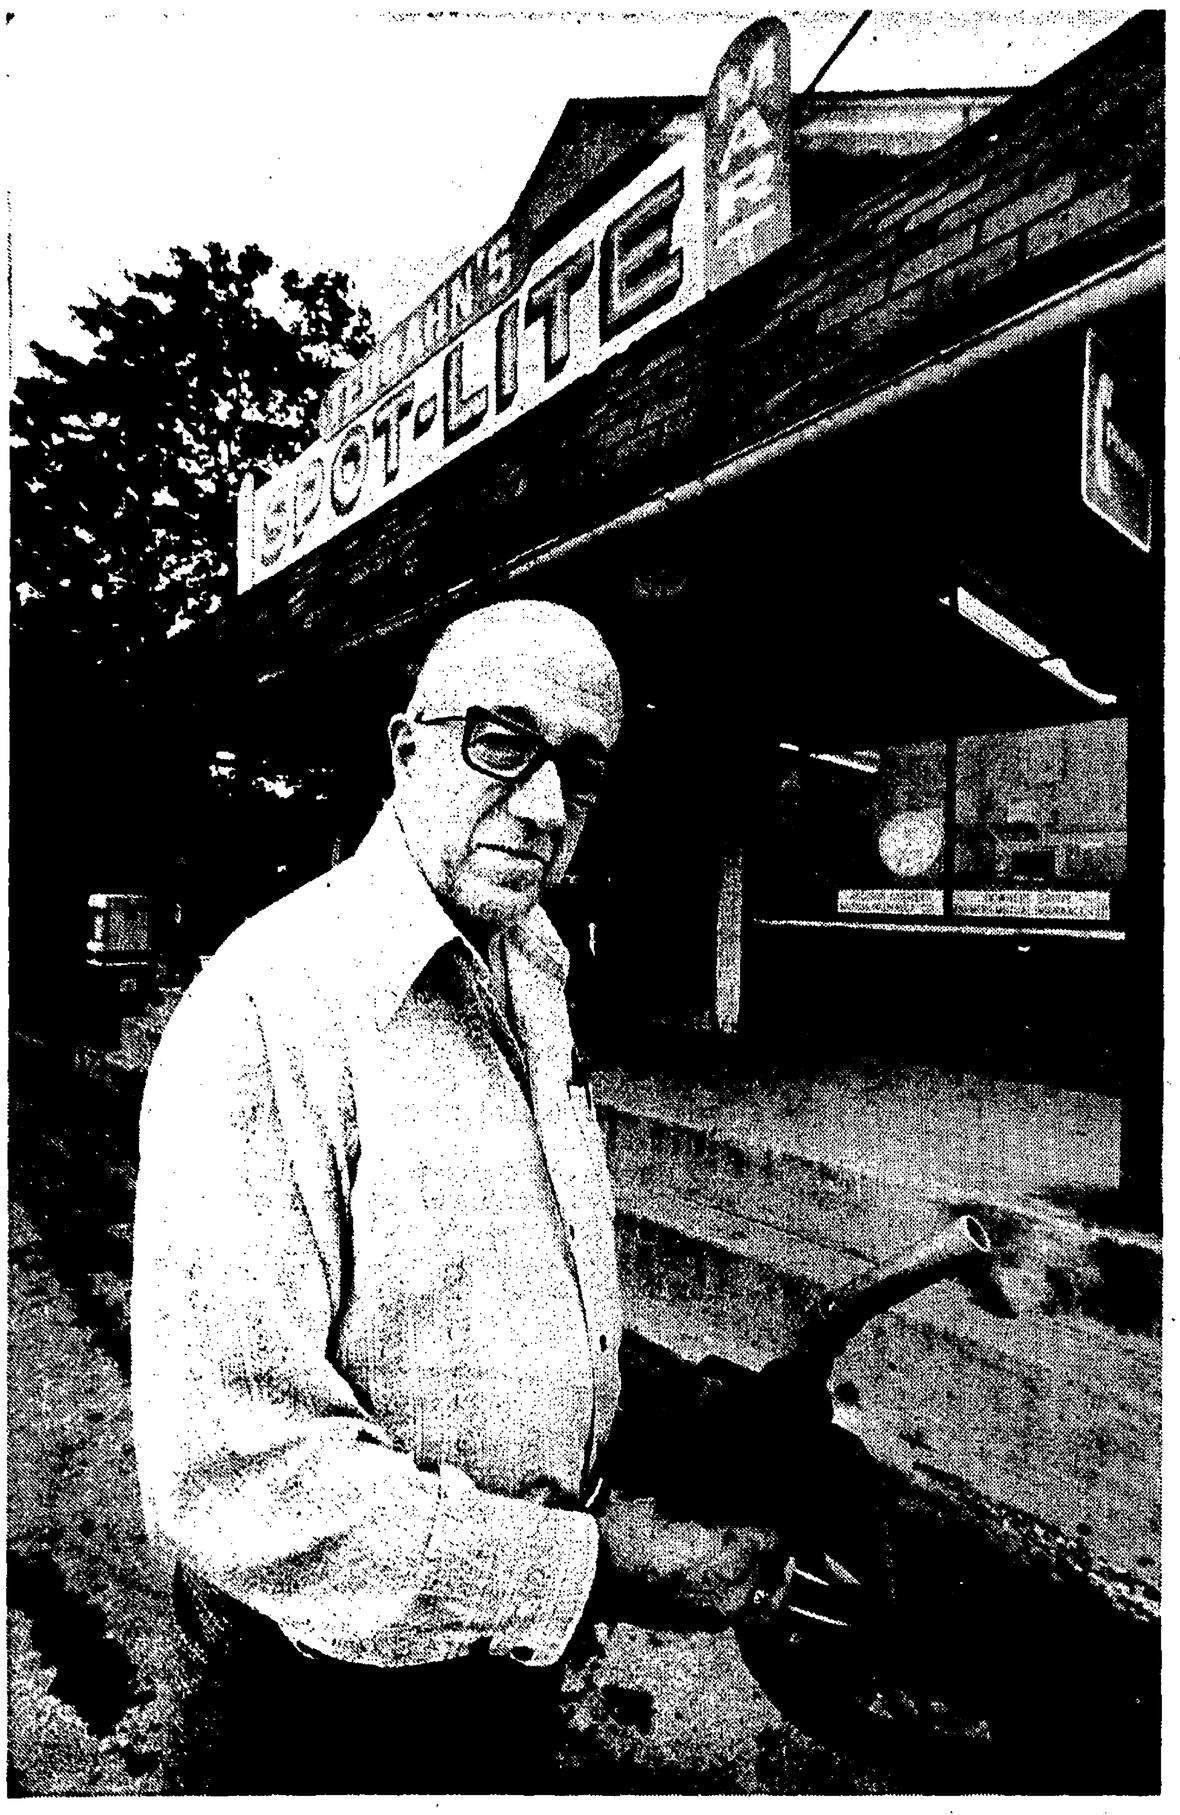
"Heavens to betsy," he says. "Sooner or later, they'll put all the little guys out of business. You can't compete against them. The only thing you do is try to give the customers what they want."

He heads out the door toward the pumps out front.

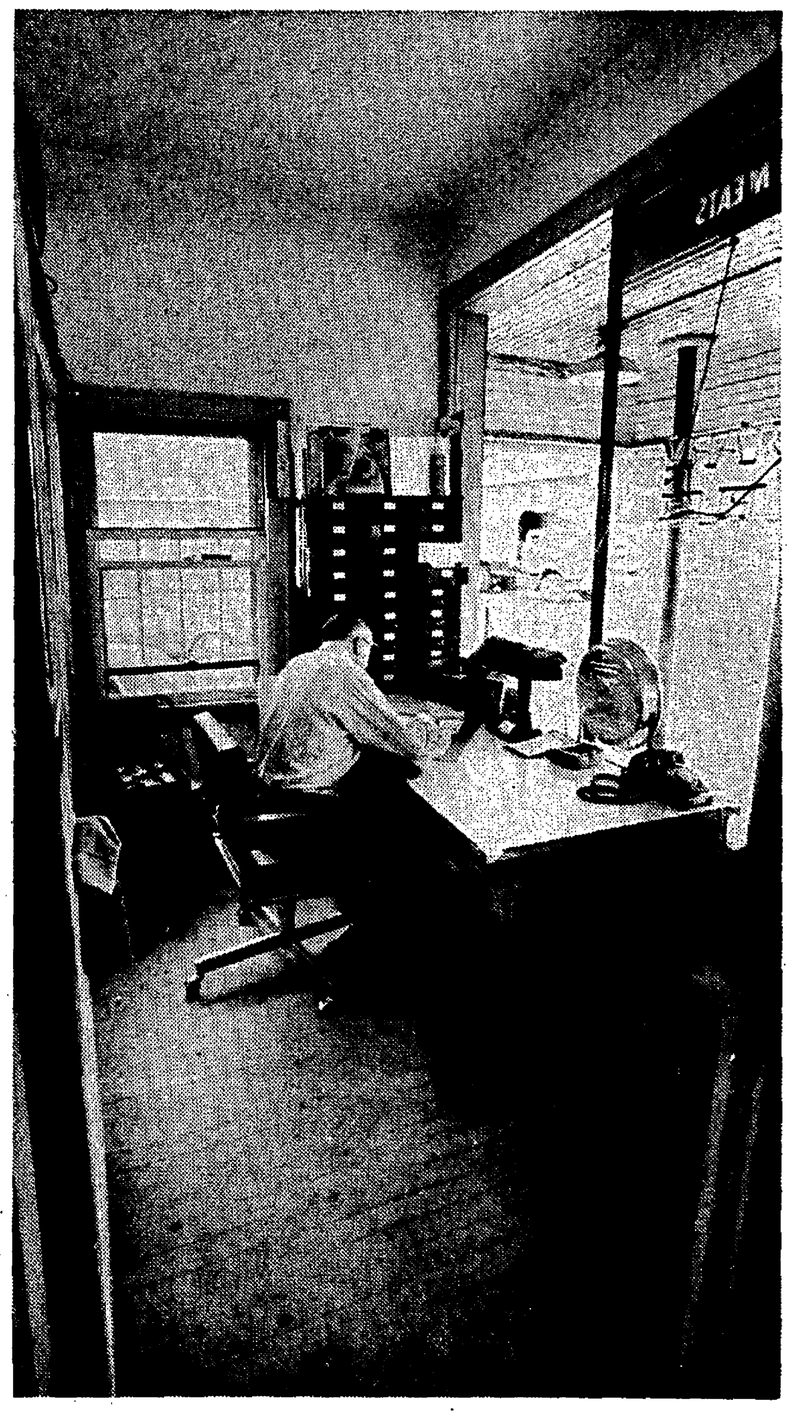
Does he ever miss the old days?

"No, never think about it," Tedrahn says. "I like to keep up with the times."





Tedrahn, 66, gets ready to pump some gas for a customer.



At the end of the day ,the books need to be kept.

Earl Tedrahn and his wife Paula have operated Tedrahn's Spot-Lite near Hanover Park for 33 years. His grandfather started it in 1888.

He's just 'keeping up with the times'

It used to be, Earl Tedrahn says, that all the merechandise was stored on shevles behind the counter.

A farmer from down the road would come in, talk a little bit and give him a list of supplies that he needed.

Then Tedrahn or his wife or his sister — whoever happened to be clerking at the time — would get it for him.

"But we went self-service in '51. We took the counters out," Tedrahn says. "We modernized to keep up with the times."

INDEED, THERE are signs of the times rising up around Tedrahn Spot-Lite, a small family-owned store at the corner of Gary and Army Trail roads in unincorporated Cloversale.

It is an old gray building a couple of miles east of Hanover Park where earth movers busily clear the way for more homes in the Woodlake Trails subdivision and just past the sign that advertises, "McDonalds — 2 Miles."

The truckers come and park off Army Trail next to the store in the mornings and grab a cup of coffee and a roll and maybe a little conversation. Or a farmer stops for a few gallons of gas. Or one of the new homeowners drops in for a loaf of bread and a few apples.

The floor is unpolished hardwood, and the store is cooled by a large fan in the back.

Pastor's dream comes true with opening of church

by JOHN LAMPINEN

Ron Crews has these dreams.

He dreams of starting a church in Hanover Park.

It would be a fundamentalist faith, a Baptist ministry begun in a schoolhouse and in people's hearts and transfered to a more traditional church building within a year.

But it is not the only dream. In fact, it is hardly a dream at all any more.

The Rev. Crews has been in the area for months now, recruiting members, converting others, publicizing, doing what he calls "saturation evangelism."

And Sunday, the dream will become reality.

The Heritage Baptist Church will make its debut at 9:45 a.m. at Greenbrook School, 5308 Arlington Circle, with Pastor Crews in the pulpit and about 100 believers from the Hanover Park-Schaumburg area in the congregation.

It is a dream, he says, he never thought he'd dream as a young "preacher boy" in Jacksonville, Fla.

HE IS 27, and he has been "soul winning" since he was 14, a boy who was "won to Christ" when he was 8 with a hungry thirst for the Bible even though his father never went to church.

And he has served churches in Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, Indiana and Illinois, sung on skid row in Jacksonville and "led my dad to Christ" when he was in a hospital dying of cancer three years ago.

But he had never started a church. He never really considered it — until about a year ago in Jacksonville when a couple of "church planting" articles happened his way.

It was a calling, and to the Rev. Crews, the Chicago area was the most obvious location.

"Down South where I come from," he says, "you find churches are like gas stations. They're on every corner. It's not like here."

But the church is only the beginning of his dreams, not the whole of them.

HE ALSO DREAMS of starting a Christian school, a school whose teachings are based on the gospel rather than on the "humanistic" approach of a public school system that, he says, keeps God out of the classroom because of the complaint of one atheist.

And he dreams of a television program, a program originating from Chicago, from the Heritage Church, that spreads the Word, a program that could spawn a whole network of Christ's teachings.

And he dreams of an unplanned collusion of suburban Baptist ministers moving across Chicago with an unstoppable force. "My thinking," he says, "is rather than try to reach the city from within, from downtown, but from outside where the people are moving, and then, we can move in."

And there are other dreams. There are dreams of strengthening the institution of the family and of renewing patriotism. And there are dreams he will not even discuss because he says they may sound too grandiose.

BUT THE Rev. Crews does not dream these things out of idle reverie. He dreams them because the world disturb's him.

His hair is short, his dress is neat and his voice carries a clear Southern drawl. His philsophy is just as clearly conservative, if not reactionary.

He expounds his views with abundant references toward "liberals" and "leftists" and "communists" and "pornography" and toward "some elements of the media," which he says are used by Satan to promote them all.

"In the last 20 years in America, this line of 'liberty and freedom' has been so overworked that the leftists have used liberty to destroy our liberty," he says. "The liberal way's the easy way."

Yet, he recognizes his philosophy is unpopular. He is called a country bumpkin and his views are said to be outmoded and it is all very difficult.

It is only, the Rev. Crews contends, the fulfillment of the Biblical prophecy that in the last days, "Good will become bad and bad will become good."

"MANY TIMES, fundamentalists have been thought of as ignorant, backwards people," he says. "God's people have always been in the minority. The fundamentalists have always been in the minority."

"If I were a nonfundamentalist, I'd probably be skeptical of fundamentalists. Many people look at fundamentalists as moral policeman, and therefore, there's a natural resistance that is there."

But if the views are unpopular, if people become uneasy because he complains about television programs like "Soap," he must still espouse them, he says, because they are Christ's teachings and those teachings are not subject to modification.

"The emphasis in the home needs to get back to Jesus Christ," he says, "because He's the only one who can give it its sense of purpose."

So the Rev. Crews dreams his dreams and by design, he doesn't try to limit them.

"Many times," he says, "the Lord throws the thing back on us and says, 'Dream big because a person doesn't go any further than his dreams.'"

For Pastor Crews, they are not really dreams.

Church plans to take TV complaints to local fronts

"Soap," the controversial spoof on the sexual entanglements of daytime television soap operas, has not been forced off the air by the preseason protests of church groups.

In that sense, the protesters, led by the Southern Baptist Convention's Christian Life Commission and the U.S. Catholic Conference, may have suffered a defeat in their effort to clean up the airwaves.

But church groups across the country have made it clear that they intend to continue to keep a somewhat jaundiced eye on the tube — and "Soap" is not going to be the only thing they will be watching.

NOR ARE THE networks, more out of the reach of local citizens group, going to be the only target of the unhappiness — and sometimes wrath — of the viewers.

Instead, local stations, which must program in the public interest of their local community, and advertisers, who depend on viewer goodwill to sell their products, will bear more of the brunt of the new campaign.

An inkling of the strategy behind the new monitoring campaign was revealed in a letter sent by the National Council of Churches, the U.S. Catholic Conference, the United Methodist Church and the United Church of Christ to their constituencies.

"Until now," the letter said, "most stations have uncritically accepted whatever the network sent down the line, but we think it is time that local stations themselves are held accountable for what they broadcast."

THE LETTER, in part a response to the "Soap" controversy, recommended establishment of groups of local community leaders from religious and civic groups such as the PTA, who would meet with station managements "to discuss your views as to the appropriateness of "Soap" being broadcast in your area."

David E. Anderson

World of religion

"Our hope," said the Rev. William F. Fore of the National Council of Churches, "is that this kind of community feedback will become a regular thing in the future."

Fore said the National Council also will support legislation requiring the networks to make all of their prime time programs available for prescreening by the local stations.

Even before the flap over "soap," the Southern Baptists had prepared a sophisticated project to aid the denomination's 13 million members in having their views felt by the television industry, including the networks.

THE SBC'S Christian Life Commission has produced a special packet of materials which includes carefully researched leaflets on the effects of television on American life in such areas as violence, sexuality and profanity.

It also includes a survey form which allows the viewer to keep a log of both "negative" (violence, sex, language, alcohol, others) and "positive" programming content (family, treatment of individuals, integrity, others) and three "immediate reaction" postcards, addressed to the presidents of the three networks for viewers to send their immediate responses to a particular program after it has been aired.

"This packet is not the final word, but neither is it just another list of complaints about television programming," said Foy Valentine of the Christian Life Commission. "We think it is a significant beginning in providing the kind of materials that will help Christians cope with the moral challenge television presents."

The packet contains a decal for placing on the television which sums up the new mood: "Either you control your TV or your TV will control you."

Pastor's dream comes true with opening of church

by JOHN LAMPINEN

Ron Crews has these dreams.

He dreams of starting a church in Hanover Park.

It would be a fundamentalist faith, a Baptist ministry begun in a schoolhouse and in people's hearts and transfered to a more traditional church building within a year.

But it is not the only dream. In fact, it is hardly a dream at all any more.

The Rev. Crews has been in the area for months now, recruiting members, converting others, publicizing, doing what he calls "saturation evangelism."

And Sunday, the dream will become reality.

The Heritage Baptist Church will make its debut at 9:45 a.m. at Greenbrook School, 5308 Arlington Circle, with Pastor Crews in the pulpit and about 100 believers from the Hanover Park-Schaumburg area in the congregation.

It is a dream, he says, he never thought he'd dream as a young "preacher boy" in Jacksonville, Fla.

Children hurt in overpass collapse

RESCUE AND MEDICAL workers administer to injured children Friday in Lansing, Mich., after a crane struck a newly built pedestrian overpass causing the 15-foot high structure to collapse. The children, from kindergarten to sixth grade age, were taken to area hospitals with broken bones.

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — A huge earth-moving crane tore the bottom from a pedestrian bridge Friday and sent schoolchildren "flying off the overpass" as one 15-foot-high span collapsed onto a busy, four-lane highway.

Six boys, ranging from 8 to 11, suffered broken limbs and other injuries. Two were placed on the critical list.

An eyewitness said he thought one of the children may have been blinded, but this could not be confirmed.

"The children were walking across the bridge and when the crane bucket hit, they went flying off the overpass," said Lawrence Schneider of Lansing, who was driving his car behind the truck hauling the crane.

THE DOUBLE-SPAN overpass was built recently as part of a highway widening project to protect students on their way to and from Barnes elementary School from heavy Logan Street traffic below. The school is only blocks from General Motors' sprawling Oldsmobile plant complex.

Among the victims was one of two school safety boys stationed at the skywalk to direct younger children across the overpass and keep them out of the street, police said.

The other safety guard, John Ryerse, 11, was credited with helping kindergarten children down from an undamaged portion of the span, dragging two of them off bodily. School officials planned to honor him with a special safety award.

"We're just all upset about the whole thing," said his mother, Mrs. Bonnie Ryerse. "There were friends and neighbors who got hurt."

"THERE WERE KIDS lying all over the place," said another witness, Ton Therrian, who left his car at an intersection to help the children after he watched the bridge collapse.

"All of them were bleeding. This one kid had both of his arms broken and he claimed he couldn't see. One of his eyes was shut."

Weeping parents rushed to the scene upon learning of the accident. Those whose children escaped serious injury expressed relief.

The street was closed to traffic and school officials called off classes. Students from the other side of Logan will be bused to school starting Monday.

Critically hurt were Dean Salinas, 9, who suffered a skull fracture and fractured vertebrae, and Charles Southwell, 9, who fractured both wrists and possibly other bones.

The others, whose conditions were described as fair to good, were the safety guard, Scott Wills, 10, shoulder fracture, head and finger lacerations; David A. Roznowski, 10, a fractured left foot and facial injuries; Timothy Daman, 11, treated and released to his parents; and Jerome Abood, 8, admitted to intensive care with undisclosed injuries.

NIPC scales down pipeline plan

In an effort to limit growth, the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission has scaled down a pipeline proposal outlining water supply needs in the region through the year 2010.

The second draft of a regional water supply plan has eliminated a pipeline in southern Lake County that was originally intended to provide Lake Michigan water to Buffalo Grove and add other communities.

Phillip D. Peters, NIPC assistant director said that pipeline would have stimulated development in southern Lake County and was therefore eliminated.

"THE SYSTEM is less of a system than had been proposed," Peters said, noting that consultant firm Keifer and Associates, Inc. had originally designed a larger pipeline network.

"Our adjustment in the sizing of this system does fit with our comprehensive land use policy," Peters said. He said the water supply plan takes into account the impact new water lines will have on promoting suburban sprawl.

The plan, scheduled for commission adoption in December, recommends a $66 million pipeline along the Northwest Tollway as the best way to bring Lake Michigan water to the Northwest suburbs.

The consultants say the pipeline should be large enough to accommodate the future water needs of four towns that do not have water allocations — Wheeling, Prospect Heights, Hanover Park and Streamwood.

TO DATE, THE eight towns that have received Lake Michigan water allocations have no plant to oversize their proposed system for future water needs.

Instead, the towns have joined together through a loose organization SHARE + 3 and are now drafting an agreement so that construction of a pipeline might begin. Palatine and Arlington Heights are participating in the SHARE + 3 effort, but are independently exploring a pipeline connection with Evanston.

Other SHARE + 3, members include Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Rolling Meadows, Elk Grove Village and Mount Prospect. Although the NIPC report calls for Buffalo Grove to tie into the Northwest suburban pipeline, officials in that village are currently exploring a connection with Highland Park.

Peters said NIPC has no powers to enforce the plan, noting that the agency's only leverage comes from its input into the federal funding procedure.

"There are no federal grants available for the projects that are involved," Peters said. "So what we are really trying to do is put out some good advice for the communities that are involved."

Other SHARE + 3, members include Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Rolling Meadows, Elk Grove Village and Mount Prospect. Although the NIPC report calls for Buffalo Grove to tie into the Northwest suburban pipeline, officials in that village are currently exploring a connection with Highland Park.

Peters said NIPC has no powers to enforce the plan, noting that the agency's only leverage comes from its input into the federal funding procedure.

"There are no federal grants available for the projects that are involved," Peters said. "So what we are really trying to do is put out some good advice for the communities that are involved."

Thompson erred on contributions

The fact that Gov. James Thompson has promised to return campaign contributions he received last year from contractors who were granted immunity in federal investigations does not purge him from the taint of the money.

Thompson, who as U.S. Attorney and a gubernatorial candidate stood for clean government, should have managed his campaign in such a way that the contractor's money never reached his campaign treasury.

Thompson's problem once again points out the need for reform in the state's campaign financing laws, reform that could cut the role of special interests of all kinds in political campaigns.

The Daily Herald disclosed the $9,000 in campaign gifts earlier this week. The six highway contractors who made the contributions received immunity grants in a federal investigation of a bid-rigging scheme involving O'Hare Airport and the Stevenson Expressway.

Thompson has said he was not personally involved with the investigation that resulted in the immunity grants while he was U.S. attorney. And, he said, his campaign aides did not know of the immunity grants.

It does not seem unreasonable to assume that Thompson should have taken steps early in his campaign to ensure that persons who had dealings with the prosecutor's office would not turn up on lists of his campaign doners, particularly since he pledged not to accept such gifts.

The fact that Thompson has a large enough campaign surplus to return the gifts is fortunate.

Meaningful reform of campaign financing laws, including implementation of public campaign funding and spending limits at the state level, could help to eliminate such situations in the future.

The public campaign funding, along with spending limits, worked well in last year's presidential campaign. Similar plans have been introduced in the Illinois General Assembly but have not been approved.

Until legal campaign funding reform is adopted, it is going to be up to individual candidates to impose their own standards on the kinds of gifts they receive for their campaigns.

In Thompson's case, the public expects high standards. Further slip-ups like those involving the immunity grants are unacceptable.

Regulate asphalt plant

Wheeling officials Monday will conduct a hearing on whether to grant a zoning variation to Rock Road Construction Co. for an asphalt plant it owns at 231 McHenry Road in the village.

In considering whether to grant the variation Rock Road wants, village board members must decide whether they can use the variation to make the plant a more acceptable neighbor to nearby single family homes.

Area residents complain that the plant is noisy, smelly and dirty. They want the plant out and would like to see the village deny the zoning change in hopes of forcing it to close.

Because the plant is now a non-conforming zoning use, Rock Road cannot make additions or repairs there. In addition, they cannot sell the plant to another asphalt company. It is in order to sell out that they have asked the village for the special use permit for the plant.

A majority of the village board apparently wants to grant the permit to Rock Road so they can better control the hours of operation and the plant's impact on the neighborhood. Now, they say, the village cannot control those kinds of things. It can only prohibit additions or repairs, thus making the plant an even greater eyesore.

If the village board can in fact use the special use permit to clean up Rock Road's operation, reduce the noise and otherwise solve the residents' problems, that is clearly the correct action. However, the village should reject the application if it cannot guarantee protection to homeowners.

Rock Road has not been a good neighbor. To give the firm further life without compensation for the concerns of residents would be inexcusable.

Board helps taxpayers

The Cook County Board showed admirable willingness Monday to act quickly on behalf of taxpayers in its action lowering the assessment level for single family homes from 17 to 16 per cent of market value.

The board, meeting as a committee of the whole, voted unanimously to approve the assessment level cut which was proposed by County Assessor Thomas Tully. The cut is expected to mean a 6 per cent savings on property taxes for most homeowners next year.

The action will not help those who were hit with huge property tax increases this year because of reassessments. But it will mean tax relief for those homeowners next year as well as a break for those whose property is currently being reassessed.

The drop in the assessment level will not solve the problem of property taxes nor ensure that new assessment practices will be fair. But it will help individual taxpayers while experts tackle the stickier subjects.

Taxpayers this year made it clear they will not stand for ever-increasing property taxes. The county board's response was timely.

I read with interest the articles in your edition of Saturday, September 10 on the school situation in the Northwest suburbs. As a parent, taxpayer and former board member, I would like to offer the following observations:

1. It was stated that "in general, costs per student were very similar" yet your statistics reveal a swing from a low of $1,286 to a high of $1,920 ($634) or nearly 50 per cent. That is not very similar.

2. Administrative costs per student were less than 9 per cent of the total cost per student in the district with the highest administrative costs. That figure is considerably better than most business organizations. Since this is such a small part of the cost of education, what difference can it make if it is higher per student? Besides, there are ways to hide such costs by creative accounting when more dollars are involved.

3. As a taxpayer, I do not want to pay a higher rate ($72 per $10,000) due to the inefficiencies and problems that are present in other larger districts. It is interesting that the lowest tax rate is in the smallest district. Could it be that districts of that size have better, more informed boards, better, more closely supervised administrators and better, more involved teachers?

4. As a parent, I chose a small district for the personal touch it can provide. I would be happy to see a comparison of our test scores against other districts. I would like to compare our extensive programs in education, extra curriculars and gifted areas against the big districts. Our curriculum guides are among the best in the area and are done in conjunction with our local high schools. They are done by interested, experienced classroom teachers not isolated curriculum consultants.

In conclusion, as one who has experienced the effects of a small district on its only product, our children, I would fight any plan to combine districts. The real answer to education is involved parents, earnest informed boards, capable administrator and dedicated teachers. All the other things do nothing to educate the kids. Data processing can be purchased only as needed. Supplies can be purchased economically by a good business manager. After all, nearly 80 per cent of a district's budget is usually spent for classroom teachers and other educators. How much can be saved in the other areas that would offset the loss of the personal touch needed in educating our children?

'Carter resign'

President Carter, who said he would never lie to the American people and would give this country new leadership, now claims that he was unaware of the financial plight and questionable money manipulations of his friend, Thomas B. Lance, the Georgia banker, whom Carter was able to get appointed, under very peculiar circumstances, as his Budget Director.

I could be wrong but I see a strong resemblance in the manipulations of Mr. Lance with that of Republican DuPage County Treasurer James H. Clark and Richard L. Curtis, former president of the Michigan Avenue Bank of Chicago, leading to their conviction for bribery on March 29, 1977.

If Carter is lying to the American people he should be forced to resign. After all there is strong precedent for such a resignation in the recent case of President Nixon. If Carter is not lying, and Lance is guilty, then one must question not only Carter's choice of friends, but also his judgment and his leadership.

What's worse?

I read with some interest the Daily Herald's recent collection of letters on the subject of dog dirt.

All that can be said for the broken bottles, beer and pop cans, plastic cups and straws, 6-pack rings, tissues, cigarette packs and butts, disposable diapers, and assorted waste paper to be found on sidewalks, lawns and gutters is that they do not need to be scraped off the shoe. Would that any of them would disintegrate with the first rain as the dog dirt does!

Music teacher praises Dist. 15 staff

Having recently resigned from eight years as grade school band director in Rolling Meadows, I want very much to offer some words of gratitude to the many fine people with whom I've had the privilege of working. I would like to thank:

(1) A very professional group of comprehensive music teachers, who helped coordinate our goals in elementary music.

(2) All the classroom teachers who, despite schedule disruptions, encouraged their students to participate in band and attended concerts when they could.

(3) The secretaries and custodians whose untiring and mostly-unrewarded efforts are so valuable to all teachers.

(4) All principals, who have been so supportive in word and deed, especially to those who made special efforts to attend evening concerts after a rigorous day at school.

(5) The district administrative personnel, especially Dr. Whiteley, Mr. Kiszka, Mr. Hannenberg, and Miss Yates, who nearly always found time in their very busy schedules to attend our major concerts.

(6) A very fine group of youngsters, the oldest of whom are now two years out of high school and the youngest of whom are in sixth grade. The youth of Rolling Meadows are proud and hard-working, just like their parents. They have poured their best efforts into the intermediate band program and have helped it to grow from about 50 to 120 (before declining enrollments and recent cutbacks). I wish everyone could have the thrill of standing in the conductor's spot and watching a group start from near-zero on a challenging piece of music and hearing it grow into a polished performance on concert night. A large part of the success of the R.M. school band program from grade school through high school is due to the solid support of parents for their children and the community for its Bands.

(7) The most special thanks of all go to my close friend and colleague, George Yingst, Sandburg Junior High Band Director, whose support, guidance, friendship, and humor will always be highly treasured. In closing, I'd like to extend a warm welcome to my successor, Mrs. Jeannette Hans, whose teaching excellence is well-established and who, I'm sure, will do a fine job in your community.

PLO stays 'reliably' anti-Israel

A little item almost buried on the Associated Press wire really deserved front-page banner treatment: "MOSCOW (AP) The official news agency Tass conceded Wednesday that an official American photography exhibit at Moscow had been censored . . ." When Tass is caught conceding the truth, it's big news. Doubtless a purge of its staff will soon be in the works.

But other usually reliable sources remain consistent. Time magazine was reporting the other day that the "rejectionists" among the Palestinian Arabs had dropped their "defiant stand against peace" and that the Palestine Liberation Organization could be expected to recognize Israel in exchange for a Palestinian state. And Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim of the United Nations predicted that the PLO would go along with UN Resolution 242 if it were amended here and there.

UN Resolution 242 calls not only for withdrawals in the Middle East but also demands peace and security for all its nations. That makes it a major stumbling block for the PLO, whose national charter repeatedly calls for the destruction of Israel. Almost as soon as Waldheim had made his happy announcement, the PLO's governing council had met in Damascus and, for the nth time, rejected 242.

WHILE AT IT, the PLO issued a statement of principles attacking not only Israel but the United States and any Palestinians who might not accept the PLO's bloody brand of leadership. The PLO's statement condemned "all the United States and Zionist maneuvers," denounced "the enemies of our people, Zionism and American imperialism," and warned "those cowards and those suspected of cooperating with the plans of the Zionist enemy . . ."

The whole statement amounts to still another intractable reiteration of the war cries that have come to dominate the cause of an Arab Palestine since any compromise was first rejected in the 1930s and '40s. In the long perspective of history, the worst, most fervent and unbending enemy of Palestine's Arabs has been their own fanatical leadership.

The hopeful announcements from Waldheim about the PLO's new-found moderation, like similar reports from Time magazine and the American State Department, would seem as reliable as ever.

IT'S NOT likely, however, that the State Department will now denounce the PLO. It is not clear just exactly what it will do after the PLO's latest blast, besides sulk. Perhaps try to find some common ground with the Irish Republican Army.

The only predictable reaction of this country's Old Middle East Hands may be to learn as little as possible from it. The Pentagon, for example, is proposing to ship Egypt 14 more C-130 air transport planes and an unspecified number of remote-controlled drones for air reconaissance. That announcement came the same day the Israelis objected to Egypt's "most flagrant" violation yet of the last disengagement agreement in Sinai.

The Israelis claim that the Egyptians have moved twice as many troops to the East Bank of the Canal as allowed under that American-sponsored agreement. More disturbing, Jerusalem charges that the Egyptians are building new fortifications on the East Bank (also a violation of the agreement) that "could easily accommodate the Egyptain Army should it decide to cross the Canal."

AMERICAN SOURCES — the State Department? — are reportedly "not aware of any Egyptian buildup." Are they ever? Israel's intelligence didn't cover itself with glory on the eve of the Yom Kippur War in 1973, but its claims proved more reliable than the usual American sources. A day after the war had started, the Pentagon was still trying to figure out who had attacked whom. At least the Israelis had no doubt about that.

Now the United States is proposing to ship more American aircraft to Egypt just as that country is accused of violating an American - sponsored agreement. Soon enough the Carter Administration will be pressing Israel for another withdrawal in exchange for more promises. Perhaps the best way to accomplish that objective would be to see to it that previous promises are kept. But that may be too obvious a point to win the agreement of the Usually Reliable Sources.

AMERICAN SOURCES — the State Department? — are reportedly "not aware of any Egyptian buildup." Are they ever? Israel's intelligence didn't cover itself with glory on the eve of the Yom Kippur War in 1973, but its claims proved more reliable than the usual American sources. A day after the war had started, the Pentagon was still trying to figure out who had attacked whom. At least the Israelis had no doubt about that.

Now the United States is proposing to ship more American aircraft to Egypt just as that country is accused of violating an American - sponsored agreement. Soon enough the Carter Administration will be pressing Israel for another withdrawal in exchange for more promises. Perhaps the best way to accomplish that objective would be to see to it that previous promises are kept. But that may be too obvious a point to win the agreement of the Usually Reliable Sources.

Military unionization gets partial OK from Carter

Clark Mollenhoff

Watch on Washington

The Carter administration has approved a directive that would permit limited unionization of the military in an effort to block legislation to ban all efforts to organize armed forces personnel.

The compromise position, regarded as bending to union power by Carter, is being directed by Defense Sec. Harold Brown and Defense Dept. Counsel Deanne Siemer. Lobbying efforts are being concentrated on the House Armed Services Committee.

The vehicle for the compromise is a directive signed recently by Brown to permit servicemen to join a union, pay dues and attend meetings regardless of the purpose and character of the union, according to interpretations circulated in the Pentagon.

MILITARY PERSONNEL may be so-called "inactive" members of any union without violation of the Brown directive. "Active" union members who take leadership roles in fund-raising and membership solicitation are barred only from the so-called "prohibited acts" of striking. They are not barred from attempts to bargain collectively.

Brown and his lobbyists are putting emphasis on the fact that the directive would bar strikes and other "prohibited acts," and argue that this makes it unnecessary to pass the proposed legislation, which won unanimous approval by the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Faced with 18 to 0 opposition in the Senate Armed Services Committee, the Pentagon has turned its lobbying attention to the House in an effort to block the legislation sponsored by Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and cosponsored by 49 others.

ALTHOUGH THE list of Thurmond's cosponsors is dominated by Republicans and conservative Democrats, it also includes such liberal Democrats as Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware, Sen. Lawton Chiles of Florida, Sen. Wendell Anderson of Minnesota and Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington.

Even Sen. John Culver, a liberal Democrat from Iowa, joined with his Armed Services Committee colleagues in the 18-0 vote to report the Thurmond bill to the Senate floor for action. Culver is reported to be among the 10 to 15 Democrats who Senator Thurmond says did not wish to join as cosponsors because of a sensitive relationship with home state unions, but who will vote for the bill on the floor.

While Pentagon hierarchy, under pressure from Brown's office, gives lip service to the Brown directive as effectively taking care of the union problem, many express grave misgivings about permitting limited unionization, which could be the forerunner to lobbying that would be disruptive to the strict military discipline.

GEN. MAXWELL D. Taylor, retired former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, is but one of many of military stature who have authorized the sponsors of the Thurmond legislation to circulate statements in opposition to any unionization of the military as abhorrent to those who take seriously their mission of instant combat readiness.

Although the original Thurmond legislation was criticized as possibly unconstitutional, it has been amended to meet those complaints. As unanimously approved by the Senate Armed Services Committee, legislation would make it unlawful for a member of the Armed Forces to join a military union or to solicit or maintain membership in a union. It also would make it unlawful for any labor organization to enroll military members or to solicit or accept dues or fees.

Polls have demonstrated that about 75 per cent of the voters are opposed to any unionization of the Armed Services, but the Carter administration has taken the usual course of compromise to avoid confrontation with the American Federation of Government Employees (AFTE) and other unions that have initiated organizing drives.

Fear of public indignation and opposition to the unionization of the military is keeping the administration's position on the Thurmond legislation in low profile.

New Madison judge views rape as crime of violence

by RICHARD P. JONES

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Moria Krueger believes she has a greater sense of rape than most people, but unlike some feminists she doesn't see herself as a modern day Joan of Arc who put asunder a judge confused by the word.

Ms. Krueger defeated Judge Archie Simonson in an unprecedented recall election that resulted from his remarks about women and rape in a juvenile case. She will be sworn in Monday as Dane County's first woman judge.

After her victory Sept. 7, Ms. Krueger disclosed her sister had been assaulted about 10 years ago.

"IT WAS A PRETTY horrendous experience," she said. "She underwent a total personality change. She's my older sister and had always treated me as as older sister, and suddenly, we had a complete role reversal.

"I made all the decisions and just sort of directed her. She eventually, I think, recovered very well, but it was obviously a major experience in her life.

"It was very violent, and involved a weapon."

And the assailant?

"NEVER WAS identified. She refused to report it, and over her objection, I had reported it."

Are her thoughts on rape now different from those she had them?

"This is something I didn't emphasize during the campaign, and I'm not sure that it really should be emphasized now, but I do believe I — especially since that experience — have much more of a sense of rape as a crime of violence, as a horrible, physical and mental intrusion to another person.

MORIA KRUEGER

"And I do think I understand the lasting effects on being a victim of such a crime."

WHILE FEMINISTS hailed her victory, Ms. Krueger said she failed to see any extraordinary significance and expressed hope that men would not fear her when she assumed the $36,000 a year judgeship.

"Obviously I was aware that if I were elected I would be the first woman an judge in Dane County," she said. "Obviously I was aware that the spark for this recall was coming from people outraged by the incumbent's perception of women."

"But if you will note in my campaign, I tried to stress my credentials and principles, not just my gender. I just hadn't seen myself as the Joan of Arc type."

She does not like labels, but has described herself as "a humanist feminist."

"I HOLD FEMINIST ideals, but I don't think all of Moria Krueger is defined by those ideas solely. I think some people fear that those ideals might mean the exclusion of men from a fair hearing.

"That is not at all what I stand for. I stand for fair hearings for everyone."

Simonson attracted nationwide publicity for suggesting rape might be a normal reaction to sexual permissiveness and provocative dress. He sentenced to court supervision at home a 15-year-old youth involved in the rape of a girl in a high school stairwell.

"There's a dual effort in the whole controversy concerning rape," Ms. Kreuger said. "There is an effort toward prevention, which I think was perverted a bit by the incumbent's remarks.

"THERE'S NOTHING wrong with prevention. But there's also a necessity to understand that in a large majority of these cases, prevention is not possible. Nothing could have been done by the victim to keep this from happening."

Ms. Krueger, 33, and her lawyer husband, Edward, have a son. She did her undergraduate studies at San Francisco State and University of California-Berkeley and received her law degree from University of Wisconsin.

She said her only major problem so far is finding a black robe to wear on the bench.

"We're trying to see if I can borrow something for the investiture, but there aren't many robes around for people 5-foot-3½," she said. "All the judges are too tall over there to lend me theirs.

"I may end up going down to the university bookstore and renting a graduation gown."

Baker, Thompson lead GOP list of contenders

by GODFREY SPERLING JR.

Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee and Illinois Gov. James Thompson are the two top choices of Republican leaders for the GOP presidential nomination in 1980, a new survey by The Christian Science Monitor discloses.

Baker is far out in front of the poll, with Thompson a distant second choice of the 85 Republican state chairman and national committeemen who responded to the Monitor survey. One hundred-fifty three GOP leaders were polled.

After Baker — bunched fairly closely together — were in this order: Thompson, former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, former President Gerald R. Ford and former Texas Gov. John Connally.

WHAT CAME THROUGH clearly in the survey is this:

The party is inclined to look for a "new face" to challenge Carter.

While the top leaders in the poll have been on the political scene for quite a while, they were not final contenders in last year's race for the nomination. The party seems to be ready to turn to leaders other than Ford or Reagan to head its effort to return to the White House.

The same Republican leaders indicated in this survey that they thought President Carter has become "vulnerable" to defeat — that his actions on both the foreign and domestic fronts and, particularly, the controversy over Budget Director Bert Lance weakened him to the point where a GOP challenge might be successful.

Sen. Baker is obviously well accepted among leaders whose ideology, in the main, is conservative or moderate-conservative.

The senator himself has increased his public visibility in recent months by gaining the top leadership post among the Republican senators.

MAJ. GEN. WILBUR F. Munch today turns over command of the 86th U.S. Army Reserve division, headquartered at the former Nike missile base in Arlington Heights, to Brig. Gen. Wilbur J. Bunting. Change of Command ceremonies will begin at the base at 10:30 a.m.

General to retire from reserves

by BILL HILL

The stars pinned to his collar are a dead giveaway, but even without them, the face with its deep lines, the strong arms and the way he puffs on the short, fat cigars make Wilbur F. Munch look like a general.

After 35 years as a commissioned officer, Maj. Gen. Munch will retire today from the U.S. Army Reserves and turn over command of the 86th U.S. Army Reserve division to Brig. Gen. Wilber J. Bunting.

Ceremonies marking the change will be held at 10:30 a.m. today at the former Nike missile base, Central and Wilke roads, Arlington Heights.

Munch, 58, has been a military man for 36 years, enlisting in 1941 and then entering Officer Candidates School a year later.

"WHEN I ENLISTED, I just thought I'd serve my time, get out of the Army and go back to the radio repair business," Munch said.

"But when I came off active duty (after six years), I realized I liked the military and that it blended well with my occupation," he said. "Instead of playing a lot of golf like some guys, or joining the Shriners or Knights of Columbus, I decided I'd rather devote my time to the reserves. I guess it's my contribution to the community."

He never envisioned becoming a major general nor commander of the 86th division, which involves the training of 9,000 individuals assigned to Army Reserve units throughout Illinois and Wisconsin.

WHEN MUNCH BECAME commanding general of the 86th in 1971, his "contribution" increased significantly. He spends at least two nights a week working at the 86th division's headquarters at the former Nike missile base and many other nights he takes the Army Reserve work home or he travels to other reserve installations.

"Major general is a pretty good job. I mean, nobody forced me to take it," Munch said. "I've had to change my way of life with my family because of the time it takes. You have to make every hour count so you don't isolate yourself from your family," he said.

The commanding general's job also brought Munch some headaches in 1973, 1974 and 1975 when the Arlington Heights Park District and a citizens' committee fought to get the U.S. Army to declare large portions of the base as surplus land in hopes of building a golf course there. The citizens picketed the base on several occasions and many heated meetings were held with Munch caught as the man in the middle between Army officials in Washington, D.C., and the angry citizens.

THE CITIZENS eventually were successful and the golf course is under construction.

"I really don't like to dwell on all that. I think we've proven we're good neighbors and I think everybody's happy now. For me, it made a lot of trouble, but that's part of the job," Munch said.

His job is finished now. He says he'll miss the people very much.

"That's only natural after this many years, but I think I've pretty much accepted it. I certainly won't need a psychiatrist," Munch said.

He will continue to work as an engineer for Illinois Bell Telephone Co., his employer for 31 years. And he plans to do a lot of work around his 60-acre farm near Harvard where he raises horses and peacocks.

Ingram official tells of bribery

CHICAGO (UPI) — The wife of a Metropolitan Sanitary District commissioner received $100,000 in 1971 a part of bribes to secure lucrative sludge-hauling contracts for Ingram Corp., a former Ingram offical testified Friday.

William J. Benton, 55, a former senior vice president with Ingram, a New Orleans-based barge company, testified in the U.S. District Court jury trial of Ingram owners Frederic B. Ingram and E. Bronston Ingram, present and former Chicago officials and two businessmen.

The Ingram brothers are charged with paying $1.3 million in bribes to the Chicago officials and businessmen to obtain $43 million in contracts to haul sludge from the Chicago suburb of Stickney to downstate Fulton County.

Teacher strike at Thornton; others settle

About 130 teachers at Thornton Community College in South Holland went on strike Friday. Most of the teachers in the Sandwich School District have agreed to return to work and Orland Park teachers settled their strike.

The Thornton Community College teachers have been working without a contract since August when their two-year contract expired.

School remained open for the school's 10,000 students, 3,500 of which are full-time. Negotiations between the teachers and the school board were scheduled for today.

Orland Park teachers attended a workshop Friday, ending a strike they began Sept. 8. The 125 teachers in the district southwest of Chicago Thursday overwhelmingly ratified a contract negotiated earlier in the day.

The two-year Orland Park contract provides for increases in pay and fringe benefits of 13 per cent each.

In the Sandwich district, only 10 of 51 tenured teachers fired for striking had not signed individual contracts with the board Friday.

Ceremonies marking the change will be held at 10:30 a.m. today at the former Nike missile base, Central and Wilke roads, Arlington Heights.

Munch, 58, has been a military man for 36 years, enlisting in 1941 and then entering Officer Candidates School a year later.

"WHEN I ENLISTED, I just thought I'd serve my time, get out of the Army and go back to the radio repair business," Munch said.

"But when I came off active duty (after six years), I realized I liked the military and that it blended well with my occupation," he said. "Instead of playing a lot of golf like some guys, or joining the Shriners or Knights of Columbus, I decided I'd rather devote my time to the reserves. I guess it's my contribution to the community."

He never envisioned becoming a major general nor commander of the 86th division, which involves the training of 9,000 individuals assigned to Army Reserve units throughout Illinois and Wisconsin.

WHEN MUNCH BECAME commanding general of the 86th in 1971, his "contribution" increased significantly. He spends at least two nights a week working at the 86th division's headquarters at the former Nike missile base and many other nights he takes the Army Reserve work home or he travels to other reserve installations.

"Major general is a pretty good job. I mean, nobody forced me to take it," Munch said. "I've had to change my way of life with my family because of the time it takes. You have to make every hour count so you don't isolate yourself from your family," he said.

The commanding general's job also brought Munch some headaches in 1973, 1974 and 1975 when the Arlington Heights Park District and a citizens' committee fought to get the U.S. Army to declare large portions of the base as surplus land in hopes of building a golf course there. The citizens picketed the base on several occasions and many heated meetings were held with Munch caught as the man in the middle between Army officials in Washington, D.C., and the angry citizens.

THE CITIZENS eventually were successful and the golf course is under construction.

"I really don't like to dwell on all that. I think we've proven we're good neighbors and I think everybody's happy now. For me, it made a lot of trouble, but that's part of the job," Munch said.

His job is finished now. He says he'll miss the people very much.

"That's only natural after this many years, but I think I've pretty much accepted it. I certainly won't need a psychiatrist," Munch said.

He will continue to work as an engineer for Illinois Bell Telephone Co., his employer for 31 years. And he plans to do a lot of work around his 60-acre farm near Harvard where he raises horses and peacocks.

Ingram official tells of bribery

CHICAGO (UPI) — The wife of a Metropolitan Sanitary District commissioner received $100,000 in 1971 a part of bribes to secure lucrative sludge-hauling contracts for Ingram Corp., a former Ingram offical testified Friday.

William J. Benton, 55, a former senior vice president with Ingram, a New Orleans-based barge company, testified in the U.S. District Court jury trial of Ingram owners Frederic B. Ingram and E. Bronston Ingram, present and former Chicago officials and two businessmen.

The Ingram brothers are charged with paying $1.3 million in bribes to the Chicago officials and businessmen to obtain $43 million in contracts to haul sludge from the Chicago suburb of Stickney to downstate Fulton County.

Teacher strike at Thornton; others settle

About 130 teachers at Thornton Community College in South Holland went on strike Friday. Most of the teachers in the Sandwich School District have agreed to return to work and Orland Park teachers settled their strike.

The Thornton Community College teachers have been working without a contract since August when their two-year contract expired.

School remained open for the school's 10,000 students, 3,500 of which are full-time. Negotiations between the teachers and the school board were scheduled for today.

Orland Park teachers attended a workshop Friday, ending a strike they began Sept. 8. The 125 teachers in the district southwest of Chicago Thursday overwhelmingly ratified a contract negotiated earlier in the day.

The two-year Orland Park contract provides for increases in pay and fringe benefits of 13 per cent each.

In the Sandwich district, only 10 of 51 tenured teachers fired for striking had not signed individual contracts with the board Friday.

An energy-efficient fireplace—they think they've got it

The Plywood Minnesota chain of hardware stores is gambling that a fireplace manufactured by a small New England firm will revolutionize the industry and draw throngs of buyers.

Plywood Minnesota today begins marketing an energy-efficient fireplace made by El Fuego Corp., of Oakville, Conn., as its only line of fireplaces.

Spokesmen for the hardware chain say the firm held back on carrying fireplaces for years, allowing competitors to get a healstart on sales in the booming market for alternative home-heating units — primarily, wood-burning stoves and fireplaces.

THE REASON? Many fireplace manufacturers de-

'An average fireplace draws more heat out of a house'

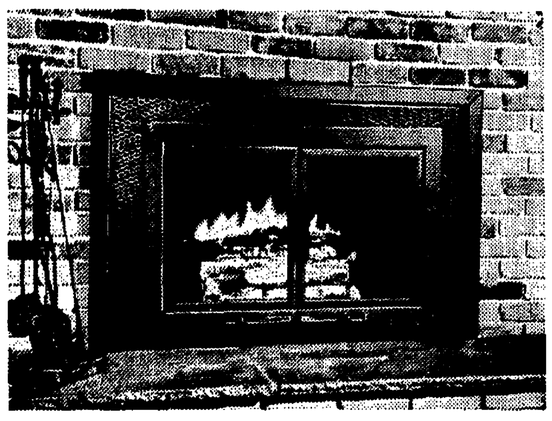
ceive homeowners when they imply their products will provide supplemental heat for a house, El Fuego spokesmen say.

Plywood Minnesota decided to wait until a fireplace was developed that lived up to its promises, spokesmen say.

Now the hardware chain is placing its bets on the product of a New England firm virtually unknown in the Midwest. Though El Fuego fireplaces will sell for between $150 and $200 more than its competition, Plywood Minnesota is hoping its performance will convince consumers to cough up the extra cash.

"A fireplace is a terrible waster of energy, rather than a way to contribute to the heat of your home," said John Lefler, president of Plywood Minnesota.

CONTRARY TO popular belief, an average fireplace draws more heat out of a house than it gives back,



THE FUEGO Fireplace Converter III.

Lefler said.

To cite an example, Lefler said a fireplace 36 inches wide by 28 inches high will draw 336 cubic feet of heated air out of a house per minute, use a portion of the air for combustion and shoot the heated air up the chimney.

Meanwhile, cold air is drawn in from the outside to replenish the warm air, he said.

A 12- by 15-foot family room will be exhausted every five minutes, while a 1,500-square-foot house will be exhausted in 35 minutes, Lefler said.

THE EL FUEGO fireplace uses only 15 cubic feet of air per minute for combustion, and warms a room using a simple heat exchanger, said Mike Gilbert, spokesman fo El Fuego.

Gilbert said a 10-pound load of wood will produce 42,000 BTUs of heat per hour — half the heat given off by an average furnace.

El Fuego will offer three types tf fireplaces: a converter, to be installed in existing fireplaces; a pre-built model, to be placed in a room and have an enclosure built around it; and a free-standing heater with a fireplace-like front.

Costs are from $409 to $469 for the converter; $729 for the pre-built unit, plus pipe and facing materials; and $579 for the free-standing unit, plus costs for piping.

WHILE EL FUEGO spokesmen say the average household handyman can install their converters with minimal difficulty, Plywood Minnesota will offer to do the job itself for about $85.

El Fuego fireplaces have been marketed in the East for five years. Plywood Minnesota will introduce the fireplaces to the Midwest in its 56 discount warehouses in Illinois, Minnesota, Indiana, Iowa, North and South Dakota and Wisconsin.

If what El Fuego says it proven true through performance, some rather simple technology has been applied to achieve some rather remarkable results.

First, El Fuego reduces the amount of oxygen used in combustion by installing glass doors and adjustable vents in front of the fireplaces, and an adjustable damper located in the chimney.

BY CLOSING THE doors, vents and damper, a homeowners brings about more complete combustion of wood and reburning of hot gases, El Fuego spokesmen say. They estimate this will result in 50 per cent savings in the amount of wood burned.

To squeeze as much heat as possible out of the fireplace, El Fuego surrounds an enclosed firebox with an empty space into which cool air is drawn from the house, wafted around the sides, rear and top of the burning chamber, and expelled as heated air back into a room.

"We are basically taking a fireplace and turning it into a baseboard heating system," Gilbert said.

Components used in the El Fuego system are found in competitors' products. Some control combustion by use of dampers and glass doors; others seal off the firebox completely, drawing air for combustion from outside the house; and still others incorporate head exchangers consisting of tubing, through which air passes from the house.

A FIREPLACE WITHIN a fireplace, the El Fuego consists of a firebox surrounded by empty space. Air circulates around the combustion chamber, and reenters the room as heated air. To help achieve efficient burning, a special damper is installed in the neck above the fireplace.

Sales in the East have prompted El Fuego to expand into the Midwest, the higher cost of its fireplaces notwithstanding.

The fireplace has received an encouraging response. Gilbert says a Minneapolis builder replaced 550 of his fireplaces with El Fuego models at his townhome development.

Wood stoves making a comeback

To combat rising prices for oil and natural gas, homeowners have turned to wood as an alternative fuel. Some choose fireplaces; others, the old-fashioned cast-iron stove.

"Heating with wood is no longer something done by New Hampshire farmers and backwoodsmen from Maine with Franklin stoves," says one manufacturer. "Wood stoves are becoming more and more common in city and suburban homes, and their design has become quite a bit more sophisticated," he adds.

Three days of seminars here recently sponsored by the Wood Energy Institute of Vermont drew some 200 industry representatives from 31 states and Canada and between 50 and 75 exhibitors at a coinciding trade show. There are some 400 wood-stove manufacturers in the United States, according to the institute.

ALMOST EVERY manufacturer and dealer interviewed at the conference said demand has far outstripped supply.

Many American consumers apparently are attracted to wood heating by the following equation: the heating content of one cord of seasoned hardwood (a stack four feet by four feet by eight feet) equals about the same as that of 150 gallons of heating oil.

In the Boston area, 150 gallons of home heating oil will probably cost between $75 and $80 this winter. A cord of hardwood is expected to cost from $40 to $70. The farther away from the city you get, the cheaper the wood. The cost of wood heat falls dramatically for stove owners who decide to gather their own wood.

Thomas Rose, marketing specialist for a new American wood-stove manufacturer in Michigan, says, "We're at the point where some of our dealers can't promise their customers one of our stoves because we just can't make them fast enough. If we could take 3,000 stoves a week off our assembly line we still couldn't meet the demand."

SOME MANUFACTURERS skipped the seminars here because they had sold out for this winter and next, said Andrew B. Shapiro, president of the Wood Energy Institute.

Of particular significance at the conference was the large number of American manufacturers. The wood stove market in the past has been dominated by "Scandinavian airtights," stoves imported principally from Norway and Sweden and which used controlled air drafts to burn the wood slowly for maximum heat.

Traditional American stoves — potbellies, Franklins, and large cookstoves — often have been regarded as romantic but inefficient. They heat better than fireplaces, but most of the heat still goes up the stovepipe.

But that is changing. "It's taken a while, but Americans have finally come around to designing much more efficient, air-tight stoves," says one U.S. manufacturer.

Shapiro, of the Wood Energy Institute, estimates wood-stove sales this year at around 400,000.

"But that's with an average $300 per stove and doesn't include any of the accessories (such as stove pipes) and installation costs. You could buy a $300 stove and pay $700 for installation and pipe," he says.

HOFFMAN HOMES

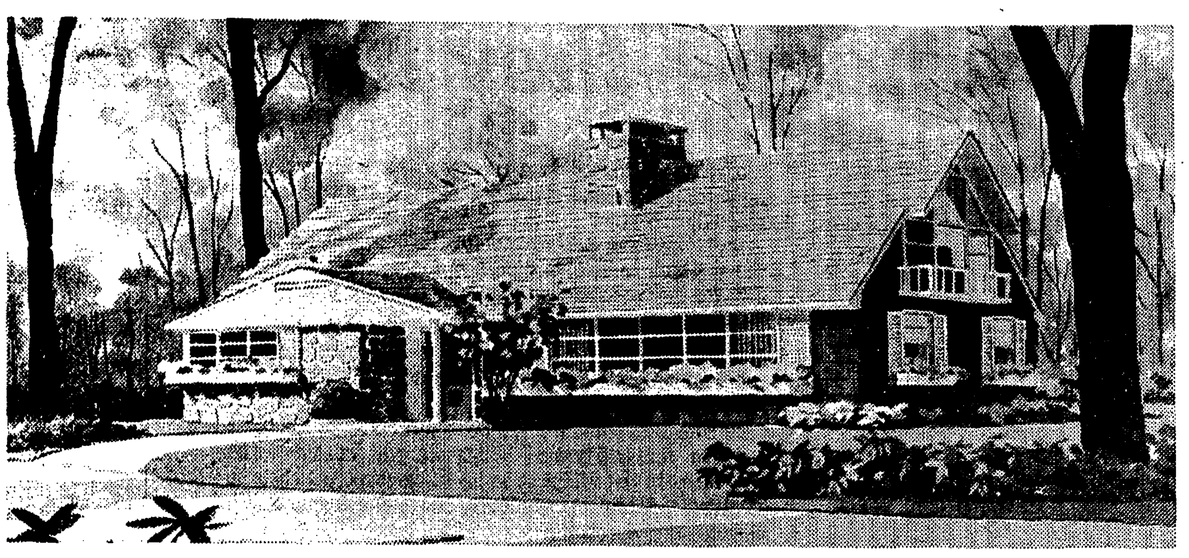
Versatile home for 1 or 2 families



There is an extra income possibility in this unusually attractive and livable 1½-story home. It can be built either as a two-family house or, if desired, as an especially roomy one-family home.

What ever the choice, both floors offer spacious livability. The versatile second story offers multiple possibilities — extra income, private living space for in-laws, or simply to give the family two additional bedrooms and bathrooms with many outstanding features.

In the one-family version, the architect provided an outstandingly luxurious bedroom suite complete with a lavish bath-dressing room combination, optional fireplace and private balcony. Size of the actual bedroom is a large 18 by 13 feet. Another complete bathroom serves the fourth bedroom which also has a separate dressing room and big closets.

Jean-Paul Saint-Michel

Home of your own

THE TWO-FAMILY plan is equally imaginative. Each floor has its own private foyer, with an additional common foyer serving as a convenient traffic hub. Placement of the stairway to the basement, off the common foyer, gives both families access to below-grade storage and utilities.

The second-floor apartment has an efficient step-saving kitchen with close-by compact dining space. The living room is good sized; the balcony and fireplace add to its pleasant livability.

Outstanding in the plan for the first floor is the big, efficient, well-equipped kitchen, which features two countertop cooking units, built-in oven and lavish counter space.

Most of the meal preparation facilities are concentrated in a U-shape arrangement, including one of the surface cooking units. Snack space adjoins the kitchen with the dining room just beyond that, making for convenience when serving meals. From the dining room, sliding glass doors lead to an outdoor living terrace.

Highlights of the big living room are its fireplace and the long attractive front window. Traffic circulation, aided by the foyers and hall, is excellent. The bedrooms are good-sized with extensive storage facilities. A double lavatory increases the efficiency of the bathroom.

Stone and shingles are combined to present a pleasing exterior appearance. The roof in front is unbroken by dormers, giving the impression of greater length and a low-to-ground modern look. The front entry is sheltered by a small porch.

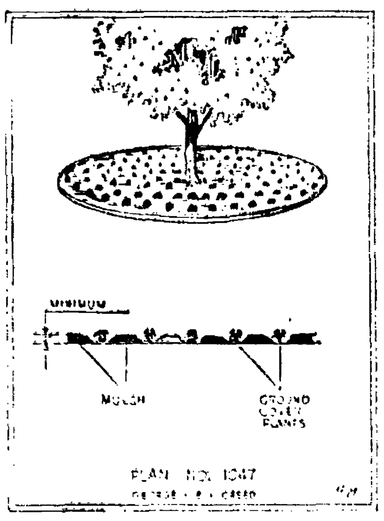
Ground cover can reduce mowing

Ground cover plants are useful in many ways in your landscape. You can use them to reduce your lawn area and cut down on mowing; you can plant certain kinds where shade is too great for growing grass; you can use them to control erosion on slopes and you can plant them simply for their attractive qualities.

One important thing to remember about ground cover plants is that once you have planted them, you can't just walk away and forget them.



George Creed

It's your landscape

While areas covered with ground covers do not require the attention you have to give lawns, they still require moisture and nutrients and occasional weeding. They also may need spraying for insects and plant diseases.

In the plan the upper sketch shows newly set out ground cover plants beneath a tree — a not uncommon use for them especially where tree shade is heavy. You will note that the plants are fairly evenly spaced. You may ask how you determine the spacing in a planting such as this. The answer is that much depends on how quickly you want a solid cover, how rapidly each plant will grow and the size when planted.

With several roses such as the Memorial and Max Graf, often used on slopes, you can space them two to three feet apart and get good results, all other factors being equal. You can space smaller ground covers such as myrtle, bugle and pachysandra six to 12 inches apart and English ivy nine to 12 inches apart. With each of these the closer spacing will result in a quicker and denser cover.

Once you have attained a dense, well-established cover of plants, weeds usually are a minor problem but at the outset they can be a first class headache.

To avoid weedy growth in a ground cover bed it is essential to mulch heavily between plants. The lower sketch shows a cross section of part of a ground cover planting showing mulch used this way. Shredded tree bark, wood chips, corn cobs and peanut hulls are excellent for this purpose.

Interior decorators have corner on design market

by MARILYN HOFFMAN

New York—Cluttered corner destroy the serenity and balance of a room. Well-decorated corners mean that objects are arranged and organized to make compositional impact. Then they become competent "finishing touches" that add to the atmosphere and over-all interest of a room.

Actually, says Elizabeth Matthews, New York interior designer, "Nothing can make a room look more perennially untidy than a lot of little things tossed, without thought as to size, scale or arrangement into defenseless corners.

"To give a corner importance, think through what you want it to say," says Miss Matthews, "then arrange little vignettes of objects until they make a strong statement and are harmonious in relationship. Some people have the knack of doing this naturally. Some have to work hard to cultivate it. But it develops with practice."

IF YOU ENJOY living with plants, advises Miss Matthews, cluster them in a well-lighted corner, arrange them at different levels, possibly, but instead of dotting them around a room, let one corner become a veritable forest of foliage.

The Kitchen corner shown here was done by John Elmo, in a modern Manhattan high-rise. The designer converted a nondescript corner left vacant of cabinets to allow open space in front of the one window into a nifty desk-work area with handy phone, wall clock and wall arrangement of framed photographs, lithographs and paintings on the subject of food and eating.

Elmo used wall covering and coordinated fabric of his own design for South Bay Corporation to cover walls, stool and for a Roman shade which covers window. This is one example of what can be done to enhance a left-over corner and make it add a functional and attractive new dimension to a kitchen.

Elmo often used a two-foot-wide panel of floor-to-ceiling mirror to take the onus of narrowness off a long room. By placing the mirror panel in a corner at right angles to a window wall it visually expands and lightens the room by reflection. He even gets a reflective glow at night from the mirror panel by softly lighting it with a cannister lamp on the floor.

Because many room arrangements are freestanding in the cenger of a room, corners become even more important elements, says Elmo. Whatever goes into them by way of sculpture or plants or globe or pots or baskets must not look squashed nor crowded nor in any way impede the normal flow of traffic through a room.

OBJECTS MUST have breathing room and it is wise to leave some corners entirely empty, also to allow more airy breathing space. Handsome folding screens make magnificent contributions to bare corners and they give rich background as well to sofa and chair groupings. They also provide valuable storage space behind those folding panels.

Thomas Kenney of Saffron House, Charlestown, Mass., shows in his dressing room (shown here) how to give distinction to a mundane dressing room. With diagonally placed art deco dressing table, mirror, and chair, and bold wallpaper, he fills a tight corner dramatically and pulls the eye to the sunroom beyond.

Kenney says he usually leaves all corners completely free until the basic decorating is finished. Then he sits down with a client and analyzes the job and decides what is to be added and what corners are to be filled. Only then does he add a piece of sculpture, a cluster of plants, or a beautiful jug or jar or basket. Often he and his client agree to leave a few corners bare until they find exactly the right objects to place in them. That might take months or years, but this Boston Designer's contention is that it is far better to leave some free space to fill than to have no space at all when some treasure is acquired later.

Windbreak effective energy saver

by MICHAEL J. CONLON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new government study has reaffirmed the value of one of the most ancient energy savings devices, the windbreak.

While that type of shelter may have little relevance for back-to-back city houses, homes elsewhere with just a little room and exposure to the direction of prevailing winter winds may benefit considerably.

The National Bureau of Standards study says an evaluation in South Dakota showed an electrically-heated house protected by a windbreak used about 34 per cent less energy during the winter than a similar unprotected house in the vicinity.

A SECOND study in Nebraska showed 23 per cent savings for the protected house. In both cases, internal temperatures of 70 degrees were maintained.

Here are some points the study makes about windbreaks of trees, slatted fences or whatever:

"The most effective location for a windbreak is upwind a distance of one and a half to two and a half times the height of the building. At this distance the wind will be deflected up and well over the building, reducing the pushing action on the building's windward side and pulling action on its leeward side.

"A windbreak is more effective if it allows part of the wind to penetrate. A solid windbreak creates a low pressure area on its leeward side with . . . strong eddy currents. These may be as destructive as direct wind in eroding the still air film at the surface of the window. Allowing a portion of the wind to pass through the windbreak tends to relieve this leeward suction.

"PREVAILING WINTER winds come from a different direction than prevailing summer winds in much of the United States. Therefore, a windbreak can be placed to divert winter wind away from a building without interfering with summer breezes.

"Heat transmission through windows can be reduced by diminishing the amount of wind flowing across the glass. Glass is a good conductor of heat and . . . affords little impediment to heat flow . . . a still layer of air at the surface of the glass does retard heat flow. Blocking the wind will protect this boundary layer of air from the scouring force of wind."

The study estimates it will cost about $2 per linear foot to build a windbreak out of American arborvitae. A six-foot-high fence made of boards staggered on either side of a two-by-four costs about $33 per eight-foot section, it adds.

The study, in book form, includes maps showing prevailing winds, and tips on shades, awnings, blinds and other winter and summer heating and cooling aids.

It notes that outside shutters that actually close to keep out heat or light are a valuable energy saver that have been neglected or largely replaced by decorative imitations that don't really work.

It adds that a white canvas or aluminum awning reflects 70 to 91 per cent of the sunlight, compared with a green awning that may reflect only 21 to 27 per cent of the light.

The book is available for $3.75 a copy from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Ask for "Window Design Strategies to Conserve Energy."

These may be as destructive as direct wind in eroding the still air film at the surface of the window. Allowing a portion of the wind to pass through the windbreak tends to relieve this leeward suction.

"PREVAILING WINTER winds come from a different direction than prevailing summer winds in much of the United States. Therefore, a windbreak can be placed to divert winter wind away from a building without interfering with summer breezes.

"Heat transmission through windows can be reduced by diminishing the amount of wind flowing across the glass. Glass is a good conductor of heat and . . . affords little impediment to heat flow . . . a still layer of air at the surface of the glass does retard heat flow. Blocking the wind will protect this boundary layer of air from the scouring force of wind."

The study estimates it will cost about $2 per linear foot to build a windbreak out of American arborvitae. A six-foot-high fence made of boards staggered on either side of a two-by-four costs about $33 per eight-foot section, it adds.

The study, in book form, includes maps showing prevailing winds, and tips on shades, awnings, blinds and other winter and summer heating and cooling aids.

It notes that outside shutters that actually close to keep out heat or light are a valuable energy saver that have been neglected or largely replaced by decorative imitations that don't really work.

It adds that a white canvas or aluminum awning reflects 70 to 91 per cent of the sunlight, compared with a green awning that may reflect only 21 to 27 per cent of the light.

The book is available for $3.75 a copy from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Ask for "Window Design Strategies to Conserve Energy."

Crafty directions slow handymen

by PETER COSTA

Because of the high price of carpenters, plumbers and other artisans, a growing group of Americans has decided to join the ranks of the do-it-yourselfers.

And catering to this large consumer group is an array of how-to magazines describing virtually every facet of craftsmanship, from attic remodeling to zeppelin repair for the hobbyist.

But if your home workshop is like most novice do-it-yourselfers' and consists of your kitchen table for a workbench and your daughter's footstool for a sawhorse, completing one of the "easy" and "fun-to-do" handyman projects described in the magazines is like trying to build an intercontinental missile with an adz.

THE WOODWORKING projects particularly are fascinating. They usually read something like this:

You too can build a classy, contemporary bar in just one weekend with tools found in the average workshop and at moderate cost.

First select two, both-sides-good, four-by-eight panels of Philippine mahogany and 43 linear feet of kiln-dried Bavarian heartwood. Make sure you use Bavarian stock because American heartwood has a tendency to warp, and in years to come your bar could develop a noticeable tilt.

After cutting the panels to the proper dimensions, run them through a jointer to get the edges perfectly square. You may want to turn the legs of the bar on your lathe and design your own turnings. We recommend using fruitwood alternating with basswood for an interesting effect.

THE SHELVES of the bar should be dadoed into place to allow them to support the weight of liquor bottles and glasses. The dadoes can be cut with a router or with an English rebate plane, which you can buy from any woodworking shop that imports British tools.

The top of the bar should be constructed with attention to detail since it will be stared at for long periods of time.

We chose to inlay light and dark pieces of rosewood, Malaysian teak, beechwood and cherry and to sand, seal and lacquer the top with 14 coats of spray-finish polyeurethene. Of course, you may not want to follow as elaborate a design as the one we used — a 1-88th scale-down of the Sistine Chapel — but make sure you choose one that expresses your individuality.

For good measure, and to protect the bar from the many spills it will receive, wax the top with bowling-alley paste wax until you can see your face in it. Then sit back and relax and enjoy the fruits of a weekend well-spent.

Yes, you concede, and after taking a look at your one-claw-missing hammer and your Japanese-made coping saw, you viciously begin building your ninth birdhouse.

Poor planning a landscape error

That expensive landscaping you installed several years ago now leaves something to be desired. Your evergreens are losing their needles. That willow tree is cracking up your patio. You're constantly having to trim bushes and shrubs to keep them from overgrowing your house.

"These are all indications of failure in planning, the most common mistake in landscaping made by homeowners," said Dick Brickman, president of Theodore Brickman Co., Long Grove, landscape architects and contractors.

Based on the work the company does for shopping centers, large housing developments, hospitals, office buildings, hotels and motels, Brickman said these are the kinds of things the average homeowner may do wrong:

• Not taking the physical aspects of the site into account. Translated, this means disregarding the slope of the land, drainage, location of walks and driveways and similar factors.

"Sloping sites are a challenge," Brickman said. "Often they can be effectively dealt with by building retaining walls of wood or stone. Unless the slope is handled properly, it can lead to erosion, water problems and trouble in mowing."

The landscape plan must take into consideration the orientation of the house to the site, amount of sunshine and shade the site receives, prevailing winds, and whatever nearby factors — such as a busy street that produces noise and air pollution — may affect plants.

Some sites have wet spots that nothing seems to cure. For these, the owner might try certain shrubs and trees that tolerate such conditions.

You also have to be careful in keeping plant materials away from walks and driveways that are apt to be treated with salt or other ice-melting chemicals in the winter, he said, because these chemicals can injure or kill plants.

If you plant grass near walks and driveways, it's a good idea to work gypsum into the soil. Gypsum opens the soil, permitting the salt to wash through quickly beneath the root zone before it has a chance to do any damage.

• Making the wrong choice of informal versus formal design. In a formal design, most of the lines are straight, and the planting pattern usually is symmetrical. Formal design requires continuous maintenance — clipping, edging, trimming — to look right.

"There's nothing wrong with formal design, as long as you realize it will require considerable maintenance to keep looking its best," Brickman said.

Informal design tries to imitate nature. Plants are spaced randomly. There are no straight lines. Trees and shrubs grow randomly, without close trimming. The advantage here is less maintenance, although the maintenance that must be done, such as pruning, has to be done correctly.

• Not being aware of the growing habits of plants. This mistake may take one or more of several forms:

Planting specimens too close to the house. As a result, the plants quickly cover doorways and windows.

Selecting cheap but fast-growing specimens that require frequent clipping. Alpine currant, for instance, costs twice as much as privet. But an alpine currant hedge needs trimming every five or six weeks, compared with privet which needs trimming every two or three weeks.

Putting shallow-rooted plants, such as willows and maples, next to paved areas and drain lines. These plants will cause paving to crack and can clog the drains.

Planting nuisance specimens. Included here are trees that drop fruit and trees with large leaves. While such trees have their place, you'd do best to avoid them in areas where people congregate, such as on patios and terraces, Brickman said.

Also keep plants with thorns away from walks and driveways. And if dogs are a problem, keep this in mind when you plant evergreens, or you'll be faced with need to replace burned-out evergreens.

• Not selecting horticulturally correct plants. Plants must be suited to the climate, soil and particular location. That plant you saw in the catalog may have been grown in a different geographic location than yours and may fail to thrive where you plant it. You need expert advice from a reputable nurseryman, landscape contractor, or landscape architect to make the right selection.

• Not taking maintenance into account. A lot depends on who will do the maintenance: yourself, a neighbor's son or a professional landscape organization. A lot also depends on how much you're willing to spend on maintenance.

"The more elaborate your landscaping plan, chances are the more maintenance it will require," Brickman said. "If you want to keep maintenance to a minimum, keep your plan simple."

"Taking time to plan before landscaping is probably the single thing which can save you time and money in the long run," Brickman said.

Eat the leaves and plant the roots— 'living lettuce' wave of future

Is there life after lettuce?

You bet!

I stumbled some months ago on a test market outlet for "living lettuce." It was the first time I had ever seen lettuce with roots left on offered for sale in a produce department.

After using the inner leaves for dinner said, I set the remainder of the plant in my garden, and darned if it didn't start growing again! It is a pleasure to find a supermarket vegetable marketed this way. It can save the consumer money if it lives to grow again.

HYDROCULTURE Inc., the company that markets " living lettuce," has done no reasearch on the replanting angle, but others have told them, as I have found, that this Ostinata, bibb-type lettuce, adapts well to replanting in garden soils, although the greens originally were grown hydroponically(soil-less, in a water-borne nutrient solution).

Mary B. Good

Potting shed

The principle feature of the lettuce, the Hydroculture people believe, is that for the first time the housewife can buy a living vegetable, rather than one that is dying and on its way to decay. Such a product has a 600 per cent increase in shelf life over comparable varieties grown conventionally in soil, according to tests.

Although soil-less growing is not revolutionary — remember how your sweet potatoes grew in water — hydroponic culture on a commercial basis is new, and in combination with controlled environment growing is newer still. The Hydroculture people have a patent pending on the "living lettuce" growing process and marketing method.

IN A WORLD engaged in a population-food race, hydroponics offers concentrated per-acre production: In one "Magic Garden" growing unit 26 by 128 feet, 10,000 heads of lettuce can be produced every 28 to 35 days, depending on the variety.

Commercial hydroponic growing uses minimum water: In the process developed by this company, growing units save 90 to 97 per cent of the water needed to grow field crops, using re-cycled water. The third plus for water-grown vegetables is that no arable land is required. A given area will grow 30 times as much lettuce as the yield of the land. (The company's home complex in Glendale, Ariz., is built on a former city landfill.)

With a nearly perfect growing environment provided by their patented growing chambers regulating temperature, humidity, air circulation, plant feeding and water conditioning by computerized controls, it's no wonder the crops grow faster than field crops.

Imagine the commercial possibilities of raising strawberries, asparagus, corn, squash, green beans, melons, eggplant, snow peas and other vegetables this space-age way!

Equipment manufactured by the Hydroculture people that produces 960 pounds of grass feed per day for animal consumption in a self-contained walk-in chamber currently is in use at the Lincoln Park and Brookfield zoos. The company expects to aid in developing hydroponic growing systems to supply fresh vegetables aboard ships and submarines.

The whole concept is a mind-bender. M. L. Lentz, president of this company, said he expects to be shipping "living lettuce" to Chicago by October or November. You'll be most likely to find the lettuce with roots on it at the larger supermarket chains.

TEN THOUSAND HEADS of lettuce grow without soil in a space 26 by 128 feet. It would take 30 times as much acreage to grow the same amount of lettuce outdoors in the field. Growing racks contain a water-borne nutrient solution; gravel supports the plants.

Redoing house allows for personal expression

Your home

So you can't afford a new house, sparkling condominium or new apartment. Join the crowd! The new motto around town is "Redo," and most of us feel really virtuous when we get involved in a project that saves a faithful old structure.

Old houses are not necessarily good houses, but they're there.

The first guideline is to forget the exterior character of the house. For example, it might be red brick, concrete block or wood frame with shingles — the interior need not reflect any of these structural qualities. The somber exterior could explode inside with daylight, sheer curtains, reed blinds, a rainbow of color and pillow furniture.

A Victorian-age or 1920s stucco could be converted to a country cousin by the use of wood prefinished panels, iron light fixtures and breadracks, plus wicker furniture in white or colors.

ONCE YOU BREAK away from the idea of matching inside to outside, set your budget goals. If you can spend $1,000 over the next year, allocate about one-third of that to physical changes in the house.

Paint, wallcoverings and floorcovering offer big impact, even where furniture is not of heirloom quality. The house shown today is an inspiration drawn from the July/August issue of 1001 Decorating Ideas. Here carpet squares have been laid in an abstract harlequin pattern in colors of blue, green and brown.

The doctor says

Questions, answers about hysterectomy

My doctor has informed me I need a hysterectomy and I would like to ask a few questions.

Will there be any changes in the body other than not being able to have periods? Will I have a tendency to gain weight? Should sex relations be the same except for not having to worry about pregnancy? I've never had a problem.

Will I get nervous and jittery when it would be time for a period normally? Will I still get migraine headaches? I only get them near my periods. Will I have to be on any medication and if so for how long? Will I have to use a lubricant? I don't need one now.

I have four children and have always had heavy periods. So I'm looking forward to this operation and I'm positive I'm going to get along fine and feel better for it. I like sex.

With the healthy attitude you have you should do very well. Attitude has a lot to do with how well women do after such operations.

If the uterus alone is removed and the ovaries are left in place, undamaged by surgery, you should continue to react as you always have except for the absence of menstruation. The uterus is not an endocrine organ. It does not form hormones. Female characteristics are related to female hormones from the ovaries, and after they quit functioning, the adrenal glands. The uterus has nothing to do with it.

Confusion arises from two facts. The doctor may remove the ovaries at the time of a hysterectomy. In that case the woman may need replacement female hormones, depending upon the amount of hormones and type produced by her adrenal glands. The other fact is that women who need a hysterectomy are often approaching the menopause. The ovaries would quit functioning about that time with or without an operation. Ovarian function stops just as surely as if the surgeon removed them.

If a woman's ovaries are healthy and still functioning and are not removed, simply removing the uterus should have very little effect on the body at all. If your ovaries are left in you should be the same except for a lack of periods. Unfortunately that will include the nervous tension you speak of and the migraine headaches.

Some doctors believe that when a hysterectomy is needed in a woman approaching the menopause it is better to remove the ovaries too. The idea is based on the fact that the ovaries will not serve any further useful purpose once they have become inactive with the menopause. They remain only as a possible source of cancer. The advantages of a few more months or even a couple more years of ovarian function compared to the dangers of ovarian cancer may not justify leaving them behind. Ovarian cancer is one of the most difficult cancers to detect early and to treat. The hormonal functions of the ovaries can be adequately replaced.

Two products remove pet hair on furniture

Dear Roberta: The wet paper towel tip for removing animal hair from clothing and furniture didn't work for me. The paper shredded before I got up much hair. I know you have pets because your mother sometimes wrote about stains they'd caused. What do you do about the hair? — Alma Grier

Until recently, anyone who looked at the slacks I often wear knew instantly I shared quarters with long-haired white creatures. I've now discovered two products that speedily remove the hair. One is an English-made double-sided rectangular rubber animal brush, about the size of a bar of bath soap. The short-bristled side in fine for upsholstery, bedspreads, and tough fabrics. For delicate fabrics, look in a drugstore or auto supply store for another double-sided import. It's a Swiss-made auto sponge/scrubber. The round edged soft side works wonders. Don't wet it to wipe off hair. Stubborn hairs that remain can be removed quickly with cellophane or masking tape wrapped around one's fingers.

For Energy Savers: Most households don't need the water heater to be set higher than 140 degrees. In fact, those without dishwashers could do nicely with the temperature set at 120. Dishwashers with a "sterile" setting have a device within their mechanism to heat water to very high temperatures. Thus, there's no connection between your water heater setting and the "sterile" feature. Every 10-degree reduction on your basement heater setting costs several percentage points.

Dear Roberta: Do you have a recipe that would duplicate the frozen yogurt that is sold commercially? — G. H.

No, but perhaps a reader will provide one.

Dear Roberta: In the restroom of an elegant restaurant I recently went to was a display of a most delightful plant. It had tiny, bright-green leaves that formed a dense mat, and its streamers flowed over container edges. Could you possibly tell me from this not-too-precise description what the plant was? And why was it thriving in a room with very little light? — Mrs. Walter Castle

I'd bet that was Irish Moss, also called Baby's Tears. This charming, moss-like creeper would prosper in and beautify a bathroom. The high humidity there would provide the considerable amount of moisture it needs, and this plant doesn't like to be directly watered. Since it prefers filtered light or light shade, it was enjoying ideal conditions where you saw it. You shouldn't have trouble finding this plant at a nursery.

(Mrs. Mathews welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, 60006.

The doctor says

Questions, answers about hysterectomy

My doctor has informed me I need a hysterectomy and I would like to ask a few questions.

Will there be any changes in the body other than not being able to have periods? Will I have a tendency to gain weight? Should sex relations be the same except for not having to worry about pregnancy? I've never had a problem.

Will I get nervous and jittery when it would be time for a period normally? Will I still get migraine headaches? I only get them near my periods. Will I have to be on any medication and if so for how long? Will I have to use a lubricant? I don't need one now.

I have four children and have always had heavy periods. So I'm looking forward to this operation and I'm positive I'm going to get along fine and feel better for it. I like sex.

With the healthy attitude you have you should do very well. Attitude has a lot to do with how well women do after such operations.

If the uterus alone is removed and the ovaries are left in place, undamaged by surgery, you should continue to react as you always have except for the absence of menstruation. The uterus is not an endocrine organ. It does not form hormones. Female characteristics are related to female hormones from the ovaries, and after they quit functioning, the adrenal glands. The uterus has nothing to do with it.

Confusion arises from two facts. The doctor may remove the ovaries at the time of a hysterectomy. In that case the woman may need replacement female hormones, depending upon the amount of hormones and type produced by her adrenal glands. The other fact is that women who need a hysterectomy are often approaching the menopause. The ovaries would quit functioning about that time with or without an operation. Ovarian function stops just as surely as if the surgeon removed them.

If a woman's ovaries are healthy and still functioning and are not removed, simply removing the uterus should have very little effect on the body at all. If your ovaries are left in you should be the same except for a lack of periods. Unfortunately that will include the nervous tension you speak of and the migraine headaches.

Some doctors believe that when a hysterectomy is needed in a woman approaching the menopause it is better to remove the ovaries too. The idea is based on the fact that the ovaries will not serve any further useful purpose once they have become inactive with the menopause. They remain only as a possible source of cancer. The advantages of a few more months or even a couple more years of ovarian function compared to the dangers of ovarian cancer may not justify leaving them behind. Ovarian cancer is one of the most difficult cancers to detect early and to treat. The hormonal functions of the ovaries can be adequately replaced.

Two products remove pet hair on furniture

Dear Roberta: The wet paper towel tip for removing animal hair from clothing and furniture didn't work for me. The paper shredded before I got up much hair. I know you have pets because your mother sometimes wrote about stains they'd caused. What do you do about the hair? — Alma Grier

Until recently, anyone who looked at the slacks I often wear knew instantly I shared quarters with long-haired white creatures. I've now discovered two products that speedily remove the hair. One is an English-made double-sided rectangular rubber animal brush, about the size of a bar of bath soap. The short-bristled side in fine for upsholstery, bedspreads, and tough fabrics. For delicate fabrics, look in a drugstore or auto supply store for another double-sided import. It's a Swiss-made auto sponge/scrubber. The round edged soft side works wonders. Don't wet it to wipe off hair. Stubborn hairs that remain can be removed quickly with cellophane or masking tape wrapped around one's fingers.

For Energy Savers: Most households don't need the water heater to be set higher than 140 degrees. In fact, those without dishwashers could do nicely with the temperature set at 120. Dishwashers with a "sterile" setting have a device within their mechanism to heat water to very high temperatures. Thus, there's no connection between your water heater setting and the "sterile" feature. Every 10-degree reduction on your basement heater setting costs several percentage points.

Dear Roberta: Do you have a recipe that would duplicate the frozen yogurt that is sold commercially? — G. H.

No, but perhaps a reader will provide one.

Dear Roberta: In the restroom of an elegant restaurant I recently went to was a display of a most delightful plant. It had tiny, bright-green leaves that formed a dense mat, and its streamers flowed over container edges. Could you possibly tell me from this not-too-precise description what the plant was? And why was it thriving in a room with very little light? — Mrs. Walter Castle

I'd bet that was Irish Moss, also called Baby's Tears. This charming, moss-like creeper would prosper in and beautify a bathroom. The high humidity there would provide the considerable amount of moisture it needs, and this plant doesn't like to be directly watered. Since it prefers filtered light or light shade, it was enjoying ideal conditions where you saw it. You shouldn't have trouble finding this plant at a nursery.

'Young Joe' another Kennedy saga

"Young Joe, The Forgotten Kennedy" affords one of many glimpses the American public will have of the intriguing, aristrocratic Kennedy clan through television specials and films this season.

It seems the public thirst for knowledge about this country's unofficial royalty is never quenched. Since the 1930s, it seems that we've celebrated their successes and grieved their losses.

But perhaps Joseph Kennedy Jr.'s story is one that never was understood by an America that has been preoccupied with war since his untimely and violent death in 1945.

Peter Strauss as Young Joe

HIS STORY, to be presented in a special two hour ABC movie Sunday at 8 p.m. on Channel 7, is based on Hank Searl's biography, "The Lost Prince: Young Joe, The Forgotten Kennedy," an account constructed with the close help of the Kennedy family.

It is as sensitive, dignified and painful a version of young Joe's brief chance at life as the family could desire. Although, matriarchal head, Rose Kennedy, asked to read the movie script only after the show's production, the family purposely has stayed out of the picture.

Actor Peter Strauss, who portrays Joseph Kennedy Jr., and others who produced the dramatic special assure an authenticity and relay a "true" story.

STRAUSS WAS ABLE to uncover a personal diary that John F. Kennedy had composed recalling his brother, Joe, shortly after his death. Several news film clips showing Joseph with his father at the Court of St. James in England and at Squantum Air Force Base during his tour of duty along with a short voice track of young Joe placing a name into nomination during the 1936 Democratic convention were all that Strauss had to go on in recreating the essence of Joseph Kennedy Jr.

"I reread the script and went over the tapes many times in search of the core of his character. Then, suddenly, I began to detect a kind of hesitation and discomfort in the way he talked and acted," Strauss said during a recent visit to Chicago.

"I came to understand that he was a young man from a powerful and rich family who was forced to mature faster than he wanted and forced to live out a family legacy and dream on the constant prodding of his father," he said. "Understanding that about Joe Kennedy helped me to justify why he would fall in love with an older woman and volunteer without hesitation to fly a death mission."

THE STORY OF Joe Kennedy is powerful, and proof that fiction never can be more shocking, absurd or as touching as real life.

From a young age, the iron-fisted patriarch of the Kennedy family instilled a spirit of "playing to win" in his eldest son and namesake. You can be anything you want, but you must be the best, and you must be the country's first Irish-Catholic President, he tells his son.

By way of flashbacks much of the time, we see how Joseph Kennedy Sr. cultivated competition in his large family and created a sibling rivalry so intense it spanned everything from Joe stealing away his brother John's good-looking girlfriend to Joe's constant anguish and anxiety over never accomplishing as great a national notoriety in wartime as his PT boat commanding brother.

Joseph Kennedy Sr.'s stern insistence drove his eldest son to accept the dangerous, secret mission he knew he would not survive. He flew a B-24 bomber, filled to the hilt with explosives, close to a V-1 rocket development site in Germany. Kennedy and his copilot were to have parachuted before a sister B-25 bomber would take the plane over by remote control and crash it into the rocket site. To this day, no one knows why the B-24 exploded in midair, killing Kennedy and his crew.

STRAUSS DOES AN absolutely splendid job at capturing the Kennedy smile, dialect and drive. One of television's most promising actors at 30, having gained recent fame with his portrayal of Senator Rudy Jordache in two seasons of "Rich Man, Poor Man." Strauss lends a compassion and richness to the production.

At times, the movie is humorous. "I went up in that plane with the instructor in the scenes where Joe is first learning to fly," said Strauss "The stunt pilot was doing all sorts of aerobatics. When you look up and suddenly see cows and trees that aren't supposed to be there, you get a little sick in and out of character.

At other times, "Young Joe. . ."becomes a heartbreaker. The farewell scene between Kennedy and Vanessa (played by Barbara Parkins), his lover whose identity is well concealed in the film and book, is a real tear-jerker filled with unleashed human emotion. As Joe struggles with the decision to carry out the mission and prove himself a hero, Vanessa struggles to keep him in loving embrace.

"It's a story that is filled with love that was made with love.

"I ACCEPTED THE role because I knew it would make people laugh and then cry and then think," Strauss said.

Television's new love affair with the long-form drama, prompted by "Rich Man, Poor Man," is providing Strauss with a comfortable and successful platform for his talent, although he plans to make a change this fall by working on a comedy feature film in which he'll portray a boxer. "I'm doing it to show all those who said I couldn't do comedy that I can," he said.

But drama with a message is where Strauss' heart really lies. As lucky as he was to have had "Rich Man, Poor Man" as a springboard for his career, television in turn, is lucky to have such an articulate, sensitive and talented actor available.

"I enjoyed doing Rudy Jordache and I decided to end that role because of where the writers were taking the character. I was unhappy toward the end with the show, and I wanted the character to die with dignity," said Strauss, who was a student at Northwestern University's School of Speech from 1965 to 1969. "If I can make people happy or sad with a character I portray, then I've accomplished something. I just want people to appreciate the work I can do in other roles."

Public TV focuses on the students

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Desegregation is one of those issues that parents battle over outside of their children's schools while the kids sit by trying to figure out what to do.

Well, the students will finally have their say about racially mixed classrooms in a new Chicago produced television series that premiers Monday at 6 p.m. on WTTW, Channel 11.

The public boradcasting series, "As We See It," will air Mondays through Fridays for seven weeks and will give students from the across the country a chance to express their viewpoints on such topics as interracial dating, student peer pressure, open housing and busing.

A WTTW FILM crew this year visited students in Chicago, Austin, Texas, Boston, Evanston, Miami and San Francisco, talking to a total of 175 high school students who are undergoing desegregation in their own schools.

The documentary utilizes dialogue, skits, satires and film segments to examine the students' points of view on these sensitive issues.

The interviews cover problems dealing with Asian-Americans on the West Coast, Native-Americans in middle America, Cuban immigrants in Florida and blacks and whites in industrialized cities of the Northeast.

The series, which will be shown nationally on other public broadcasting stations. It was financed by WTTW and the U.S. Department of Helath, Education and Welfare (HEW) in an attempt to help reduce tensions inherent in newly integrated schools, station officials said.

ONE OF THE show's episodes will focus on Chicago's Roberto Clemente High School, which explore ways in which prejudice affects their lives.

Another of the show's 26 episodes will focus on some of the students involved in the 1971 court ordered desegregations of schools in portions of Pontiac, Mich., and how the experiences they had affected their lives.

The half-hour program is a special prelude to WTTW's new fall season which begins Oct. 9.

Van's 'Music Man' worth a 76 trombone salute

by SCOTT FOSDICK

A hit! A hit! Order your tickets now, because once the word leaks out, you'll have to sell your soul to get a seat at the Marriott Lincolnshire Theatre production of "The Music Man."

The show opened Thursday, and continues through Nov. 20. Believe me, it's fabulous.

I know, it sounds hard to believe. How could they take a fading nightclub singer like Bobby Van, find 20 other men, women and children, all of whom must be able to act, sing and dance, and stage an in-the-round production of Meredith Willson's small town spectacle–with just eight days to rehearse?

It takes acres of talent to create even a mediocre musical show. Van and company do the near impossible by putting on a performance that's slicker than Vaseline on a pump handle.

I APOLOGIZE to Bobby Van for thinking of him as a has-been. He obviously still-is, and probably will-be for years to come.

Van seems tailor-made for the part of Prof. Hill, the fast-talking shyster who convinces River City, Iowa, it needs a marching band and then proceeds to sell it the uniforms and instruments.

Mid-week review

In one beautifully choreographed scene Hill dances anl sings his heart out to a georgeously prim 'Maaaaaaarian, Madam Libraaaaaaarian" (as the song goes). It was absolute genius for Willson to set the seduction song in a public library. No place in America is so ripe with sexual tension.

THERE ARE other signs that "The Music Man" isn't your typical empty-headed musical, but you have to listen closely for them because they tend to get lost in the happy tunes.

One example pops up in a fleeting reference to Hester Prynne, stoic bearer of The Scarlet Letter ("A" for adulteress) in Hawthorne's classic by the same name. It comes during a song in which Hill proclaims his abhorrance of wide-eyed virginal women:

"I hope, and I pray, for Hester to win just one more 'A'! The sadder but wiser girl for me," he sings.

SUSAN GORDON-CLARK is delicious as the sadder-but-wiser librarian. Her understated croon conjures visions of corn-fed farm girls, and her face is a gorgeous blend of the two Hepburns: it's as handsome as Katherine's, yet as delicate as Audrey's.

The entire cast deserves praise, but there's space here for only a few: Young Bob Ackerman is adorable as lisping Winthrop Parco, and Mary Cobb is super as the matronly mayor's wife.

Best of all are the three young girls of River City, played by Suzanne M. Samorez, Susie Fenner and Nancy A. Lewandowski. They fling themselves through their dance numbers with precocious grace, and of course, they're cute as crickets.

I am not a great lover of musicals, but I couldn't keep from clapping in time with the rest of the audience as the final of "The Music Man." It'll warm cockles you never knew you had.

Domestic Ali back on the film set

by VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Ali MacGraw stopped her career cold four years ago "to avoid a scrambled life, to bring up my children and to give us a feeling of family solidarity."

In private life Ali is Mrs. Steve McQueen.

When she quit, Ali had made only three movies, but their collective impact on audiences and the box office probably was greater than any actress ever made in so brief a span.

The pictures "Goodbye, Columbus," "Love Story" and "The Getaway" have earned more than $200 million so far.

It took courage to stop. But it was a matter of priorities. There were more important things in her life than a career.

THE DECISION was made after she completed "The Getaway," in which she costarred and fell in love with McQueen. Thereafter both stars divorced their spouses, married and settled down above Malibu beach with Steve's son, Chad, now 16, and Ali's son, Joshua, now 6.

"I knew we had to make a family and provide security for ourselves and the boys," Ali said. "Yes, it was a gutsy decision. There was a lot at stake in view of the three successful pictures in a row. That's scary.

"However, there was no choice but to quit. It was a simple matter of the family being more important to me than work at that time."

ALI IS BACK at work now, costarring with Kris Kristofferson in "Convoy." The change of pace from domesticity clearly agrees with her.

The dark brown hair was curly and cut to within an inch of her classically chiseled head. The huge brown eyes crackled with vitality and enthusiasm.

"During the past four years we bought the beach house and I worked hard at redecorating it entirely," she said. "I drove the boys to school, took care of the house, did some cooking and all the rest. Gossips say Steve insisted I retire. That wasn't the case at all. I wanted it that way.

"In the last couple of years I felt a growing need to get back to work. It feels wonderful to act again. But I don't want to be just famous. I would like to be a good artist which will take time and effort."

OF THE HUNDREDS of scripts offered Ali, "Convoy" was the most appealing. She had worked with director Sam Peckinpah in "The Getaway" and she liked the story.

"I was terrified the first day back on the set," she said. "And I'm nervous before every scene. I wasn't scared at all in my first picture, 'Goodbye, Columbus.' I was so stupid I thought I could do no wrong.

"My reactions today are pure insecurity. I've never had formal training as an actress. And I can't take that sort of training now because I haven't the time. So it's up to me to work as hard as I possible can.

"This picture is important to me because of the strong feelings that exist about the fact that I've enjoyed a certain amount of success without paying the proper dues. There's a sort of prove-it-to-me attitude about it."

ALTHOUGH ALI may suffer insecurities on the set, she is convinced she will succeed one way or another at living her life fully. She exudes a calm resolve, a quiet confidence in her marriage and lifestyle.

"I'm happy and doing what I want to do. We live far enough from Hollywood that the geography allows us to lead a quiet family life. I have a wonderful marriage and children and now I'm working again.

"It is important for me to say I haven't all the answers. In fact, the only thing I'm sure of is that I know nothing."

Although Ali made the statement sincerely, one concludes she knows a great deal more than most actresses in Hollywood.

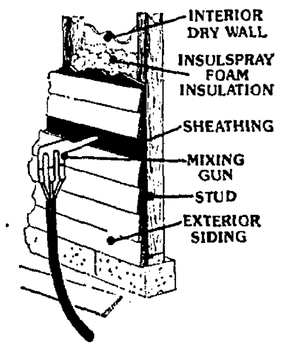
Don't Waste Fuel Dollars

First, some straight talk
Let's face it. It costs you more every year to heat or cool your home no matter what type of fuel you use. And chances are the cost will continue to rise. So, there's no better time than right now to insulate your home with Insulspray foam insulation.
Common sense will save you dollars.

Why Insulspray?
In most homes, more heat escapes through the walls than from anywhere else. New Insulspray foam insulation effectively reduces costly heat loss through walls as never before possible. In hot weather it works just as well to keep cool air in. Insulspray makes your home more comfortable to live in and much more economical to live with.

What is Insulspray?
Insulspray is a non-toxic, two-part insulation system made of liquid urea-formaldehyde resin plus a hardener containing a foaming agent.
The urea-formaldehyde and hardener are fed, under pressure, into a specifically designed mixing gun. The two components are ejected from the gun as a liquid foam consisting of millions of tiny air cells, highly effective in reducing heat loss in winter and heat intake in summer.

How is Insulspray installed?
Insulspray is installed from the outside, without mess, and usually in one day.
It is applied directly into the hollow stud space within the outer walls of your home. It flows up and down, around obstacles and fills every crack and crevice. Insulspray leaves no uninsulated pockets.
In a few days, the foam completely sets and forms a permanent insulating layer within the wall cavity.



What are the advantages?
First and foremost, Insulspray reduces costly heat loss through the walls of your home where it occurs most. It sets up a barrier to block the natural tendency of heat to flow from warm to cold surfaces of building materials. Consequently, your home stays warmer in winter, cooler in summer. And your fuel costs drop considerably.

'Young Joe' another Kennedy saga

"Young Joe, The Forgotten Kennedy" affords one of many glimpses the American public will have of the intriguing, aristrocratic Kennedy clan through television specials and films this season.

It seems the public thirst for knowledge about this country's unofficial royalty is never quenched. Since the 1930s, it seems that we've celebrated their successes and grieved their losses.

But perhaps Joseph Kennedy Jr.'s story is one that never was understood by an America that has been preoccupied with war since his untimely and violent death in 1945.

Peter Strauss as Young Joe

HIS STORY, to be presented in a special two hour ABC movie Sunday at 8 p.m. on Channel 7, is based on Hank Searl's biography, "The Lost Prince: Young Joe, The Forgotten Kennedy," an account constructed with the close help of the Kennedy family.

It is as sensitive, dignified and painful a version of young Joe's brief chance at life as the family could desire. Although, matriarchal head, Rose Kennedy, asked to read the movie script only after the show's production, the family purposely has stayed out of the picture.

Actor Peter Strauss, who portrays Joseph Kennedy Jr., and others who produced the dramatic special assure an authenticity and relay a "true" story.

STRAUSS WAS ABLE to uncover a personal diary that John F. Kennedy had composed recalling his brother, Joe, shortly after his death. Several news film clips showing Joseph with his father at the Court of St. James in England and at Squantum Air Force Base during his tour of duty along with a short voice track of young Joe placing a name into nomination during the 1936 Democratic convention were all that Strauss had to go on in recreating the essence of Joseph Kennedy Jr.

"I reread the script and went over the tapes many times in search of the core of his character. Then, suddenly, I began to detect a kind of hesitation and discomfort in the way he talked and acted," Strauss said during a recent visit to Chicago.

"I came to understand that he was a young man from a powerful and rich family who was forced to mature faster than he wanted and forced to live out a family legacy and dream on the constant prodding of his father," he said. "Understanding that about Joe Kennedy helped me to justify why he would fall in love with an older woman and volunteer without hesitation to fly a death mission."

THE STORY OF Joe Kennedy is powerful, and proof that fiction never can be more shocking, absurd or as touching as real life.

From a young age, the iron-fisted patriarch of the Kennedy family instilled a spirit of "playing to win" in his eldest son and namesake. You can be anything you want, but you must be the best, and you must be the country's first Irish-Catholic President, he tells his son.

By way of flashbacks much of the time, we see how Joseph Kennedy Sr. cultivated competition in his large family and created a sibling rivalry so intense it spanned everything from Joe stealing away his brother John's good-looking girlfriend to Joe's constant anguish and anxiety over never accomplishing as great a national notoriety in wartime as his PT boat commanding brother.

Joseph Kennedy Sr.'s stern insistence drove his eldest son to accept the dangerous, secret mission he knew he would not survive. He flew a B-24 bomber, filled to the hilt with explosives, close to a V-1 rocket development site in Germany. Kennedy and his co-pilot were to have parachuted before a sister B-25 bomber would take the plane over by remote control and crash it into the rocket site. To this day, no one knows why the B-24 exploded in midair, killing Kennedy and his crew.

STRAUSS DOES AN absolutely splendid job at capturing the Kennedy smile, dialect and drive. One of television's most promising actors at 30, having gained recent fame with his portrayal of Senator Rudy Jordache in two seasons of "Rich Man, Poor Man," Strauss lends a compassion and richness to the production.

At times, the movie is humorous. "I went up in that plane with the instructor in the scenes where Joe is first learning to fly," said Strauss "The stunt pilot was doing all sorts of aerobatics. When you look up and suddenly see cows and trees that aren't supposed to be there, you get a little sick in and out of character.

At other times, "Young Joe. . ."becomes a heartbreaker. The farewell scene between Kennedy and Vanessa (played by Barbara Parkins), his lover whose identity is well concealed in the film and book, is a real tear-jerker filled with unleashed human emotion. As Joe struggles with the decision to carry out the mission and prove himself a hero, Vanessa struggles to keep him in loving embrace.

"It's a story that is filled with love that was made with love.

"I ACCEPTED THE role because I knew it would make people laugh and then cry and then think," Strauss said.

Television's new love affair with the long-form drama, prompted by "Rich Man, Poor Man," is providing Strauss with a comfortable and successful platform for his talent, although he plans to make a change this fall by working on a comedy feature film in which he'll portray a boxer. "I'm doing it to show all those who said I couldn't do comedy that I can," he said.

But drama with a message is where Strauss' heart really lies. As lucky as he was to have had "Rich Man, Poor Man" as a springboard for his career, television in turn, is lucky to have such an articulate, sensitive and talented actor available.

"I enjoyed doing Rudy Jordache and I decided to end that role because of where the writers were taking the character. I was unhappy toward the end with the show, and I wanted the character to die with dignity," said Strauss, who was a student at Northwestern University's School of Speech from 1965 to 1969. "If I can make people happy or sad with a character I portray, then I've accomplished something. I just want people to appreciate the work I can do in other roles."

Van's 'Music Man' worth a 76 trombone salute

by SCOTT FOSDICK

A hit! A hit! Order your tickets now, because once the word leaks out, you'll have to sell your soul to get a seat at the Marriott Lincolnshire Theatre production of "The Music Man."

The show opened Thursday, and continues through Nov. 20. Believe me, it's fabulous.

I know, it sounds hard to believe. How could they take a fading nightclub singer like Bobby Van, find 20 other men, women and children, all of whom must be able to act, sing and dance, and stage an in-the-round production of Meredith Willson's small town spectacle–with just eight days to rehearse?

It takes acres of talent to create even a mediocre musical show. Van and company do the near impossible by putting on a performance that's slicker than Vaseline on a pump handle.

I APOLOGIZE to Bobby Van for thinking of him as a has-been. He obviously still-is, and probably will-be for years to come.

Van seems tailor-made for the part of Prof. Hill, the fast-talking shyster who convinces River City, Iowa, it needs a marching band and then proceeds to sell it the uniforms and instruments.

Mid-week review

In one beautifully choreographed scene Hill dances anl sings his heart out to a georgeously prim 'Maaaaaaarian, Madam Libraaaaaaarian" (as the song goes). It was absolute genius for Willson to set the seduction song in a public library. No place in America is so ripe with sexual tension.

THERE ARE other signs that "The Music Man" isn't your typical empty-headed musical, but you have to listen closely for them because they tend to get lost in the happy tunes.

One example pops up in a fleeting reference to Hester Prynne, stoic bearer of The Scarlet Letter ("A" for adulteress) in Hawthorne's classic by the same name. It comes during a song in which Hill proclaims his abhorrance of wide-eyed virginal women:

"I hope, and I pray, for Hester to win just one more 'A'! The sadder but wiser girl for me," he sings.

SUSAN GORDON-CLARK is delicious as the sadder-but-wiser librarian. Her understated croon conjures visions of corn-fed farm girls, and her face is a gorgeous blend of the two Hepburns: it's as handsome as Katherine's, yet as delicate as Audrey's.

The entire cast deserves praise, but there's space here for only a few: Young Bob Ackerman is adorable as lisping Winthrop Paroo, and Mary Cobb is super as the matronly mayor's wife.

Best of all are the three young girls of River City, played by Suzanne M. Samorez, Susie Fenner and Nancy A. Lewandowski. They fling themselves through their dance numbers with precocious grace, and of course, they're cute as crickets.

I am not a great lover of musicals, but I couldn't keep from clapping in time with the rest of the audience as the final of "The Music Man." It'll warm cockles you never knew you had.

Domestic Ali back on the film set

by VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Ali MacGraw stopped her career cold four years ago "to avoid a scrambled life, to bring up my children and to give us a feeling of family solidarity."

In private life Ali is Mrs. Steve McQueen.

When she quit, Ali had made only three movies, but their collective impact on audiences and the box office probably was greater than any actress ever made in so brief a span.

The pictures "Goodbye, Columbus," "Love Story" and "The Getaway" have earned more than $200 million so far.

It took courage to stop. But it was a matter of priorities. There were more important things in her life than a career.

THE DECISION was made after she completed "The Getaway," in which she costarred and fell in love with McQueen. Thereafter both stars divorced their spouses, married and settled down above Malibu beach with Steve's son, Chad, now 16, and Ali's son, Joshua, now 6.

"I knew we had to make a family and provide security for ourselves and the boys," Ali said. "Yes, it was a gutsy decision. There was a lot at stake in view of the three successful pictures in a row. That's scary.

"However, there was no choice but to quit. It was a simple matter of the family being more important to me than work at that time."

ALI IS BACK at work now, costarring with Kris Kristofferson in "Convoy." The change of pace from domesticity clearly agrees with her.

The dark brown hair was curly and cut to within an inch of her classically chiseled head. The huge brown eyes crackled with vitality and enthusiasm.

"During the past four years we bought the beach house and I worked hard at redecorating it entirely," she said. "I drove the boys to school, took care of the house, did some cooking and all the rest. Gossips say Steve insisted I retire. That wasn't the case at all. I wanted it that way.

"In the last couple of years I felt a growing need to get back to work. It feels wonderful to act again. But I don't want to be just famous. I would like to be a good artist which will take time and effort."

OF THE HUNDREDS of scripts offered Ali, "Convoy" was the most appealing. She had worked with director Sam Peckinpah in "The Getaway" and she liked the story.

"I was terrified the first day back on the set," she said. "And I'm nervous before every scene. I wasn't scared at all in my first picture, 'Goodbye, Columbus.' I was so stupid I thought I could do no wrong.

"My reactions today are pure insecurity. I've never had formal training as an actress. And I can't take that sort of training now because I haven't the time. So it's up to me to work as hard as I possible can.

"This picture is important to me because of the strong feelings that exist about the fact that I've enjoyed a certain amount of success without paying the proper dues. There's a sort of prove-it-to-me attitude about it."

ALTHOUGH ALI may suffer insecurities on the set, she is convinced she will succeed one way or another at living her life fully. She exudes a calm resolve, a quiet confidence in her marriage and lifestyle.

"I'm happy and doing what I want to do. We live far enough from Hollywood that the geography allows us to lead a quiet family life. I have a wonderful marriage and children and now I'm working again.

"It is important for me to say I haven't all the answers. In fact, the only thing I'm sure of is that I know nothing."

Although Ali made the statement sincerely, one concludes she knows a great deal more than most actresses in Hollywood.

Public TV focuses on the students

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Desegregation is one of those issues that parents battle over outside of their children's schools while the kids sit by trying to figure out what to do.

Well, the students will finally have their say about racially mixed classrooms in a new Chicago produced television series that premiers Monday at 6 p.m. on WTTW, Channel 11.

The public boradcasting series, "As We See It," will air Mondays through Fridays for seven weeks and will give students from the across the country a chance to express their viewpoints on such topics as interracial dating, student peer pressure, open housing and busing.

A WTTW FILM crew this year visited students in Chicago, Austin, Texas, Boston, Evanston, Miami and San Francisco, talking to a total of 175 high school students who are undergoing desegregation in their own schools.

The documentary utilizes dialogue, skits, satires and film segments to examine the students' points of view on these sensitive issues.

The interviews cover problems dealing with Asian-Americans on the West Coast, Native-Americans in middle America, Cuban immigrants in Florida and blacks and whites in industrialized cities of the Northeast.

The series, which will be shown nationally on other public broadcasting stations. It was financed by WTTW and the U.S. Department of Helath, Education and Welfare (HEW) in an attempt to help reduce tensions inherent in newly integrated schools, station officials said.

ONE OF THE show's episodes will focus on Chicago's Roberto Clemente High School, which explore ways in which prejudice affects their lives.

Another of the show's 26 episodes will focus on some of the students involved in the 1971 court ordered desegregations of schools in portions of Pontiac, Mich., and how the experiences they had affected their lives.

The half-hour program is a special prelude to WTTW's new fall season which begins Oct. 9.

Trader gets fine for illegal actions

James E. Delta proposes 50% fare cut

Delta Air Lines Friday proposed cutting New York-Miami air fares by as much as half, making some flights $20 cheaper than the trip by bus.

Greyhound Bus Lines reacted immediately, saying it would offer a still cheaper fare if Delta's proposal is approved.

The special Delta "sero-bus" flights would cost $55 one-way Monday through Wednesday and $75 on other days beginning Dec. 15. Delta said its proposal would create a new class of air service — offering no meals but not requiring advance reservations or limiting trip lengths. The proposal has to be approved by the Civil Aeronautics Board.

The normal one-way New York-Miami air fare is $110. In addition to undercutting existing air fares, Delta said its proposed $55 service betters the cost of long-distance express buses and Amtrak trains, particularly when counting meals.

It said its proposal would make air transporation on the New York-Miami route "less expensive than any other mode." A regular one-way ticket costs $54.50 on Amtrak and $75 on intercity buses.

In Phoenix, however, Greyhound President Harry J. Lesko told UPI the bus line "will not be underpriced." In light of the Delta proposal, he said Greyhound has come up with a $49.95 one-way excursion fare between New York and the Miami area.

Pregnancy insurance bill OKd

The Senate Friday approved a bill requiring employers to provide coverage for pregnancy and related conditions if they offer worker health and disability plans that cover other ailments.

The bill, passed 75 to 11 and sent to the House, defines discrimination against pregnant workers as sex discrimination under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act.

The measure overturns a 1976 Supreme Court Ruling that held General Electric Co. was not engaging in sex discrimination by denying pregnant workers the same employe medical insurance and disability benefits available for other ailments or procedures.

Social Security tax hike OKd

The Senate Finance Committee Friday voted tax increases on both employers and employes to help support the financially ailing Social Security trust fund.

Employers would pay a hefty increase in 1978 while taxes would be increased somewhat on employes in 1979 and 1981.

At the same time, however, the committee voted 11 to 0 to raise benefits for those between 65 and 72 who retire but continue to earn money in other jobs.

Under present law, Social Security benefits for retirees younger than 72 are decreased $1 for each $2 of income above $3,000. The committee would increase this to $4,500 in 1978 and $6,000 in 1979, the same as a House Social Security subcommittee approved this week.

Report predicts GNP slowdown

Economists at UCLA predict a slowdown but not a recession in the nation's economy.

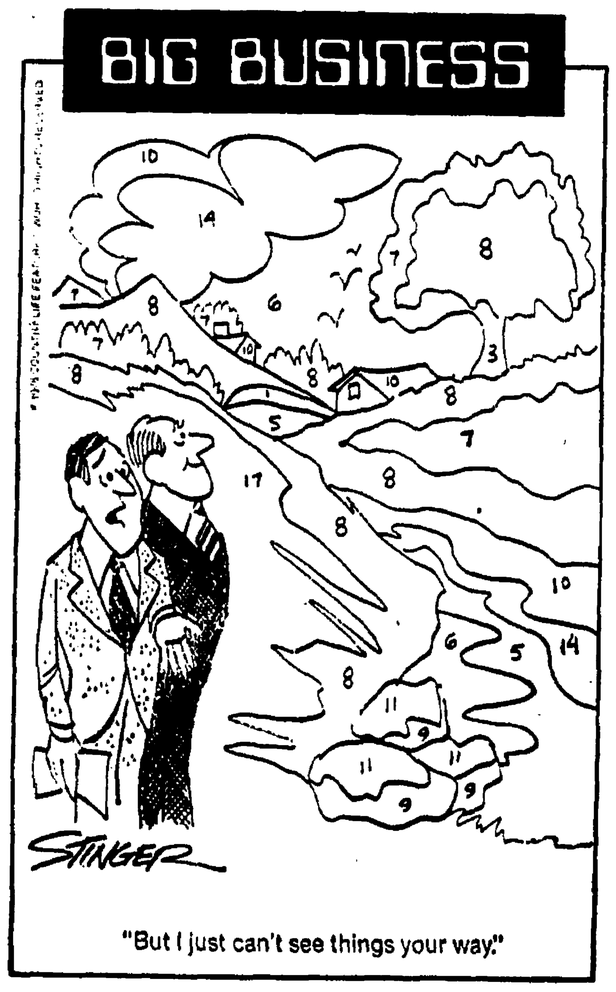
The UCLA quarterly business forecast released Thursday predicts slower growth in the real gross national product than was achieved in the first two quarters of 1977.

"But slower growth is not recession," said Larry Kimball, Director of the University's forecasting models. "Indeed, the real growth for the year 1978 is predicted to match roughly the growth 77."

He said growth next year should be 5.1 per cent compared with 7.5 per cent and 6.1 per cent during the first two quarters of 1977.

The report was released at a conference attended by about 500 businessmen at the UCLA graduate School of Management.

A slowdown will occur in several economic sectors including automobiles, total consumer durables, residential construction, business fixed investment and inventories, it said.



"But I just can't see things your way."

Designing industrial decals is sticky business for Modagrafics

by DAVE IBATA

A Rolling Meadows firm believes in sticking to business.

Such a philosophy is a prosperous one for Modagrafics, 5300 Newport Dr., Rolling Meadows, a corporatcon which specializes in designing and manufacturing industrial decals.

Modagrafics, in its fifth year of operation, recently moved from Arlington Heights to larger facilities in Rolling Meadows to accommodate an increased business volume from its 300 clients, including Conrail, Union '76, Gould Inc., the Chicago & North Western Ry. and United Airlines.

"WE'VE GONE from nothing to the top five in size and reputation in a national business in our specific, specialized industry," said Lennard Carlson, president of Modagrafics.

"Our business is designing, manufacturing and installing fleet identification decal systems — basically, decals that go on trucks," Carlson said.

Modagrafics employs 95 persons including a national sales staff of 10, Carlson said. Its yearly sales volume is $3 million, he said.

"We expect this (Rolling Meadows) plant will enable us to double our production and come close to doubling our personnel as well within a two-year period," Carlson said.

MODAGRAFICS, IN moving to Rolling Meadows, already has more than doubled its plant size — expanding from 18,000 square feet to 50,000 square feet at a cost of $900,000, plus $100,00 in improvements, Carlson said.

The corporation is almost entirely self-contained, with its own five-person art departmenet; industrial cameras; screen printers; baking and drying ovens; die-cutting equipment; and adhesive application machines, Carlson explained.

"Everything that we do at Modagrafics is totally done as an in-house manufacturing situation," he said.

Carlson said he started Modagrafics with four other major stockholders in 1973, after gaining experience working for what have become his firm's competition.

"AT THE TIME, I didn't have any intention of going into business in this business," he said.

However, after he was approached and asked to help set up Modagrafics, he said he decided, "you should be doing what you know — and since this is the only thing I know, I went into the silk-screen industry."

One basic problem Carlson said he has encountered in the 25-year-old field of industrial decals is its "immaturity."

"By reputation, it grew up as a bunch of ma and pa shops, and there are still a few left," he said. "As a result, it lacked sophistication."

FOR EXAMPLE, he said, suppliers of materials used in producing industrial decals for years dictated production, and controlled final sales of products. However, the industry now is outgrowing that period of dependency, he said.

The pitch Modagrafics' salesmen make to prospective clients focuses on the "rolling billboard" concept of advertising, Carlson said.

A STICKY (Mod - A - Grafics) CHORE. Fresh off the press, an inked sheet (top) is gingerly placed on a conveyor belt leading to a baking oven at Mod-A-Grafics, manufacturers of such industrial decals as the design for Wayne Feeds (right). Once dry, the inked sheets will be die-cut to produce stick-on lettering for Conrail.

To cite an example of cost efficiency, Carlson said, a study by the American Trucking Assn. showed a design emblazoned on the side of a truck would produce 14 million impressions a year at a cost of $300.

Similar results would be achieved through television advertising at a cost of $30,100; in newspapers, $23,400; on radio, $15,500; and on billboards, $6,400, Carlson said.

"IT'S THE LEAST expensive type of advertising there is," he said.

Decals, when properly mounted on sides of trucks, have a durability of five to seven years, Carlson said, "and quite frankly, that's the lifetime of a truck."

If prospective customers are interested, Modagrafics' art department takes a company's logo and enlarges and embellishes it, Carlson said.

"We do a design, and if you like the design, we'll do a decal for you — and that's how we'll make a profit," Carlson said.

Modagrafics also is branching out into the field of custom vans, and does designs for LRP Corp., of Lake Geneva, Wis., and Mr. Van, of Arlington Heights.

Prime lending rate boosted

NEW YORK (UPI) — Many of the nation's largest banks boosted their prime lending rate a quarter point to 7¼ per cent Friday in a move that signals higher interest rates for consumers.

No. 2-ranked Citibank of New York was the first Friday to announce the higher rate for borrowing by its top-rated corporate customers and was followed by other major institutions including first-ranked Bank of America in San Francisco and Manufacturers Hanover Trust, Chemical, and Bankers Trust in New York.

Chase Manhattan Bank, the third-ranked bank, hiked its prime Tuesday but was not matched immediately. Observers said the other institutions were waiting for trendsetting Citibank to act as well as for the government's latest money supply figures.

THE FIGURES released late Thursday showed the nation's basic money supply declined by $800 million in the latest reporting week. That relieved some pressure for higher interest rates caused by a $3 billion surge in the supply figure a week earlier.

However, analysts noted that the cost of money to banks has already increased to the point where a hike in the banks' prime seemed likely in any event.

The prime does not apply to bank borrowing by individuals who pay well above the corporate rate. But shifts in the prime reflect general interest rate trends that filter down to the consumer level.

The industry's prevailing prime has been at 7 per cent for a month. It started the year at 6¼ per cent.

Trader gets fine for illegal actions

James E. Baggot, former floor trader at the Chicago Board of Trade, was fined $30,000 Friday and granted a suspended sentence on charges he violated the Commodity Exchange Act by making prearranged, noncompetitive futures trades in soybeans. The sentence imposed by U.S. District Court Judge Prentice Marshall also carries a provision that Baggot dispose of his seat on the CBT. Baggot pleaded guilty June 27 to limited charges in a plea agreement.

Two other soybeans traders indicted in a federal grand jury investigation also had entered guilty pleas. They are Robert N. Meyer, fined $10,000 and given a suspended sentence, and William R. Marble, given a suspended sentence and granted probation with the condition that he pay a $53,000 fine if he violates terms of his probation. A fourth trader, Ralph J. Hemminger, pleaded guilty to an illegal trade but has not yet been sentenced.

Dow average drops 3.98 in slow trading

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks fell Friday in slow trading following a quarter point increase in the prime lending rate banks charge key customers that led to further confusion about the outlook for the economy.

The Dow Jones industrial average, up about two points at the outset, dropped 3.98 points to 856.81. A 2.08-point winner Thursday, the closely watched average lost 0.26 point for the week.

Analysts said investors apparently were disturbed about the prime rate moving to 7.25 per cent, the highest level since July 1976. Trendsetting Citibank of New York raised its rate Friday. Most other major banks followed. Chase Manhattan acted Tuesday.

The rate increases tempered investor enthusiasm over the Federal Reserve Board's report late Thursday that the nation's basic money supply had dipped $800 million in the latest week. A $3 billion surge the week before forced the Fed to tighten credit.

The New York Stock Exchange common stock index fell 0.15 to 52.79 and the average price of a share dipped nine cents.

Declines topped advances, 736 to 602, among the 1,846 issues crossing the composite tape at 3 p.m.

Big Board volume totaled 18,340,000 shares, compared with 18,230,000 traded Thursday.

Composite volume of NYSE issues traded on all U.S. exchanges and over-the-counter at 3 p.m. totaled 20,510,388 shares, compared with 20,376,040 Thursday.

The American Stock Exchange index added 0.07 to 118.33 and the average price of a share gained one cent. Advances topped declines, 284 to 259 among the 857 issues traded. Volume at 3 p.m. totaled 2,100,000 shares, compared with 1,950,000 Thursday.

Market spins wheels as trade slows

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, beset by an uncertain economic outlook and rising interest rates, went nowhere this week. Trading was the slowest in five months.

The Dow Jones industrial average, a 15.24-point loser last week slipped another .26 point to 856.81, holding just above its 20-month low of 854.12 set Aug. 12.

Since the Dow average has fallen 150 points so far this year, many stocks were selling at attractive prices. But the economic uncertainties inhibited the market from generating significant buying.

The New York Stock Exchange common stock index managed to add .05 to 52.79 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, containing some over-the-counter issues edged up .11 to 96.48.

DECLINES EDGED advances, 932 to 837, among the 2,089 issues crossing the composite tape.

Big board volume totaled 87,510,370 shares, the slowest full-week turnover since 36.1 million shares changed hands during the week ended April 1. Analysts said the Jewish New Year holiday was a major factor in the diminished trading.

Also, many investors remained on the sidelines to watch the Senate Government Affairs Committee's investigation of Bert Lance, President Carter's budget director, who has been subject of controversy because of his banking practices.

Last week's four-day Labor Day holiday volume totaled 70,603,500. Turnover during the same week a year ago totaled 97,119,720 shares.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 103,026,240 shares, compared 81,577,500 last week.

THE MARKET was hurt by government reports that continued to indicate the economy was slowed. Industrial production fell .5 per cent in August from July.

Business inventories rose .6 percent in July, compared with an .8 per cent boost in June. Sales fell .3 per cent. August retail sales rose 1.7 per cent, but dipped 1.6 per cent last week. Steel production fell 3.7 per cent last week.

Wall Street was encouraged the nation's basic money supply dropped $800 million in the latest week but was dismayed the prime lending rate rose a quarter point to 7 1/4 per cent, the highest level since July 1976.

The rate hikes also make money more difficult to obtain and could curb business expansion plans, although a Wall Street Journal survey showed business leaders generally optimistic about the economy's outlook.

The Carter administration — the President and Charles Schultze, chairman of the council of economic advisers — attempted to assure businessmen this week.

CARTER SAID while second-half growth won't match that of the first half, the nation is "not facing a recession." Schultze, in what was billed as a major policy statement, said the economy's near-term outlook was favorable.

Citibank and Manufacturers Hanover econonists agreed. But they said many uncertainties surrounded key legislation being considered by Congress, which already has approved a 1978 budget deficit of more than $61 billion.

The market responded with a rally after the House rejected an indexing measure favored by Carter and labor that would have raised the minimum wage to $3.37 an hour by 1981.

But investors were quiet as the Senate approved a bill that would force employers (and to a lesser extent employes) to pay higher taxes to support the Social Security System.

Carter is expected to present tax reform proposal soon and they could provide further investor hesitancy.

Dow average drops 3.98 in slow trading

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks fell Friday in slow trading following a quarter point increase in the prime lending rate banks charge key customers that led to further confusion about the outlook for the economy.

The Dow Jones industrial average, up about two points at the outset, dropped 3.98 points to 856.81. A 2.08-point winner Thursday, the closely watched average lost 0.26 point for the week.

Analysts said investors apparently were disturbed about the prime rate moving to 7.25 per cent, the highest level since July 1976. Trendsetting Citibank of New York raised its rate Friday. Most other major banks followed. Chase Manhattan acted Tuesday.

The rate increases tempered investor enthusiasm over the Federal Reserve Board's report late Thursday that the nation's basic money supply had dipped $800 million in the latest week. A $3 billion surge the week before forced the Fed to tighten credit.

The New York Stock Exchange common stock index fell 0.15 to 52.79 and the average price of a share dipped nine cents.

Declines topped advances, 736 to 602, among the 1,846 issues crossing the composite tape at 3 p.m.

Big Board volume totaled 18,340,000 shares, compared with 18,230,000 traded Thursday.

Composite volume of NYSE issues traded on all U.S. exchanges and over-the-counter at 3 p.m. totaled 20,510,388 shares, compared with 20,376,040 Thursday.

The American Stock Exchange index added 0.07 to 118.33 and the average price of a share gained one cent. Advances topped declines, 284 to 259 among the 857 issues traded. Volume at 3 p.m. totaled 2,100,000 shares, compared with 1,950,000 Thursday.

Market spins wheels as trade slows

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, beset by an uncertain economic outlook and rising interest rates, went nowhere this week. Trading was the slowest in five months.

The Dow Jones industrial average, a 15.24-point loser last week slipped another .26 point to 856.81, holding just above its 20-month low of 854.12 set Aug. 12.

Since the Dow average has fallen 150 points so far this year, many stocks were selling at attractive prices. But the economic uncertainties inhibited the market from generating significant buying.

N.Y. Dem mayor choices best of the lot

Louis Rukeyser

NEW YORK — Like it or not — and many Americans most emphatically do not — the politics of New York City have national economic significance. And so, as New York's Democrats prepare to nominate the man who will probably be the city's next mayor, it's worth taking a moment to examine the impact of the campaign thus far on finances hundreds and even thousands of miles away from the Brooklyn Bridge.

In a nutshell (which, incidentally, is not a bad way to characterize the New York political scene), the news is good but not great. Even such marginal improvement should be welcome, however, in communities far beyond New York's borders — if only because the city's financial chaos a bare two years ago was responsible for increasing, to record levels, the borrowing costs of all U.S. states and municipalities.

First, the good news: contrary to most early forecasts about the Sept. 8 primary, the city's Democrats emphatically rejected the two most conspicuous symbols of monkey-business as usual, Abraham D. Beame and Bella S. Abzug. Both appeared to be appealing to constituencies afflicted with severe amnesia or terminal learning difficulties.

MAYOR BEAME, who presided ineffectually over the city's final descent into financial humiliation, seemed to be basing his campaign for reelection on the assumption that nothing succeeds like failure. Ms. Abzug, for her part, appeared to have been chopped intact from a political frieze of the 1960s; on the economic side, she featured such forward-looking ideas as a rousing defense of rent control — a wretched, and predictable, disaster that has helped make housing one of the city's permanent crises.

So it is encouraging to outsiders that the two most financially responsible of the major candidates, Mario M. Cuomo and Edward I. Koch, survived into Monday's runoff. Neither's success should immediately weaken the city's credit standing, as might otherwise have accurred.

But this is, at best, two cheers for New York's future. It is true that the two seemingly most "conservative" leading contenders finished in front — thereby confirming once again the nationwide disenchantment with unchecked governmental expansion. But (1) Cuomo and Koch together won less than 40 per cent of the vote, which either would have had to garner alone in order to avoid a runoff, despite heavy bankrolls and (between them) endorsements from all three city newspapers, and (2) by conventional standards, Cuomo and Koch can be as accurately described as goldfish as conservatives.

Cuomo is, by New York measurements, in the moderate to liberal range: much in the mold of his patron, Gov. Hugh Carey. Koch is a more interesting case: he was perceived in the earlier campaign as the farthest right of all — primarily because he had the audacity to suggest that the city's unions should not invariably be allowed to get away with their legal-looting, and because he advocated the return of capital punishment (an understandably emotional issue atfer the traumatic crimes of the past summer in New York, but outside the mayor's purview). Yet the new image of Koch as a tough foe of runaway unionism must contend with his congressional record (91 per cent approval from the AFL-CIO), as must the perception of him as a Churchillian conservative (the liberal Americans for Democratic Action rated him absolutely perfect).

So a certain skepticism must remain about the likelihood of New York's truly getting its economic situation in hand. The campaign rhetoric on virtually all sides has failed to confront reality. For example, even Felix Rohatyn, who engineered the city's financial reprieve in 1975, conceded that it was unrealistic to expect a total Federal takeover of welfare at New York's lofty benefit levels — though all the candidates essentially were demanding it.

Despite the much-publicized reductions in the city work force — 60,000 jobs have been lost through attrition; the rest is largely puffery — New York's labor costs are higher than ever. The city has not genuinely moved either to live within its means or stimulate a private-sector recovery. The financial crisis that Beame insists is "over" is anything but that, and his successor will have to make hard choices between popularity and progress.

World economy takes temporary turn for better

Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON — It may just be the calm before some future storm, but the strains on the international financial system have eased a good deal in the past six months. For the moment, the United Kingdom and Italy — two weak sisters in Europe — have reduced their balance-of-payments deficits to sonething close to zero.

Mexico and Brazil, among the larger developing countries that had piled up heavy international debts, also have improved the status of their international accounts.

There are a few countries, notably in Africa, Latin America, and in the Mediterranean, that continue to have problems. But there is little danger, as once feared, that a host of debt-ridden countries might default and precipitate a banking crisis.

THE LATEST bit of mechanics designed to help the hardest-pressed nations is a $10 billion pot of money gathered by Managing Director H. J. Witteveen of the International Monetary Fund, and appropriately named for him as the "Witteveen Facility."

This new line of credit, of which 45 per cent was created by loans from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and 55 per cent from oil-consuming nations, is not as large as the $16 billion-plus Witteveen set out to get.

But it will tide the IMF over for at least two years until regular guota deposits can be enlarged. And significantly, for the first time, it commits OPEC countries to lend at least a small part of their $40 billion annual surplus to countries through international rather than private banking channels.

Saudi Arabia is putting up the largest single amount — $2.4 billion at commercial rates of interest — making that Arab nation second only to the United States as a bankroller of the IMF. This will entitle the Saudis to their own seat on the executive board.

What will happen in 1979, 1989, 1999? Who knows. It will take all of the ingenuity of many future Witteveens to prevent the collapse of the world economy as the OPEC surpluses pile up and the mirror-image debts of the oil-consuming nations grow.

But for the moment, the patchwork system of forming a temporary financing structure to handle the OPEC-created balance-of-payments strains is doing its job.

TO BE SURE, this is not to say there are no current international economic trauma. The industrial world, except for the United States, has recovered unexpectedly slowly from recession, which adds to the problem of the poor nations. Unemployment, especially among teen-agers is much too high. So is inflation.

That twin problem, some of the most thoughtful international experts feel, is almost intractable. It has produced an insidiously dangerous side affect, a new wave of protectionism.

In part, competition for markets in the industrial countries can be traced to new successes by the developing countries, who with the aid of the rich ones have created export industries. It's a sort of boomerang result.

But IMF officials are concerned by the free and easy resort to restrictive trade practices, coming as it does after the explicit commitment by governments, in one forum after another, to avoid narrow nationalism. They worry about "voluntary" restrictions, of the American, French, or other variety.

"AN OPEN, RATHER than a restrictive trade policy," says a high IMF official, "is the only way that the developing countries can really pull themselves out of financial trouble. Trade, after all, is better than aid."

There is the additional problem of persuading West Germany and Japan, who have strong balance-of-payments surpluses, to pump up their economies at home, thereby sucking in more imports from the rest of the world.

Treasury Sec. W. Michael Blumenthal attracted some criticism recently — especially from the West Germans — by seeming to "talk the dollar down" as one way of reducing the big U.S. grade deficit.

But there will continue to be pressures on the Germans and the Japanese to share the international burdens by stimulating their economies — at least up to their own growth targets. West Germany apparently will have a $2.5 billion current account balance this year, and Japan will have an extraordinary $7 billion balance.

In all probability to, avoid further adverse world opinion, the Germans and Japanese just before the annual joint meetings of the IMF and World Bank will announce new measures to boost their economies. In the view of top Treasury officials, these measures will help in 1978, but will come too late to help this year.

Investing trust assets in income stocks advisable

Money Wise

Trust assets matured when I reached 65 a few months ago. In nine years the value decreased from $30,000 to $23,840 as of December 1976. I have other assets, social security, and still am working parttime. But I would like more income from the trust assets. Should I leave the trust in the bank? What should I do?

— B. B.

Since you control the assets, you might consider investing the funds yourself in income stocks, such as utilities that are now paying 8 to 8.5 per cent or more. The $90 per month you are receiving from the trust figures out to a 4.5 per cent yield, and the decline in asset value would not appear to promise much growth. Utility stocks, while not exactly growth stocks, have resisted the general decline in stock prices and are raising dividend payouts to retain their competitive position in the equity market.

I teach college chemistry and, with other means, earned $30,000 last year. I own some houses, some lots and 75 feet of ocean frontage with a mortgage of $84,000 and two old houses on it that bring in $600/month. My architect has drawn plans for 12 apartments. I didn't know that I needed to own the land free and clear to get a construction loan and long-term mortgage commitment. Construction loans cost 9.25 per cent plus 2 points. Should I try to put this through on my own? Do I have enought assets and income?

— W. S.

Your ambitious plans could leave you far out on a financial limb. You may, however, build on land that is not owned free and clear by obtaining a deed release from the lender. Borrowing more money to finance construction and then a long-term mortgage may leverage the property more than lenders will accept. Cash flow and earning projections from the 12 units must be considered as the ultimate income to pay for the borrowed funds. At least two options are available for you: (1) You could form a limited partnership to develop the property with you as the general partner. Limited partners would put up part of the equity or risk capital. By restricting the number of limited partners, you can avoid expensive security listing, if the state approves. (2) You could sell off some or all of your other property to raise enough cash to finance the 12 apartments. Here, you may be putting all your eggs in one basket — generally not a good idea with something as risky as income property development.

How wise an investment are stamps? I am referring to new, unused, specially selected commemorative stamps. Could this be considered a good 'liquid position' investment? —S. M.

Stamps as an investment are a bit outside my field, but I understand that organized stamp collecting can be profitable during a long period. I can state flatly, however, that current commemorative stamps are not a good liquid investment. Stamps increase in value due to rarity and age, and even the best collecetions cannot be liquidated profitably overnight. Collecting current stamps has one advantage — you will never lose the principal, as you can always use the stamps for postage at the price you paid.

My husband and I own Series E Saving Bonds and Freedom Shares as co-owneres. Our will leaves everything to our son. Will he automatically inherit the bonds and be able to cash them though his name is not on them? Or will we have to have them made over to him before we pass along?

— E. G.

Series E Bonds and Freedom Shares will be reissued to your son as instructed in your will. The executor handles this conversion. Your son will inherit the E-Bonds and Freedom Shares, but he will also inherit the income tax liability. If you should decide to redeem the bonds and shares, you must pay the taxes. If your tax bracket is less than his, you could save money this way. You could each give your son $3,000 each year without paying gift taxes. Examine the alternatives both ways to see which course delivers more spendable dollars for your son.

Bankers fear crackdown over Bert Lance affair

In the business world this week, the bankers were the most worried about the impact of the Bert Lance affair; they plainly feared it would cause them to be clobbered by a wave of tough new regulation of banking practices. A survey of state banking regulatory officials by United Press International brought vigorous denials of Lance's claim that most of the things he is alleged to have done were common practices by bankers in all states.

One of the country's leading executive recruiters said that, no matter how the Lance affair turns out, it will aggravate the negative image of business that much of the American public now has.

A columnist for the New York Times wrote a satirical article purporting to be a speech by President Carter announcing Lance's resignation and return to Georgia but at the same time giving him a blanket pardon like the one Gerald Ford gave Richard Nixon.

OTHER BUSINESS news was mixed. Britain announced a $245.9 million trade surplus in August, its first since 1972 but a common market report issued in Brussels forecast hard times for most of Europe through 1980. The Common Market leaders were upset particularly over the prospect of a too large American demand for petroleum that would drive up the global price.

The House passed the bill to raise the minimum wage to $2.65 from $2.30. The proposal for a lower youth wage lost by a single vote.

The Senate voted to delay the ban on saccharin for 18 months.

American Motors signed a new one-year contract with the United Auto Workers.

Tenneco beat out General Dynamics and Litton Industries' Ingalls Shipyards for a $381 million navy contract to build three attack submarines.

Railroads in the United States were preparing to put freight rate increases totaling $940 million a year in effect in November and Conrail's management told Congress it needed another $300 million in financing. Neither development was encouraging for the battle against inflation.

The automobile industry reported an 11 per cent gain over a year ago in retail sales for the first third of September.

A NATIONAL budget deficit of $61.3 billion for the coming fiscal year was agreed to by House and Senate conferees.

New York's Chase Manhattan Bank took the lead in raising the interest rate for prime business loans to 7.25 per cent from 7 per cent.

Retail sales were disclosed to have climbed a healthy 1.7 per cent in August from July.

President Carter declared Kansas City a disaster area eligible for federal help after early autumn floods in this always vulnerable area killed 20 and did a vast amount of property damage. At the other end of the pole, thousands of persons in California were threatened with having their household water cut off as a renewed drought reduced the flow in aqueducts to a trickle.

A Senate committee sidetracked the part of President Carter's energy program that would mandate restructuring of electric rates to give lower charges in off-peak hours and penalize peak-hour consumers. The oil companies continued their attack on the Carter energy program, saying it was tilted too far in the direction of conservation rather than expanding production of energy and was much too expensive.

The government disclosed that although total cigaret sales still are rising, per capita sales have fallen to the lowest level since 1971.

The University of Massachusetts said it would sell the stocks in its portfolio of those companies that do business in South Africa.

The Federal Trade Commission indicated that the makers of Listerine may be ordered to engage in "corrective" advertising to counteract claims made for the mouthwash in the past.

The FTC also ordered Fruehauf Corp. to divest itself of Kelsey-Hayes, another transportation equipment maker. Fruehauf said it would appeal.

Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. said the $3 million verdict awarded against it for slander of two ex-officials, one of whom committed suicide, was a gross miscarriage of justice Trial of the suit brought out sensational charges of extravagance and sexual misdeeds by a number of company figures.

N.Y. Dem mayor choices best of the lot

Louis Rukeyser

NEW YORK — Like it or not — and many Americans most emphatically do not — the politics of New York City have national economic significance. And so, as New York's Democrats prepare to nominate the man who will probably be the city's next mayor, it's worth taking a moment to examine the impact of the campaign thus far on finances hundreds and even thousands of miles away from the Brooklyn Bridge.

In a nutshell (which, incidentally, is not a bad way to characterize the New York political scene), the news is good but not great. Even such marginal improvement should be welcome, however, in communities far beyond New York's borders — if only because the city's financial chaos a bare two years ago was responsible for increasing, to record levels, the borrowing costs of all U.S. states and municipalities.

First, the good news: contrary to most early forecasts about the Sept. 8 primary, the city's Democrats emphatically rejected the two most conspicuous symbols of monkey-business as usual, Abraham D. Beame and Bella S. Abzug. Both appeared to be appealing to constituencies afflicted with severe amnesia or terminal learning difficulties.

MAYOR BEAME, who presided ineffectually over the city's final descent into financial humiliation, seemed to be basing his campaign for reelection on the assumption that nothing succeeds like failure. Ms. Abzug, for her part, appeared to have been chopped intact from a political frieze of the 1960s; on the economic side, she featured such forward-looking ideas as a rousing defense of rent control — a wretched, and predictable, disaster that has helped make housing one of the city's permanent crises.

So it is encouraging to outsiders that the two most financially responsible of the major candidates, Mario M. Cuomo and Edward I. Koch, survived into Monday's runoff. Neither's success should immediately weaken the city's credit standing, as might otherwise have accurred.

But this is, at best, two cheers for New York's future. It is true that the two seemingly most "conservative" leading contenders finished in front — thereby confirming once again the nationwide disenchantment with unchecked governmental expansion. But (1) Cuomo and Koch together won less than 40 per cent of the vote, which either would have had to garner alone in order to avoid a runoff, despite heavy bankrolls and (between them) endorsements from all three city newspapers, and (2) by conventional standards, Cuomo and Koch can be as accurately described as goldfish as conservatives.

Cuomo is, by New York measurements, in the moderate to liberal range: much in the mold of his patron, Gov. Hugh Carey. Koch is a more interesting case: he was perceived in the earlier campaign as the farthest right of all — primarily because he had the audacity to suggest that the city's unions should not invariably be allowed to get away with their legal-looting, and because he advocated the return of capital punishment (an understandably emotional issue atfer the traumatic crimes of the past summer in New York, but outside the mayor's purview). Opera soprano Maria Callas dies of heart attack at age 53

PARIS (UPI) — Maria Callas, the tempestuous, prima donna of opera whose stormy love affair with Aristotle Onassis endured a lifetime, died of a heart attack Friday at the age of 53.

French impresario Michel Glotz, a close friend who was with her at her death, said she had just arisen from bed to go to the bathroom when she collapsed on the floor. Glotz said he helped her back to bed, "but it was too late."

"She looks as beautiful in death as she was while playing 'La Traviata,'" Glotz said.

"I just saw her on the bed," he said. "She was the very image of La Traviata as I saw her in Milan in 1956. There were no wrinkles on her face. She looks as if she were resting."

GLOTZ SAID that at the time of her death, Callas was "thinking of resuming recordings and possibly doing some television work. La Callas wasn't ill."

Opera lovers throughout the world mourned the Greek soprano's death and eulogized her as one of the greatest voices ever to grace a stage.

They also recalled her love for the Greek shipping tycoon, which flamed even after Onassis' marriage to another famous beauty — Jacqueline Kennedy.

A spokesman for the former U.S. first lady said in New York she would have no comment on Callas' death.

CALLAS LAST appeared in public on Dec. 8, 1973, in a concert at the Paris Opera after eight years off the stage.

A sellout audience stood cheering in their seats and brought Callas back for 10 curtain calls. Shouts of "Viva Maria" rang through the ornate hall and scores of bouquets of flowers were thrown onto the stage.

But critics said the voice that once brought opera-goers to tears and prompted shouts of "Brava!" from Milan to New York had lost some of its brilliance.

"Her voice," wrote French critic Claude Pascal, "still has its incomparable timbre. But there is not the same sparkle as before."

Callas herself appeared to realize it. She never sang in public again.

Maria Callas was born in 1923 in New York of Greek parents on either Dec. 2 or Dec. 4. "I can't be sure about it," she once said, "because according to my passport I was born Dec. 2 but my mother claims I was born Dec. 4."

Her mother forced singing lessons on her as a young girl and she began her career at age 11 after the family returned to Greece.

DURING THE World War II Nazi occupation of Greece, her family nearly starved and Maria earned food by singing opera arias for Italian troops stationed there.

In 1949, she married Italian industrialist Giovanni Battista Meneghini.

OPERA SINGER Maria Callas, 53, died at her home in Paris Friday of an apparent heart attack. Ms. Callas and long-time friend Aristotle Onassis are seen together in Monte Carlo in this 1960 photograph.

She met him in Verona when she fell from the stage and he rushed to her rescue. They finally were divorced in 1971 after Italy passed a divorce law.

"I created Callas," Meneghini said later. "And she repaid my love by stabbing me in the back."

Meneghini, 82, is recuperating from a heart attack and was not immediately told of his former wife's death, friends said. They said Meneghini was resting at his villa near Sirmione on Lake Garda in Italy.

AND IT was Onassis who won her undying love. Their love affair lasted throughout the rest of his life and captured headlines around the world.

One columnist once called their romance "the most publicized love affair since Heloise and Abelard."

Meneghini, still her husband at the time, said of her affair with Onassis, "They are in love like children."

When Onassis married Jacqueline Kennedy, in October 1968, Callas wrote, "First I lost my weight, then I lost my voice and now I've lost Onassis."

It was with entrepreneurs that she earned her reputation as the epitome of the artistic temperament.

In 1957, after being booed in the first act of Bellini's "Norma," she walked out on an audience in Rome that included late Italian President Giovanni Gronchi.

Booed later at Milan's La Scala, she again stalked off the stage, saying that to finish the performance was not "compatible with my dignity as a woman and an artist."

THE SINGER also was fired by the Vienna and San Francisco operas because of her rages. And then she was fired from the Met by Bing.

However, Callas returned to the Met nearly a decade later and sang one of her greatest performances in one of her most famous roles, Tosca, on March 25, 1965.

Callas herself rejected allegations that she was temperamental.

"I have severe standards," she once said. "I will accept no artistic compromise that might lead to a poor performance. The tragedy of a poor performance would not be so much that one failed oneself or even the public. The tragedy would be to fail the music itself."

Music world mourns death

Divas, impresarios and opera buffs alike mourned for Maria Callas Friday and even the targets of her fury in life praised her in death as "one of the greatest artists of her time."

Callas, whose passion on stage was matched only by her passionate affair with Greek shipowner Aristotle Onassis in real life, died of a heart attack Friday at her Paris apartment at the age of 53.

One of the first to euglogize the Greek soprano was Rudolf Bing, impressario of the metropolitan Opera from 1950-72 who fired her in 1958 after a stormy row.

"I was privileged to bring her to the Met and I am proud of that," Bing said in New York.

"SHE WAS A DIFFICULT artist as many are, but she was one of the greatest artists of her time. Anyone who knew Maria Callas as a person and an artist cannot forget her."

"We will not see her like again."

Beverly Sills, one of opera's foremost coloratura sopranos, said Callas had been "an inspiration to us all."

Miss Sills, receiving word of Callas' death at the New York City Opera where she was rehearsing for a performance of "Manon," said Callas throughout her life was "a disciplined and dedicated artist with a great talent.

"All of us interested in the revival of bel canto opera owe a great debt to her. She will be hugely missed," Miss Sills said.

IN LONDON, Lord Harewood, cousin of Queen Elizabeth and former director of Covent Garden Opera House and the Edinburgh Festival, recalled, "I first heard Maria Callas in 1947 and I have never heard anyone since to compare with her, either in real life or on records.

"No one else went so deeply into a role. No one else was so exacting of herself, her colleagues and her managements. She was an incomparable artist and a warm friend."

John Tully, current general manager of London's Royal Opera House in Covent Garden said "In her death we have lost one of the truly great artists of our time.

"She had become a legendary figure, possessing all the attributes of a great diva," Tully said. "Her impact was inestimable because she understood in the most profound way the relationship of music and drama. The world will be a poorer place without her."

Opera soprano Maria Callas dies of heart attack at age 53

PARIS (UPI) — Maria Callas, the tempestuous, prima donna of opera whose stormy love affair with Aristotle Onassis endured a lifetime, died of a heart attack Friday at the age of 53.

French impresario Michel Glotz, a close friend who was with her at her death, said she had just arisen from bed to go to the bathroom when she collapsed on the floor. Glotz said he helped her back to bed, "but it was too late."

"She looks as beautiful in death as she was while playing 'La Traviata,'" Glotz said.

"I just saw her on the bed," he said. "She was the very image of La Traviata as I saw her in Milan in 1956. There were no wrinkles on her face. She looks as if she were resting."

GLOTZ SAID that at the time of her death, Callas was "thinking of resuming recordings and possibly doing some television work. La Callas wasn't ill."

Opera lovers throughout the world mourned the Greek soprano's death and eulogized her as one of the greatest voices ever to grace a stage.

They also recalled her love for the Greek shipping tycoon, which flamed even after Onassis' marriage to another famous beauty — Jacqueline Kennedy.

A spokesman for the former U.S. first lady said in New York she would have no comment on Callas' death.

CALLAS LAST appeared in public on Dec. 8, 1973, in a concert at the Paris Opera after eight years off the stage.

A sellout audience stood cheering in their seats and brought Callas back for 10 curtain calls. Shouts of "Viva Maria" rang through the ornate hall and scores of bouquets of flowers were thrown onto the stage.

But critics said the voice that once brought opera-goers to tears and prompted shouts of "Brava!" from Milan to New York had lost some of its brilliance.

"Her voice," wrote French critic Claude Pascal, "still has its incomparable timbre. But there is not the same sparkle as before."

Callas herself appeared to realize it. She never sang in public again.

Maria Callas was born in 1923 in New York of Greek parents on either Dec. 2 or Dec. 4. "I can't be sure about it," she once said, "because according to my passport I was born Dec. 2 but my mother claims I was born Dec. 4."

Her mother forced singing lessons on her as a young girl and she began her career at age 11 after the family returned to Greece.

DURING THE World War II Nazi occupation of Greece, her family nearly starved and Maria earned food by singing opera arias for Italian troops stationed there.

In 1949, she married Italian industrialist Giovanni Battista Meneghini.

OPERA SINGER Maria Callas, 53, died at her home in Paris Friday of an apparent heart attack. Ms. Callas and long-time friend Aristotle Onassis are seen together in Monte Carlo in this 1960 photograph.

She met him in Verona when she fell from the stage and he rushed to her rescue. They finally were divorced in 1971 after Italy passed a divorce law.

"I created Callas," Meneghini said later. "And she repaid my love by stabbing me in the back."

Meneghini, 82, is recuperating from a heart attack and was not immediately told of his former wife's death, friends said. They said Meneghini was resting at his villa near Sirmione on Lake Garda in Italy.

AND IT was Onassis who won her undying love. Their love affair lasted throughout the rest of his life and captured headlines around the world.

One columnist once called their romance "the most publicized love affair since Heloise and Abelard."

Meneghini, still her husband at the time, said of her affair with Onassis, "They are in love like children."

When Onassis married Jacqueline Kennedy, in October 1968, Callas wrote, "First I lost my weight, then I lost my voice and now I've lost Onassis."

It was with entrepreneurs that she earned her reputation as the epitome of the artistic temperament.

In 1957, after being booed in the first act of Bellini's "Norma," she walked out on an audience in Rome that included late Italian President Giovanni Gronchi.

Booed later at Milan's La Scala, she again stalked off the stage, saying that to finish the performance was not "compatible with my dignity as a woman and an artist."

THE SINGER also was fired by the Vienna and San Francisco operas because of her rages. And then she was fired from the Met by Bing.

However, Callas returned to the Met nearly a decade later and sang one of her greatest performances in one of her most famous roles, Tosca, on March 25, 1965.

Callas herself rejected allegations that she was temperamental.

"I have severe standards," she once said. "I will accept no artistic compromise that might lead to a poor performance. The tragedy of a poor performance would not be so much that one failed oneself or even the public. The tragedy would be to fail the music itself."

Music world mourns death

Divas, impresarios and opera buffs alike mourned for Maria Callas Friday and even the targets of her fury in life praised her in death as "one of the greatest artists of her time."

Callas, whose passion on stage was matched only by her passionate affair with Greek shipowner Aristotle Onassis in real life, died of a heart attack Friday at her Paris apartment at the age of 53.

One of the first to euglogize the Greek soprano was Rudolf Bing, impressario of the metropolitan Opera from 1950-72 who fired her in 1958 after a stormy row.

"I was privileged to bring her to the Met and I am proud of that," Bing said in New York.

"SHE WAS A DIFFICULT artist as many are, but she was one of the greatest artists of her time. Anyone who knew Maria Callas as a person and an artist cannot forget her."

"We will not see her like again."

Beverly Sills, one of opera's foremost coloratura sopranos, said Callas had been "an inspiration to us all."

Miss Sills, receiving word of Callas' death at the New York City Opera where she was rehearsing for a performance of "Manon," said Callas throughout her life was "a disciplined and dedicated artist with a great talent.

"All of us interested in the revival of bel canto opera owe a great debt to her. She will be hugely missed," Miss Sills said.

IN LONDON, Lord Harewood, cousin of Queen Elizabeth and former director of Covent Garden Opera House and the Edinburgh Festival, recalled, "I first heard Maria Callas in 1947 and I have never heard anyone since to compare with her, either in real life or on records.

"No one else went so deeply into a role. No one else was so exacting of herself, her colleagues and her managements. She was an incomparable artist and a warm friend."

John Tully, current general manager of London's Royal Opera House in Covent Garden said "In her death we have lost one of the truly great artists of our time.

"She had become a legendary figure, possessing all the attributes of a great diva," Tully said. "Her impact was inestimable because she understood in the most profound way the relationship of music and drama. The world will be a poorer place without her."

Conant gets the goods on Arlington

by DAVE HESS

The unbeaten Conant Cougars, dominating the first half, scored two touchdowns and held on to defeat the winless Arlington Cardinals 15-8 on the Arlington field.

Taking the opening kickoff, Conant struck quickly, marching 71 yards in only five plays.

The Cougar running tandem of Al Barnhill and Tim Tyrrell powered the way into the end zone, the highlight being a 41-yard sweep around the right end by Tyrrell. Barnhill's 20-yard ramble put Conant on the board and at 9:12 they led 7-0.

Arlington's initial drive ended with quarterback Chuck Klein being sacked by Steve Herring on his own 42-yard line, but the Cardinals took the ball back when a host of tacklers forced Cougar quarterback Rocky Pugliese to fumble at the Arlington 46. It was the first of six fumbles committed by both sides in a game that saw an abundance of fierce hitting and aggressive tackling.

ON THE NEXT play, Klein took off through the right side for 38 yards to the Conant 17. Two plays later, just at the start of the second quarter, it was Klein passing 11 yards to split end Chuck Gilman and Arlington had their first points of the year.

The Cardinals initially lined up to kick for the extra point, but a Conant offsides changed their minds. Instead, it was Klein pitching to Greg Sabatello for a two point conversion to give them an 8-7 lead.

Conant held onto the ball for almost the entire second quarter, moving slowly from their own 33. Eighteen plays later they moved into the end zone on a keeper by Pugliese from a half yard out. Pugliese's pass to Brad Goodman was good for two and Conant led, 15-8.

Conant almost scored again as the half wore out reaching the Arlington three-yard line on a 21-yard pass from Pugliese to Goodman.

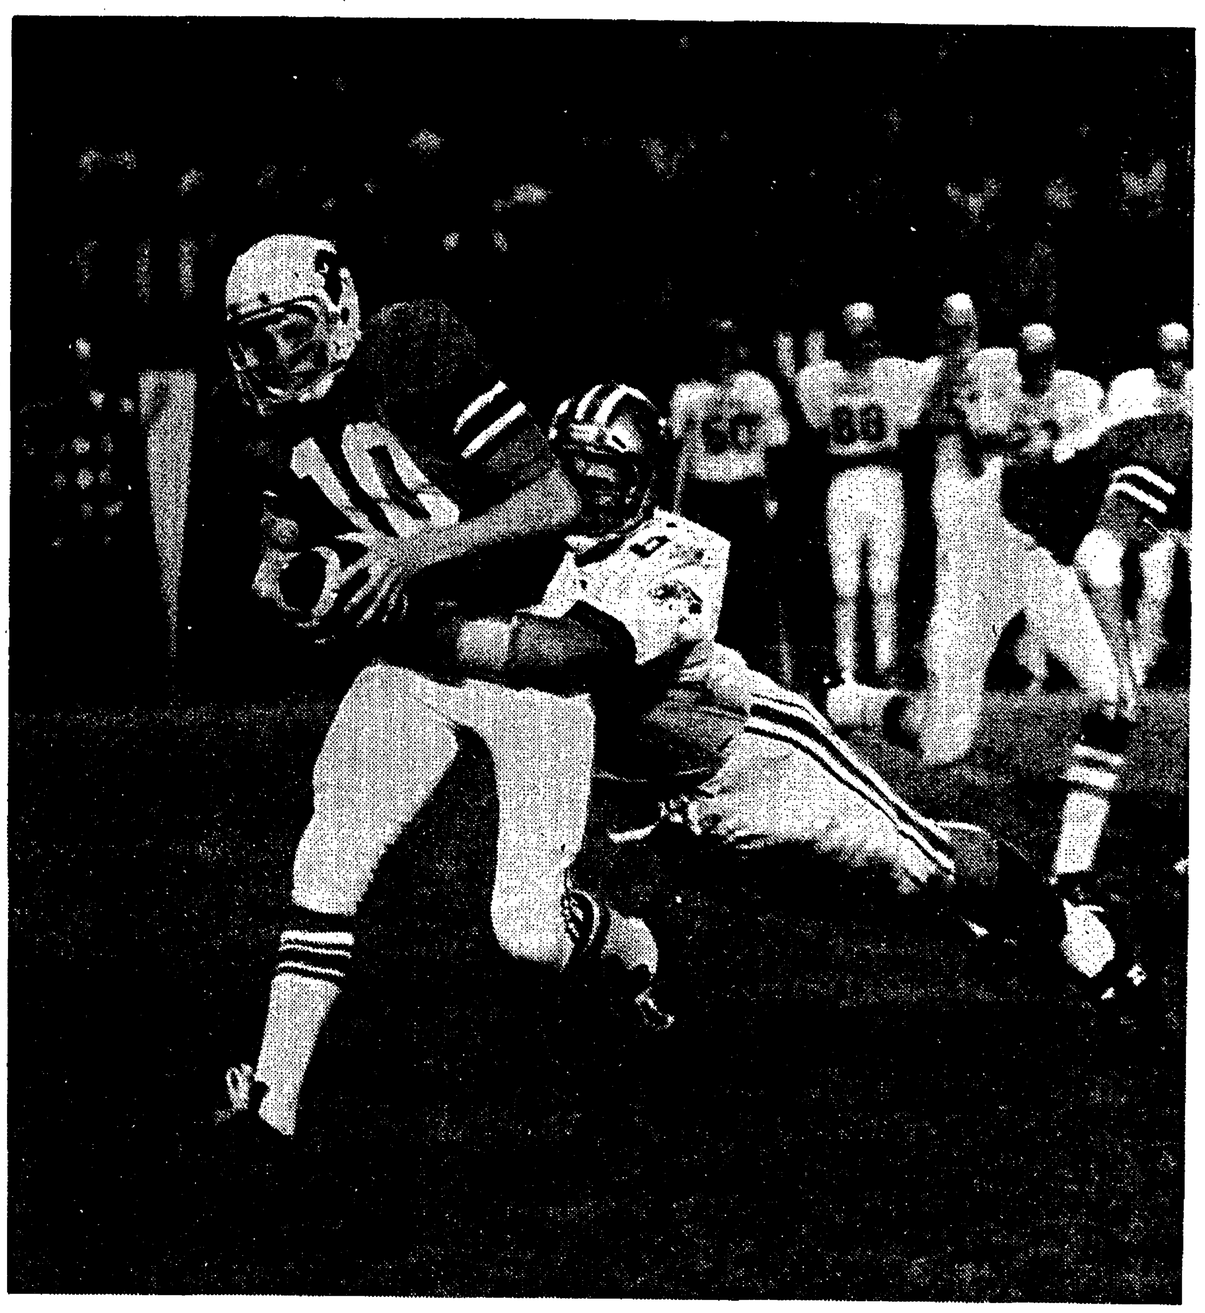
ARLINGTON SAW two second half drives thwarted by fumbles, reaching the Conant 19 in the third quarter and late in the fourth quarter at the Conant four-yard line.

"We almost tried to give the game away," said Conant's John Ayres. "Arlington's scrappy defense and our own penalties kept us in bad field position for most of that second half. It sure is nice to win one on the road for a change."

Arlington coach Chuck Haines saw improvement in his team's performance and had praise for Conant's team.

"If we keep improving next week like we did this week we'll be there. These guys have a lot of guts."

Arlington plays its next game Friday night at Rolling Meadows while Conant will play host to Elk Grove also on Friday.



QUARTERBACKS Rocky Pugliese (top) of Conant High School and Arlington's Chuck Klein were the centers of attention Friday night in the Mid-Suburban League inter-divisional battle won by Conant, 15-8. Pugliese scored the winning touchdown on a keeper while Klein passed to Chuck Gilman for Arlington's points.

Second Viking shutout

Fremd's defense shackles Hoffman, 24-0

by ART MUGALIAN

Give him his choice and Fremd football coach Joe Samojedny will take defense over offense every time. He didn't have to make a choice Friday night when his undefeated and unscored-upon Vikings presented him with a 24-0 rout of visiting Hoffman Estates.

"I like defense," said Samojedny after Fremd had won its second straight game of the season, both by shutout scores.

"I think defense can be more consistent than offense. When our offense improves — and it still needs improvement — it will enhance the defense and give us a chance to do some different things."

MOSTLY, FREMD'S attack capitalized on an inexperienced Hoffman team that was making its 1977 debut after sitting out the first week. The Vikings went to the air almost immediately, much to everyone's surprise, to take a quick 7-0 lead.

Mike Gavigan's 40-yard touchdown pass to swingback John Cane on Fremd's second series produced the initial score, and durable halfback Kevin Weaver weaved his way for a 46-yard scamper later to set up his own 2-yard TD run in the first quarter. Weaver, who rushed for 157 yards, tallied again on a two-yard burst in the second quarter, and kicker Mike Freeman added a fourth-quarter field goal, his fourth in two games.

But it was defense, the impenetrable kind, that pleased Samojedny by holding the Hoffman attack to just 19 total yards and three first downs all night.

"In talking to the kids after the game I was trying to think of one major contribution that any one boy made," said Samojedny. "But it was really just a very good team effort."

FREMD'S DEFENSE TOOK the field right away when the offense was stopped by Hoffman on three running plays at the game's outset. After a punt, the Vikings' onrushing line forced Hawk quarterback Ed Hockenberry to fumble, and junior defensive end Steve Salis recovered for Fremd on the enemy 22.

Three plays and two Fremd penalties later, with a third and 28 situation, quarterback Gavigan cranked up and threw the bomb to Cane down the right sideline, hitting his target in full stride at the goal line. Freeman then booted the first of his three extra-point kicks.

"He must have thrown the ball 50-some yards in the air," Samojedny said. "And Cane wasn't his main receiver either. That made it all the more spectacular."

Gavigan, who was 0-for-4 in Fremd's opening win over Holy Cross, finished the night with 8-for-10 passing and 118 yards against Hoffman . The senior QB also rushed for 56 yards.

"WE SAW THAT Hoffman was using just one secondary man to try to stack up our running game," Samjedny said. "So we decided to try to establish our passing game instead of banging into that stuff."

A 37-yard pass from Gavigan to Duane Amell down to the Hoffman 17 set up Weaver's second TD run of the night. Amell caught two passes for 42 yards and Cane snared three for a total of 59.

"We still need some work," Samojedny said. "I thought we made four crucial mistakes — what I call concentration mistakes."

One of those errors was a Fremd offside penalty on a Hoffman punting down and another was a muffed punt. Gavigan also threw an interception and fumbled a handoff. Still, the Vikings racked up 364 yards in total offense.

ON DEFENSE, Fremd limited junior running back Gary Hudson to just nine yards in seven carries and belted Hockenberry for five sacks.

"They were trying to throw that tough line-of-scrimmage pass," said Samojedny, "and we threw them for a loss more often than not."

That's what Samojedny likes to see.

Greg Wellman and Dan Dougellier scored goals and Jeff Campbell turned in a solid job in the net Friday night as Elk Grove High School stunned Forest View, 2-1, in Mid-Suburban League soccer.

Mark Heffley assisted Wellman with the clincher in the second half after Dougellier and George Banauch teamed up for the first Grenadier goal.

Nick Racz scored in the opening period for Forest View.

Campbell had 30 saves in goal for Elk Grove. Matt Clark turned back 10 shots for the Falcons.

"They came out strong but when we tied it up the momentum went over to our side," said Elk Grove coach Rick Lindeen. "We just wore them down. Our defense held and our goalie did an outstanding job. He seems to have a sixth sense about the ball."

Falcons hold on to beat Hersey

by DON FRISKE

For a short minute Friday night, it looked like another one of those things (a victory) would happen for the Hersey football team in the middle of the last quarter.

But the Forest View Falcons would not let it be as their defense held the Huskies in a crucial set of downs late in the game to come away with a 14-8 victory on the Hersey field.

"You have to give the defense a lot of credit," said Fred Lussow, the Falcon coach.
"They stuck their nose in there and didn't give them anything."

WITH 4:57 LEFT to play, Hersey scored its only touchdown on a 28-yard pass from Curt Roy to Todd Bracy with Dan Vucovich scoring on the two-point conversion.

Then Hersey's Terry Wendt recovered the loose ball on an on-side kick and, after a 15-yard penalty against the Falcons, the Huskies took over again with a first down on the Forest View 32-yard line.

That's when the Falcon defense came through. The Huskies were held to only five yards rushing in the next four plays. Then, Falcon quarterback Jeff Nelson came on the field and did what he had done for most of the game. He controlled the football.

With the help of a 15-yard Hersey penalty, the Falcons were able to run out the clock by using seven rushing plays in the closing minutes.

DURING THE FIRST half, Nelson displayed his ability to keep the Falcon offense on the field. On their first possession of the night, the Falcons moved the ball 71 yards on 13 plays. They eventually scored on a 20-yard pass from Nelson to Jeff Glazner with 2:44 left in the first quarter.

After Hersey failed on three plays and punted, Forest View took over on their own 17 and promptly began another march.

The big play was a 38-year run by John Miscevich, which gave the Falcons a first down on the Hersey 25 yard line. Three plays later, Nelson connected on an 18 yarder to Joe Forssander for the second touchdown.

John Fredricks kicked both extra points to make the score 14-0 with 10:24 left in the first half.

THE HUSKIES picked up some momentum after that, but they could only get to the Falcon 35. On their next possession, they made it to the eight-yard line, where a field-goal attempt failed with only 45 seconds on the clock.

Starting quarterback Vucovich had trouble in executing the forward pass throughout the first three periods.

"Danny was uptight. The offense moved up and down the field, but couldn't connect on the forward pass," Hersey coach Loe Gliwa said. "Nobody could criticize our line. Those guys gave excellent pass protection."

Early in the final quarter, Gliwa went with Roy, who completed six of eight passes to give the Huskies their only touchdown of the night.

"WE MIGHT HAVE gotten a little tired in the end," Lussow said. "Their platoon helped them."

But the Falcons had enough energy to hold off Hersey's frantic surge near the end of the contest. They could have avoided the desperate moments if a certain play had worked in the third quarter.

Forest View had the ball on the Hersey five yard line, but couldn't come up with a touchdown or even a first down.

"That misplay hurt us because it got Hersey's momentum going. If we could have gotten a first down, we could have put them away," Lussow said.

With the sweat drying on his forehead, the Falcon coach could say that with a smile.

Penn St.-Houston game has Paterno worried

College football

Ninth-ranked Penn State and 12th-ranked Houston, two teams that registered impressive victories in their opening contests, will meet each other head-on today in a game that seems to have Joe Paterno, coach of favored Penn State, more worried than Houston coach Bill Yeoman.

Paterno's team will be well-rested, as the Nittany Lions have not played since Sept. 2, when they routed Rutgers 45-7, and they will be at home. Houston will be going on just four days rest, coming off its hard-fought 17-13 victory over UCLA Monday night.

But the short span between games does not bother Houston Coach Bill Yeoman.

"I'm not going to worry about the fact we have to play them in such a short time," said Yeoman. "I don't worry about anything I can't control.

"WE EXPECT Penn State to be similar to UCLA in their lines. And from what I hear their defense is quicker than in the past because they have moved some linebackers into the defensive line."

"Houston is the type of game that makes you nervous," said Paterno. "They play daring, wide-open football and they have great speed at their skill positions."

On the surface, No. 2 ranked USC appears to have an easy day Saturday, as the Trojans travel to Corvallis to face unranked Oregon State. USC, which has a 12-game winning streak going, including a season-opening victory over Missouri, is favored by 24 points.

But Oregon State opened its season with an upset victory over Syracuse and OSU coach Craig Fertig is cautiously optimistic.

"I'm glad we are playing them in Corvallis," said Fertig. "USC has great tradition and like all Trojan teams this year's squad is very good. They will be the most physical team we play this year with their size and speed. It's never easy trying to find a weakness. It's nice that we won last week and hopefully there will be a carryover."

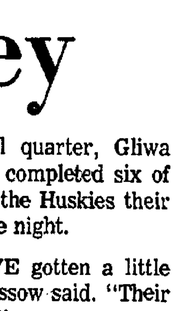
Harrigan's links performance positively matchless

Jeff Nordlund

Byline report



The days of match play golf at the national level are nearly gone — bigger purses, bigger galleries and television have seen to that.

But match play is still thriving at the local level, and this was shown once more at the Illinois PGA Match Play championship this week where Mike Harrigan rallied to win and earn the title "Outstanding Illinois Golfer of 1977."

Harrigan, an assistant professional at Medinah C.C. the last three years, came back after being down three holes with only seven holes remaining to edge Sunset Ridge C.C. assistant pro phil Aldrige 1-up in the finals at Glen Flora C.C. in Waukegan Friday.

IT WAS MATCH play at its best, giving both the golfers and the spectators a chance to see all the day-long drama.

The victory also allowed the 23-year-old Harrigan to pass Glen Oak C.C. pro Steve Benson, who was eliminated early in the tournament, in the Bernardi point standings. Those standings are used to determine the "Outstanding Golfer" honor, and the match play championship was the final counting PGA meet of the season.

For Harrigan, the tournament capped a remarkable season considering he was not among the top statewide professionals last year. Aldridge, too, ended an excellent season, but in disappointment.

"IT'S A GREAT honor to be the top golfer in the state," Harrigan said moments after halving the 18th hole with Aldridge to preserve his one-hole lead. "Winning the title is something I had made a goal for myself."

With Benson out of the tournament early, Harrigan had the Bernardi-point leadership no matter what he did in Friday's final match with Aldridge. While reaching the finals, Harrigan had to beat last year's Bernardi champ, Bill Ogden from North Shore C.C.

Against Aldridge, Harrigan fell behind three holes after 11 had been played. But with a par at the 12th, a birdie at the 15th, a par at the 16th and another birdie at the 17th, Harrigan caught and passed Aldridge.

At the 16th, Aldridge missed a three-foot putt to fall into the tie, and a hole later Harrigan putted in from just off the green to take a birdie and go ahead.

"I WASN'T GOING to give up when I fell down three," Harrigan said. "But I got discouraged when Aldridge parred the 13th after taking a drop. I knew I just had to go out and swing for birdies then.

"When Phil missed that putt at the 16th, I knew I had a chance. I was pretty fortunate to get that putt to roll in on the 17th."

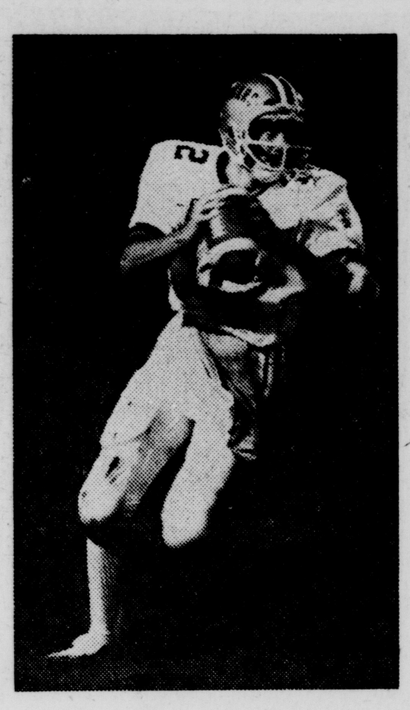
Despite Aldridge's faltering confidence, made worse after driving into the sand on the par three 18th, Harrigan still had to worry over every shot down to the last. Aldridge blasted from the trap to within three feet of the cup to take a par.

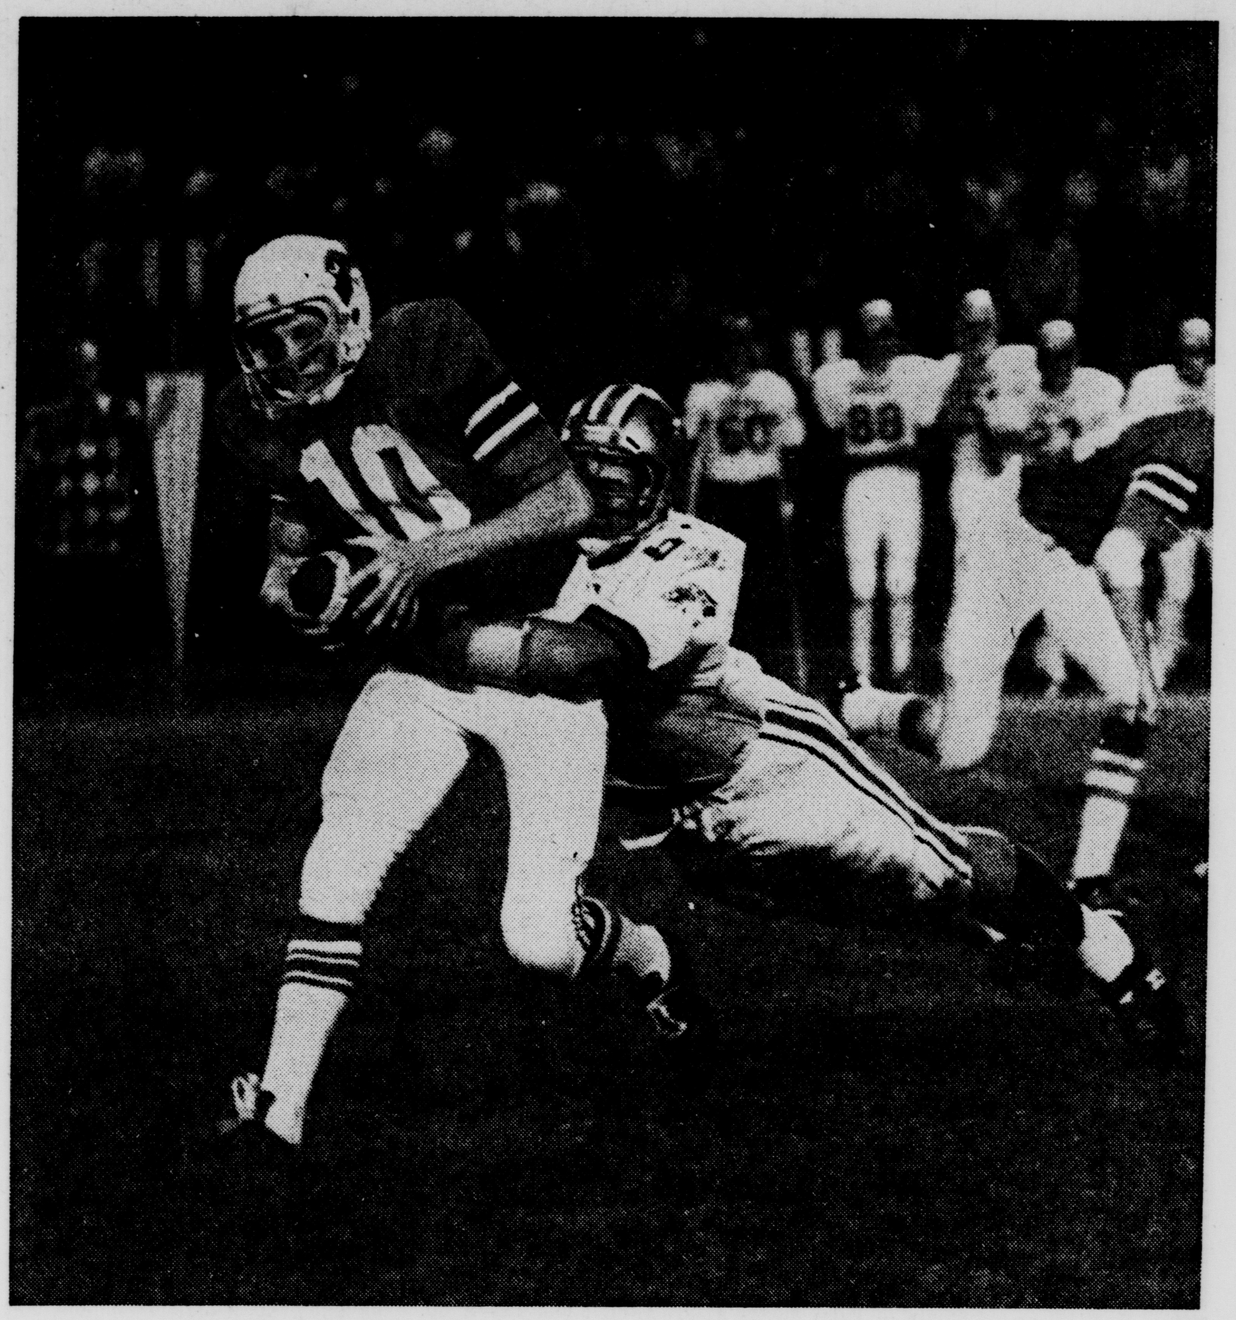
Harrigan, who missed the green by inches on the 18th, chipped up and dropped his two-footer to take the championship, his second PGA title of the year. He captured the 18-hole stroke play title at Lake Shore C.C. earlier this year.

AMONG HIS OTHER achievements this year, Harrigan also qualified for and briefly led the U.S. Open in Tulsa, Okla., and finished in a tie for fourth in the Illinois Open at Elgin C.C. in August.

Sixty-four Illinois professionals began play at the start of the week in the match play championships. Romo Crovetti from Mount Prospect, the defending champion, was eliminated in a quarterfinal match. the 18-hole final was to have been played Thursday, but was postponed by rain.

Conant gets the goods on Arlington





QUARTERBACKS Rocky Pugliese (top) of Conant High School and Arlington's Chuck Klein were the centers of attention Friday night in the Mid-Suburban League inter-divisional battle won by Conant, 15-8. Pugliese scored the winning touchdown on a keeper while Klein passed to Chuck Gilman for Arlington's points.

by DAVE HESS

The unbeaten Conant Cougars, dominating the first half, scored two touchdowns and held on to defeat the winless Arlington Cardinals 15-8 on the Arlington field.

Taking the opening kickoff, Conant struck quickly, marching 71 yards in only five plays.

The Cougar running tandem of Al Barnhill and Tim Tyrrell powered the way into the end zone, the highlight being a 41-yard sweep around the right end by Tyrrell. Barnhill's 20-yard ramble put Conant on the board and at 9:12 they led 7-0.

Arlington's initial drive ended with quarterback Chuck Klein being sacked by Steve Herring on his own 42-yard line, but the Cardinals took the ball back when a host of tacklers forced Cougar quarterback Rocky Pugliese to fumble at the Arlington 46. It was the first of six fumbles committed by both sides in a game that saw an abundance of fierce hitting and aggressive tackling.

ON THE NEXT play, Klein took off through the right side for 38 yards to the Conant 17. Two plays later, just at the start of the second quarter, it was Klein passing 11 yards to split end Chuck Gilman and Arlington had their first points of the year.

The Cardinals initially lined up to kick for the extra point, but a Conant offsides changed their minds. Instead, it was Klein pitching to Greg Sabatello for a two point conversion to give them an 8-7 lead.

Conant held onto the ball for almost the entire second quarter, moving slowly from their own 33. Eighteen plays later they moved into the end zone on a keeper by Pugliese from a half yard out. Pugliese's pass to Brad Goodman was good for two and Conant led, 15-8.

Conant almost scored again as the half wore out reaching the Arlington three-yard line on a 21-yard pass from Pugliese to Goodman.

ARLINGTON SAW two second half drives thwarted by fumbles, reaching the Conant 19 in the third quarter and late in the fourth quarter at the Conant four-yard line.

"We almost tried to give the game away," said Conant's John Ayres. "Arlington's scrappy defense and our own penalties kept us in bad field position for most of that second half. It sure is nice to win one on the road for a change."

Arlington coach Chuck Haines saw improvement in his team's performance and had praise for Conant's team.

"If we keep improving next week like we did this week we'll be there. These guys have a lot of guts."

Arlington plays its next game Friday night at Rolling Meadows while Conant will play host to Elk Grove also on Friday.

Second Viking shutout

Fremd's defense shackles Hoffman, 24-0

by ART MUGALIAN

Give him his choice and Fremd football coach Joe Samojedny will take defense over offense every time. He didn't have to make a choice Friday night when his undefeated and unscored-upon Vikings presented him with a 24-0 rout of visiting Hoffman Estates.

"I like defense," said Samojedny after Fremd had won its second straight game of the season, both by shutout scores.

"I think defense can be more consistent than offense. When our offense improves — and it still needs improvement — it will enhance the defense and give us a chance to do some different things."

MOSTLY, FREMD'S attack capitalized on an inexperienced Hoffman team that was making its 1977 debut after sitting out the first week. The Vikings went to the air almost immediately, much to everyone's surprise, to take a quick 7-0 lead.

Mike Gavigan's 40-yard touchdown pass to swingback John Cane on Fremd's second series produced the initial score, and durable halfback Kevin Weaver weaved his way for a 46-yard scamper later to set up his own 2-yard TD run in the first quarter. Weaver, who rushed for 157 yards, tallied again on a two-yard burst in the second quarter, and kicker Mike Freeman added a fourth-quarter field goal, his fourth in two games.

But it was defense, the impenetrable kind, that pleased Samojedny by holding the Hoffman attack to just 19 total yards and three first downs all night.

"In talking to the kids after the game I was trying to think of one major contribution that any one boy made," said Samojedny. "But it was really just a very good team effort."

FREMD'S DEFENSE TOOK the field right away when the offense was stopped by Hoffman on three running plays at the game's outset. After a punt, the Vikings' onrushing line forced Hawk quarterback Ed Hockenberry to fumble, and junior defensive end Steve Salis recovered for Fremd on the enemy 22.

Three plays and two Fremd penalties later, with a third and 28 situation, quarterback Gavigan cranked up and threw the bomb to Cane down the right sideline, hitting his target in full stride at the goal line. Freeman then booted the first of his three extra-point kicks.

"He must have thrown the ball 50-some yards in the air," Samojedny said. "And Cane wasn't his main receiver either. That made it all the more spectacular."

Gavigan, who was 0-for-4 in Fremd's opening win over Holy Cross, finished the night with 8-for-10 passing and 118 yards against Hoffman . The senior QB also rushed for 56 yards.

"WE SAW THAT Hoffman was using just one secondary man to try to stack up our running game," Samjedny said. "So we decided to try to establish our passing game instead of banging into that stuff."

A 37-yard pass from Gavigan to Duane Amell down to the Hoffman 17 set up Weaver's second TD run of the night. Amell caught two passes for 42 yards and Cane snared three for a total of 59.

"We still need some work," Samojedny said. "I thought we made four crucial mistakes — what I call concentration mistakes."

One of those errors was a Fremd offside penalty on a Hoffman punting down and another was a muffed punt. Gavigan also threw an interception and fumbled a handoff. Still, the Vikings racked up 364 yards in total offense.

ON DEFENSE, Fremd limited junior running back Gary Hudson to just nine yards in seven carries and belted Hockenberry for five sacks.

"They were trying to throw that tough line-of-scrimmage pass," said Samojedny, "and we threw them for a loss more often than not."

That's what Samojedny likes to see.

Greg Wellman and Dan Dougellier scored goals and Jeff Campbell turned in a solid job in the net Friday night as Elk Grove High School stunned Forest View, 2-1, in Mid-Suburban League soccer.

Mark Heffley assisted Wellman with the clincher in the second half after Dougellier and George Banauch teamed up for the first Grenadier goal.

Nick Racz scored in the opening period for Forest View.

Campbell had 30 saves in goal for Elk Grove. Matt Clark turned back 10 shots for the Falcons.

"They came out strong but when we tied it up the momentum went over to our side," said Elk Grove coach Rick Lindeen. "We just wore them down. Our defense held and our goalie did an outstanding job. He seems to have a sixth sense about the ball."

Falcons hold on to beat Hersey

by DON FRISKE

For a short minute Friday night, it looked like another one of those things (a victory) would happen for the Hersey football team in the middle of the last quarter.

But the Forest View Falcons would not let it be as their defense held the Huskies in a crucial set of downs late in the game to come away with a 14-8 victory on the Hersey field.

"You have to give the defense a lot of credit," said Fred Lussow, the Falcon coach.

"They stuck their nose in there and didn't give them anything."

WITH 4:57 LEFT to play, Hersey scored its only touchdown on a 28-yard pass from Curt Roy to Todd Bracy with Dan Vucovich scoring on the two-point conversion.

Then Hersey's Terry Wendt recovered the loose ball on an on-side kick and, after a 15-yard penalty against the Falcons, the Huskies took over again with a first down on the Forest View 32-yard line.

That's when the Falcon defense came through. The Huskies were held to only five yards rushing in the next four plays. Then, Falcon quarterback Jeff Nelson came on the field and did what he had done for most of the game. He controlled the football.

With the help of a 15-yard Hersey penalty, the Falcons were able to run out the clock by using seven rushing plays in the closing minutes.

DURING THE FIRST half, Nelson displayed his ability to keep the Falcon offense on the field. On their first possession of the night, the Falcons moved the ball 71 yards on 13 plays. They eventually scored on a 20-yard pass from Nelson to Jeff Glazner with 2:44 left in the first quarter.

After Hersey failed on three plays and punted, Forest View took over on their own 17 and promptly began another march.

The big play was a 38-year run by John Miscevich, which gave the Falcons a first down on the Hersey 25 yard line. Three plays later, Nelson connected on an 18 yarder to Joe Forssander for the second touchdown.

John Fredricks kicked both extra points to make the score 14-0 with 10:24 left in the first half.

THE HUSKIES picked up some momentum after that, but they could only get to the Falcon 35. On their next possession, they made it to the eight-yard line, where a field-goal attempt failed with only 45 seconds on the clock.

Starting quarterback Vucovich had trouble in executing the forward pass throughout the first three periods.

"Danny was uptight. The offense moved up and down the field, but couldn't connect on the forward pass," Hersey coach Loe Gliwa said. "Nobody could criticize our line. Those guys gave excellent pass protection."

Early in the final quarter, Gliwa went with Roy, who completed six of eight passes to give the Huskies their only touchdown of the night.

"WE MIGHT HAVE gotten a little tired in the end," Lussow said. "Their platoon helped them."

But the Falcons had enough energy to hold off Hersey's frantic surge near the end of the contest. They could have avoided the desperate moments if a certain play had worked in the third quarter.

Forest View had the ball on the Hersey five yard line, but couldn't come up with a touchdown or even a first down.

"That misplay hurt us because it got Hersey's momentum going. If we could have gotten a first down, we could have put them away," Lussow said.

With the sweat drying on his forehead, the Falcon coach could say that with a smile.

Penn St.-Houston game has Paterno worried

College football

Ninth-ranked Penn State and 12th-ranked Houston, two teams that registered impressive victories in their opening contests, will meet each other head-on today in a game that seems to have Joe Paterno, coach of favored Penn State, more worried than Houston coach Bill Yeoman.

Paterno's team will be well-rested, as the Nittany Lions have not played since Sept. 2, when they routed Rutgers 45-7, and they will be at home. Houston will be going on just four days rest, coming off its hard-fought 17-13 victory over UCLA Monday night.

But the short span between games does not bother Houston Coach Bill Yeoman.

"I'm not going to worry about the fact we have to play them in such a short time," said Yeoman. "I don't worry about anything I can't control.

"WE EXPECT Penn State to be similar to UCLA in their lines. And from what I hear their defense is quicker than in the past because they have moved some linebackers into the defensive line."

"Houston is the type of game that makes you nervous," said Paterno. "They play daring, wide-open football and they have great speed at their skill positions."

On the surface, No. 2 ranked USC appears to have an easy day Saturday, as the Trojans travel to Corvallis to face unranked Oregon State. USC, which has a 12-game winning streak going, including a season-opening victory over Missouri, is favored by 24 points.

But Oregon State opened its season with an upset victory over Syracuse and OSU coach Craig Fertig is cautiously optimistic.

"I'm glad we are playing them in Corvallis," said Fertig. "USC has great tradition and like all Trojan teams this year's squad is very good. They will be the most physical team we play this year with their size and speed. It's never easy trying to find a weakness. It's nice that we won last week and hopefully there will be a carryover."

Harrigan's links performance positively matchless

Warriors' 13-6 win relieves coach

BY LARRY WATTS

It wasn't an impressive victory. But all rookie Maine West head coach Dan Mortier will remember when he retires from the gridiron is that the Warriors' 13-6 nailbiter over Niles North was his first win in the coaching ranks.

"I think people were beginning to wonder about me after we lost the New Trier West game 35-0," said a more relaxed Mortier after the game. "I felt real bad about that loss and the boys really deserved to win this one."

Odds makers couldn't have asked for a more even battle in the Central Suburban League crossover game. The Vikings also were held scoreless in a 27-0 debut against Glenbrook South last week.

WITH TAILBACK Bob Aslan providing touchdown runs of 14 and 35 yards, the Warriors jumped out to a 13-0 first half lead. Aslan picked up 85 yards rushing in the first half and wound up with 105 yards in 21 carries.

"Aslan did a tremendous job of running the ball to the outside and (Vince) Webster made a lot of that yardage possible for him," said Mortier. Although Webster only netted 45 yards in 12 carries, the Warriors' bullish fullback was an instrumental force in the victory.

MAINE WEST'S defense, especially in the first half, took on a marked improvement from last week's disaster. The Warrior defenders gave up three first downs and 42 yards total offense in the first two periods.

"Niles North did a heckuva a job in bringing the game right to us in the second half," Mortier said. "It took us a while to realize that there was another half of football to be played."

Niles North took the Warriors' second half kickoff and drove to the Maine West 27-yard line. But the drive seemed to have been stopped as Warrior Scott Spjuth recovered a Vlking fumble.

HOWEVER, ON the Warriors' first offensive play, quarterback Ken Quinn and Aslan misconnected on a pitchout and the Vikings' James Reich recovered the ball. Six plays later, Niles North scored its lone touchdown when halfback Eric Huska went eight yards around left end.

Yanks nip Tigers to keep lead

From Daily Herald wire services

Paul Blair, subbing for the injured Mickey Rivers, drilled a two-run homer to cap a four-run eighth inning Friday night which enabled the New York Yankees to defeat the host Detroit Tigers 5-4 and maintain their 2½ game lead in the American League East.

The Yankees were trailing 3-1 in the eighth when Reggie Jackson and Graig Nettles sandwiched singles off loser Fernando Arroyo around the second out of the inning to start the rally. Lou Piniella then tagged a 2-2 pitch for a double off the left-center field fence to score both runners and Blair greeted reliever Bruce Taylor with his fourth homer.

Jim Palmer, rising to the pressure of the pennant race in his own inimitable style, stifled the Boston Red Sox on eieght hits Friday night and pitched Baltimore to a 6-1 victory which enabled the Orioles to take over sole possession of second place in the American League East.

It has been an up-and-down season for Palmer but, as usual, the Orioles' right-hander performed like the three-time Cy Young Award winner he is when the pressure was greatest. The Red Sox had Palmer in trouble in three of the last four innings but he stranded six runners during that stretch and went the distance for the 19th time to raise his record to 17-11.

PINCH-HITTER Graig Reynolds' run-scoring single in the eighth inning lifted the Seattle Mariners to a 4-1 victory over host Kansas City to stop the Royals' club record winning streak at 16 games.

The Kansas City winning streak, which was the longest in the major leagues in 24 years, fell just three short of the American League record set in 1906 by the Chicago White Sox. It was only the Royals' fourth loss in their last 31 games.

Pinch-hitter Dave Johnson broke a 6-6 tie with a single in the sixth inning to push the Philadelphia Phillies to a 12-6 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Johnson's single, which knocked out loser John Denny, 7-7, drove in Ted Sizemore who had doubled. Jay Johnstone led off the inning with a double and Bob Boone singled as the Phillies erased a 6-4 deficit.

LIGHT-HITTING Jerry Terrell and Laurence Wolfe, playing in his first major league game, each drove in two runs during a six-run seventh inning that led the Minnesota Twins to a 9-7 victory over the host Texas Rangers.

Tony Perez cracked a two-run homer and Gary Carter added his 27th home run as the Montreal Expos blanked the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-0 behind the combined six-hit shutout pitching of Dan Schatzeder and Don Stanhouse.

Joe Coleman tossed a seven-hitter and Mike Jorgensen hit a three-run homer to lead the Oakland A's to an 8-1 rout of the Milwaukee Brewers.

Coleman, raising his record to 3-4, allowed just three singles after the fourth inning. He walked two and struck out six in besting Moose Haas, 10-11.

Forego goes for Woodward today

NEW YORK (UPI) — Forego faces a field of 13 challengers, including J. O. Tobin and Majestic Light, as he attempts to get back on the winning track in Saturday's $150,000-added Woodward Stakes at Belmont Park.

The huge brown gelding will be toting 133 pounds in his quest for his fourth straight Woodward victory, a drop of three pounds from what he carried in the Whitney at Saratoga when he finished dead last, 18 lengths behind Nearly On Time. Prior to that the three-time Horse of the Year lost two in a row at Belmont, the Brooklyn under 137 pounds and the Suburban under 138 pounds.

Last year Forego lugged 135 pounds to win the Woodward, the first in Belmont's fall championship series which is followed by the $200,000-added Marlboro Cup on Oct. 1 and the $300,000-added Jockey Club Gold Cup on Oct. 15. Forego also won the Marlboro Cup last year with regular jockey Willie Shoemaker, but broke down before the Jockey Club Gold Cup.

THE RACE WILL be worth $181,000 if all 14 start, with $108,600 to the winner. If Forego wins, he will take a giant step closer to Kelso's all-time money-winning record of $1,977,896. The 7-year-old son of Forli has bankrolled $1,818,957 in his career.

"This year he looks good," said trainer Frank Whitel. "He's feeling good and he's working good. He likes the colder weather much better, too. But we got some competition down the other end of the barn."

Forego is rated at 8-5 on the early line, followed by Majestic Light at 4-1 and Forego's barnmate, the California speedster J.O. Tobin, a 6-1.

Majestic Light, the 4-year-old son of Majestic Prince, was an eight-length winner in the Amory L. Haskell at Monmouth this summer and will carry 128 pounds, including Sandy Hawley Saturday. The colt has also had impressive victories in the Bernard Baruch at Saratoga and the Washington Park Handicap on the turf at Arlington this year to bring his lifetime earnings to $461,521.

TRAINED BY John Russell, he also has the Swaps and Cinema Handicaps to his credit as a 3-year-old, but surprisingly he has never won at Belmont. "He just doesn't like the track — it's sandy and tiring," said Russell. "But if your horse is going to be a champion, he has to race here in the fall."

J.O. Tobin, the only horse to ever beat Triple Crown winner Seattle Slew, shipped in from California last week and has been working impressively over the Belmont track. Thursday morning the Never Bend colt, who was the British 2-year-old champion, turned in a fleet :45 for a half mile and then galloped out in :57 3-5.

The colt has not raced since his startling defeat of Seattle Slew in the Swaps on July 3, but his trainer Johnny Adams feels his horse is more than ready, and his workouts show.

"He's much more mature than he was in the Preakness — he's put on weight," said Adams. "I was going to ship him east earlier, but he developed a fever, which kept him out of the Cinema, but he's good now."

J.O. Tobin will be carrying 121 pounds and jockey Darrell McHargue. Jockey Willie Shoemaker will be aboard Forego.

Warriors' 13-6 win relieves coach

BY LARRY WATTS

It wasn't an impressive victory. But all rookie Maine West head coach Dan Mortier will remember when he retires from the gridiron is that the Warriors' 13-6 nailbiter over Niles North was his first win in the coaching ranks.

"I think people were beginning to wonder about me after we lost the New Trier West game 35-0," said a more relaxed Mortier after the game. "I felt real bad about that loss and the boys really deserved to win this one."

Odds makers couldn't have asked for a more even battle in the Central Suburban League crossover game. The Vikings also were held scoreless in a 27-0 debut against Glenbrook South last week.

WITH TAILBACK Bob Aslan providing touchdown runs of 14 and 35 yards, the Warriors jumped out to a 13-0 first half lead. Aslan picked up 85 yards rushing in the first half and wound up with 105 yards in 21 carries.

"Aslan did a tremendous job of running the ball to the outside and (Vince) Webster made a lot of that yardage possible for him," said Mortier. Although Webster only netted 45 yards in 12 carries, the Warriors' bullish fullback was an instrumental force in the victory.

MAINE WEST'S defense, especially in the first half, took on a marked improvement from last week's disaster. The Warrior defenders gave up three first downs and 42 yards total offense in the first two periods.

"Niles North did a heckuva a job in bringing the game right to us in the second half," Mortier said. "It took us a while to realize that there was another half of football to be played."

Niles North took the Warriors' second half kickoff and drove to the Maine West 27-yard line. But the drive seemed to have been stopped as Warrior Scott Spjuth recovered a Viking fumble.

HOWEVER, ON the Warriors' first offensive play, quarterback Ken Quinn and Aslan misconnected on a pitchout and the Vikings' James Reich recovered the ball. Six plays later, Niles North scored its lone touchdown when halfback Eric Huska went eight yards around left end.

Yanks nip Tigers to keep lead

Paul Blair, subbing for the injured Mickey Rivers, drilled a two-run homer to cap a four-run eighth inning Friday night which enabled the New York Yankees to defeat the host Detroit Tigers 5-4 and maintain their 2½ game lead in the American League East.

Lou Piniella then tagged a 2-2 pitch for a double off the left-center field fence to score both runners and Blair greeted reliever Bruce Taylor with his fourth homer.

Jim Palmer, rising to the pressure of the pennant race in his own inimitable style, stifled the Boston Red Sox on eieght hits Friday night and pitched Baltimore to a 6-1 victory which enabled the Orioles to take over sole possession of second place in the American League East.

The Red Sox had Palmer in trouble in three of the last four innings but he stranded six runners during that stretch and went the distance for the 19th time to raise his record to 17-11.

PINCH-HITTER Graig Reynolds' run-scoring single in the eighth inning lifted the Seattle Mariners to a 4-1 victory over host Kansas City to stop the Royals' club record winning streak at 16 games.

The Kansas City winning streak, which was the longest in the major leagues in 24 years, fell just three short of the American League record set in 1906 by the Chicago White Sox. It was only the Royals' fourth loss in their last 31 games.

Pinch-hitter Dave Johnson broke a 6-6 tie with a single in the sixth inning to push the Philadelphia Phillies to a 12-6 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Johnson's single, which knocked out loser John Denny, 7-7, drove in Ted Sizemore who had doubled. Jay Johnstone led off the inning with a double and Bob Boone singled as the Phillies erased a 6-4 deficit.

Tony Perez cracked a two-run homer and Gary Carter added his 27th home run as the Montreal Expos blanked the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-0 behind the combined six-hit shutout pitching of Dan Schatzeder and Don Stanhouse.

Joe Coleman tossed a seven-hitter and Mike Jorgensen hit a three-run homer to lead the Oakland A's to an 8-1 rout of the Milwaukee Brewers.

Coleman, raising his record to 3-4, allowed just three singles after the fourth inning. He walked two and struck out six in besting Moose Haas, 10-11.

Forego goes for Woodward today

NEW YORK (UPI) — Forego faces a field of 13 challengers, including J. O. Tobin and Majestic Light, as he attempts to get back on the winning track in Satuday's $150,000-added Woodward Stakes at Belmont Park.

The huge brown gelding will be toting 133 pounds in his quest for his fourth straight Woodward victory, a drop of three pounds from what he carried in the Whitney at Saratoga when he finished dead last, 18 lengths behind Nearly On Time. Prior to that the three-time Horse of the Year lost two in a row at Belmont, the Brooklyn under 137 pounds and the Suburban under 138 pounds.

Last year Forego lugged 135 pounds to win the Woodward, the first in Belmont's fall championship series which is followed by the $200,000-added Marlboro Cup on Oct. 1 and the $300,000-added Jockey Club Gold Cup on Oct. 15. Forego also won the Marlboro Cup last year with regular jockey Willie Shoemaker, but broke down before the Jockey Club Gold Cup.

THE RACE WILL be worth $181,000 if all 14 start, with $108,600 to the winner. If Forego wins, he will take a giant step closer to Kelso's all-time money-winning record of $1,977,896. The 7-year-old son of Forli has bankrolled $1,818,957 in his career.

"This year he looks good," said trainer Frank Whitel. "He's feeling good and he's working good. He likes the colder weather much better, too. But we got some competition down the other end of the barn."

Forego is rated at 8-5 on the early line, followed by Majestic Light at 4-1 and Forego's barnmate, the California speedster J.O. Tobin, a 6-1.

Majestic Light, the 4-year-old son of Majestic Prince, was an eight-length winner in the Amory L. Haskell at Monmouth this summer and will carry 128 pounds, including Sandy Hawley Saturday. The colt has also had impressive victories in the Bernard Baruch at Saratoga and the Washington Park Handicap on the turf at Arlington this year to bring his lifetime earnings to $461,521.

TRAINED BY John Russell, he also has the Swaps and Cinema Handicaps to his credit as a 3-year-old, but surprisingly he has never won at Belmont. "He just doesn't like the track — it's sandy and tiring," said Russell. "But if your horse is going to be a champion, he has to race here in the fall."

J.O. Tobin, the only horse to ever beat Triple Crown winner Seattle Slew, shipped in from California last week and has been working impressively over the Belmont track. Thursday morning the Never Bend colt, who was the British 2-year-old champion, turned in a fleet :45 for a half mile and then galloped out in :57 3-5.

The colt has not raced since his startling defeat of Seattle Slew in the Swaps on July 3, but his trainer Johnny Adams feels his horse is more than ready, and his workouts show.

"He's much more mature than he was in the Preakness — he's put on weight," said Adams. "I was going to ship him east earlier, but he developed a fever, which kept him out of the Cinema, but he's good now."

J.O. Tobin will be carrying 121 pounds and jockey Darrell McHargue. Jockey Willie Shoemaker will be aboard Forego.

The field, from the rail out, includes Tacitus (108), Steve Cauthen; Cinteelo (116), no rider; Majestic Light (128) Hawley; J.O. Tobin (121), McHargue; Quiet Little Table (115), Eddie Maple; Sawbones (110), Jorge Velasquez; Forego (133), Shoemaker; Affiliate (114), no rider; Great Contractor (115), Angel Cordero; Silver Series (114), Ron Turcotte; Capital Idea (108), John Ruane; Proud Birdie (110), Jacinto Vasquez; Wise Philip (110), Daryl Montoya, and Co Host (109) Eddie Maple.

Angel Hartzell's control is tiring to White Sox, 4-1

by BOB GALLAS

Paul Hartzell doesn't think he's strong enough to pitch every fourth day and the California Angels agree. And after Friday night, the White Sox agree, too.

The 23-year-old Hartzell, pitching with four days at rest instead of three, took just 87 pitches, 54 of which were strikes, to dispose of the White Sox 4-1 before 18,585 at Comiskey Park.

"Maybe when I'm 24 I'll be strong enough to go every four days," Hartzell quipped after a dazzling performance that was interrupted for 16 minutes by rain.

HARTZELL'S OPPOSITION Friday, one Chris Knapp, turned 24 Friday night, and he wasn't late for a family party after the game. Knapp was showered, dressed and ready to leave by the time the game was over since he left the game in the sixth inning. The last time out, Knapp dazzled California, striking out 13 to defeat the Angels and Hartzell in Anaheim last Sunday.

"Tonight I went out there and tried to throw too hard," said Knapp, who struck out only one in 5 2/3 innings. "You do that and tend to get a little wild."

It was a night that Knapp, now 11-7 will probably tend to blot from memory when he thinks about birthdays. While the Sox kept hitting the ball right at someone on offense, things started badly on defense.

The Angels took a 1-0 lead in the first when leadoff man Thad Bosley singled, then advanced to second when Knapp's pickoff attempt flew by first baseman Jim Spencer for a throwing error. Bosley scored on Bobby Bonds single.

A DUBIOUS infield hit by Ken Landreaux started the California second. A base hit by Terry Humphrey put runners at first and second and set up the second Knapp faux pas of the evening. Bosley tapped out catcher to first but Spencer, Knapp and catcher Bill Nahorodny could only watch helplessly as Landreaux scored all the way from second. No one had bothered to cover the plate.

"It was just a dumb mistake on my part," Knapp admitted. "I should have been there but I forgot about the runner on second."

The Angels added two more in the sixth off Knapp who was spelled by Don Kirkwood. Shortstop Rance Mulliniks, who hits Sox pitching like a backyard wiffle ball game, tripled to right center as rightfielder Royle Stillman slipped on the extremely soggy turf starting for the ball. Landreaux's bloop double brought in the run and Bosley then drove in his second run of the night with a single. That ended the night for Knapp.

Hartzell, who struck out three and walked nobody, lost his shutout in the eighth, when Stillman, who was 2-for-3 with a single and double, opened the inning with his two bases hit. Two outs later, Ralph Garr singled in the run for the suddenly punchless Sox, who have scored but three runs in their last 28 innings.

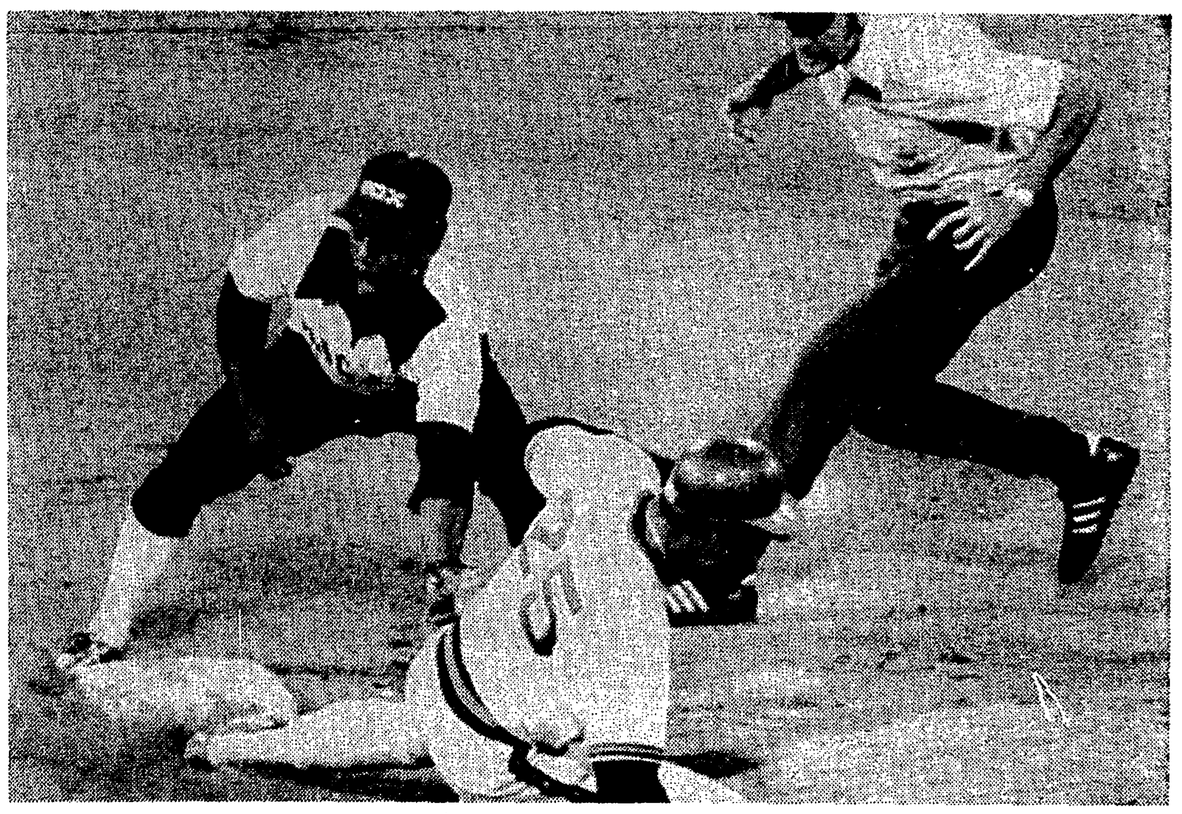
"I KEPT throwing to him (Garr) outside all night," said Hartzell, whose record is now 8-10. "I got one inside and he hit it."

Hartzell retired the first 11 men he faced to open the game before Jorge Orta singled with two out in the fourth. Harzell yielded just six hits as the game was reeled off in a snappy 2:02.

Richie Zisk returned to the Sox lineup as a designated hitter but went 0-for-4. "He's still bound up some by that pulled stomach muscle," explained Sox manager Bob Lemon. Oscar Gamble also sat out Friday with a minor ache and Bart Johnson left before the game with a stiff neck.

"I'll probably play some of the kids tomorrow (Saturday)" said Lemon, who indicated he'd use Mike Squires at first, Tommy Cruz in right field and Stillman in left. Jim Essian will probably return to catch.

SOX SHORTS: Jorge Orta has now hit safely in his last 18 games . . . Ralph Garr and Jim Essian have eight and seven game streaks respectively . . . Chet Lemon's 35 doubles is the most for a Sox player since Ken Henderson hit 35 in 1974 . . . Floyd Robinson holds the club record with 45 doubles in 1962 . . . The Angels have acquired former White Sox player Carlos May on waivers from the Yankees . . . Friday's crowd puts the Sox season attendance at 1,565,830 . . . The Sox have nine dates remaining to draw 78,630, which would equal the all-time club attendance record of 1,644,460 . . . An average of 8,737 per game from here on out would be needed to break the record.



BOBBY BONDS of the California Angels steals second base against White Sox Friday night at Comiskey Park. Catcher Bill Nahorodny's throw to second baseman Jorge Orta was late. Umpire is Lou DiMuro. California won, 4-1.

Cubs clinch 5-2 victory in New York–finally

NEW YORK — The Cubs found the old saying "all good things come to those who wait" is very true.

Back on July 13, a night game against the New York Mets at Shea Stadium was suspended because of the New York area power blackout. The Cubs were ahead, 2-1, with the Mets batting in the bottom of the sixth.

Starting from that point, the game finally was made up Friday evening. A failure occurred again for New York as the Mets could score only one more run while the Cubs added three.

The final result showed the Cubs winning, 5-2, but the joy was tempered by the news that star centerfielder Jerry Morales can't bat or field the rest of 1977 because of a broken finger.

THE VICTORY broke the Cubs' six-game losing streak and was their first on this road trip after four straignt losses. Chicago now will play a doubleheader Saturday because Friday's regularly scheduled game was postponed by rain.

New York starter Jerry Koosman dserved a better fate in the suspended game. The veteran southpaw struct out 13 batters in eight innings, yet suffered his 19th loss against only eight wins. A year ago Koosman won 21 games.

His only offensive support Friday night came in the seventh inning when the Mets pulled into a 2-2 tie on singles by Bruce Boisclair, John Stearns and pinch hitter Ed Kranepool.

Chicago starter Ray Burris, now 13-15, had better support as the Cubs notched two 8th inning runs and one 9th inning tally.

STEVE SWISHER'S two-run single keyed the eight-inning rally. The uprising started when Larry Biittner walked, then took second on Koosman's wild pitch.

After Bobby Murcer struck out, pinch-hitter Gene Clines hit a grounder to first baseman Ed Kranepool and was safe when he beat Kranepool to the bag. Clines then advanced to second on an infield out, setting the stage for Swisher's hit that brought home Biittner and Clines.

Murcer singled across the Cubs' final run one inning later.

Barrington's runners will test Mustang field

Barrington's cross country team has been to the Rolling Meadows Mustang Invitational before but never with such an excellent chance to win.

The Broncos, new to the Mid-Suburban League this year, have shown strength in a sport that was supposed to be one of the school's weaknesses. Barrington may not be favored in the 5th annual Mustang meet, (that distinction may go to St. Viator) but the Broncs will be in the running. The meet begins with a girls race at 10 a.m. at the Rolling Meadows Sports Complex.

Leading the Barrington pack are seniors Dave Trestik and Greg Ciszek, a pair of seasoned runners who should give St. Viator's Dave Efken a battle for individual honors. The Bronco top seven is rounded out by Paul Doron, Don Froehlke, Scott Hopkinson, Paul Parry and Paul Froehlke.

DEFENDING CHAMP Rolling Meadows will be hard-pressed to repeat, but the Mustang girls will be contenders in the distaff division. Other area entrants will be Arlington and Prospect, both school's sending girls teams only.

Area high schools will be competing in two other large invitational meets today. Hoffman Estates will get its first 1977 look at the state-ranked Fremd Vikings in the Lake Park Invite, which will also feature Buffalo Grove and Forest View.

Hoffman, last year's MSL South champ, has lost all but two runners to graduation, but the Hawks appear as strong as ever. Last year, Hoffman pulled a major upset at Lake Park by beating Fremd, state-ranked at the time.

Palatine, Hersey and Schaumburg will gather for the Homewood-Flossmoor Invitational, where Palatine is the defending champion. The Pirates were a junior-dominated team a year ago and, led by seniors Tom Johnson and Chuck Elliott, they are back to try and reclaim their H-F title.

Hersey's strength will show itself on the lower level. The Huskies have a sled full of impressive freshmen.

Harper's cross country team will open its season today at 11:30 in the Danville Invite.

Women's soccer title game Sunday

The Hoffman Estates Olympics and Chicago Kickers will square off Sunday at 1 p.m. at Maple Park in Palatine for the Illinois Women's Soccer League championship.

The Olympics won last year in the battle between the city and suburban champions.

Hoffman Estates will take a record of 9-0-2 into the action.

Jo Mockpee serves as team manager and Don Hanrahan is the coach.

Making up the squad over the 1977 season have been Lisa and Linda Jaworski, Mary Schnecki, Jackie and Nancy Heuer, Letica Rodriquez, Kathy Kuehl, Meri Stewart, Lisa Gappa, Karina Istvan, Olga Davila, Marie Macaleese, Kim Korzeniewski, Karen Sue and Diane Mockpee, Diane Wolfe, and Diana Stewart.

Courageous cruises to commanding lead

NEWPORT, R.I. — Ted Turner and his dry-eyed Courageous crew smoothly sailed to an early two-minute lead on the first windward leg Friday and then held off Australia's late challenge to post a minute and three second victory for a commanding 2-0 lead in the America's Cup yachting series.

Skipper Noel Robins of Austrialia proved his $1.5 million, 12-meter aluminum boat had tremendous class as he cut that Courageous advantage almost in half with some brilliant seasmanship.

The flamboyant Turner, holding a 1:06 lead turning into the final 4.5-mile windward leg, won the first major tacking duel of the series. He displayed a bit more experience in the last ditch maneuvers as he held Courageous in a commanding position, while Robins waited up to 20 seconds after Turner's covering move before starting his own track.

U.S. golfers take easy Ryder win

LYTHAM ST. ANNES, England — The sharpshooting U.S. Ryder Cup golfers gunned down Britain and Ireland 4-1 in Friday's four-ball matches to need only three victories from Saturday's 10 singles to capture the trophy for the 18th time in 22 meetings.

The U.S. ended the second day leading 7½ games to 2½ after unleashing a birdie blitz over the 6,822-yard, par-71 Royal Lytham St. Annes course.

Tom Watson and Hubie Green set the pace in the opening match, finishing 6-under-par for 14 holes to dispatch Brian Barnes and Tommy Horton 5 and 4.

Ed Sneed and Lanny Wadkins went even better, finishing 8-under for 15 holes to down Neil Coles and Peter Dawson 5 and 3 while Dave Hill and Dave Stockton beat Tony Jacklin and Eamonn Darcy by the same margin with a 5-under-par total.

California-based Peter Oosterhuis and Nick Faldo, the 20-year-old British newcomer, claimed the coveted scalps of an out-of-form Jack Nicklaus and Ray Floyd 2 and 1, finishing 6-under for 17 holes.

Finley 'stable' after heart surgery

Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley, who underwent a successful coronary bypass operation at Northwestern Memorial Hospital, was listed in stable condition Friday.

The seven-member surgical team headed by Dr. John Sanders spent four hours removing and replacing blocked blood vessels to Finley's heart Thursday night.

Finley was admitted to the hospital Sunday, complaining of chest pains. Doctors said tests made Thursday to find a blockage in the coronaries indicated the need for surgery.

The 59-year-old owner of the A's had serious blockage in at least one major coronary to the heart, a team spokesman said.

Bulls sign draftees Chessman, Smith

The Bulls have signed contracts with their sixth and seventh round draft picks, forward-center Jay Chessman from Brigham Young and forward Mike Smith from Evansville.

Also attending the opening of rookie training camp Thursday night were two free agents, forward Matt Hicks from Northern Illinois and guard David Green from Chicago's Wright College, who were both recently signed by the Bulls.

Chessman, the No. 6 draft pick, is 6-foot-8. Smith, the seventh round pick, is 6-foot-6.

MacPhail to comment on O's forfeit

BALTIMORE — American League President Lee MacPhail met Friday with Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver to discuss the Orioles' forfeiture Thursday night to the Toronto Blue Jays.

MacPhail said he would deliver an opinion before Saturday's game between the Orioles and the Boston Red Sox.

"I'm going to sleep on it," MacPhail said. "I want to talk to the umpires who worked that game one more time. So far, I have only gotten the viewpoint of the Baltimore club. I will render a decision before Saturday's game."

Weaver pulled his team off the field Thursday after complaining about a tarpaulin that was covering Toronto's bull pen. When the Orioles failed to return to the field, the Orioles were declared the losers by forfeit. Toronto was winning 4-0 when the Orioles left the field.

Courageous cruises to commanding lead

NEWPORT, R.I. — Ted Turner and his dry-eyed Courageous crew smoothly sailed to an early two-minute lead on the first windward leg Friday and then held off Australia's late challenge to post a minute and three second victory for a commanding 2-0 lead in the America's Cup yachting series.

Skipper Noel Robins of Austrialia proved his $1.5 million, 12-meter aluminum boat had tremendous class as he cut that Courageous advantage almost in half with some brilliant seasmanship.

The flamboyant Turner, holding a 1:06 lead turning into the final 4.5-mile windward leg, won the first major tacking duel of the series. He displayed a bit more experience in the last ditch maneuvers as he held Courageous in a commanding position, while Robins waited up to 20 seconds after Turner's covering move before starting his own track.

U.S. golfers take easy Ryder win

LYTHAM ST. ANNES, England — The sharpshooting U.S. Ryder Cup golfers gunned down Britain and Ireland 4-1 in Friday's four-ball matches to need only three victories from Saturday's 10 singles to capture the trophy for the 18th time in 22 meetings.

The U.S. ended the second day leading 7½ games to 2½ after unleashing a birdie blitz over the 6,822-yard, par-71 Royal Lytham St. Annes course.

Tom Watson and Hubie Green set the pace in the opening match, finishing 6-under-par for 14 holes to dispatch Brian Barnes and Tommy Horton 5 and 4.

Ed Sneed and Lanny Wadkins went even better, finishing 8-under for 15 holes to down Neil Coles and Peter Dawson 5 and 3 while Dave Hill and Dave Stockton beat Tony Jacklin and Eamonn Darcy by the same margin with a 5-under-par total.

California-based Peter Oosterhuis and Nick Faldo, the 20-year-old British newcomer, claimed the coveted scalps of an out-of-form Jack Nicklaus and Ray Floyd 2 and 1, finishing 6-under for 17 holes.

Finley 'stable' after heart surgery

Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley, who underwent a successful coronary bypass operation at Northwestern Memorial Hospital, was listed in stable condition Friday.

The seven-member surgical team headed by Dr. John Sanders spent four hours removing and replacing blocked blood vessels to Finley's heart Thursday night.

Finley was admitted to the hospital Sunday, complaining of chest pains. Doctors said tests made Thursday to find a blockage in the coronaries indicated the need for surgery.

The 59-year-old owner of the A's had serious blockage in at least one major coronary to the heart, a team spokesman said.

Bulls sign draftees Chessman, Smith

The Bulls have signed contracts with their sixth and seventh round draft picks, forward-center Jay Chessman from Brigham Young and forward Mike Smith from Evansville.

Also attending the opening of rookie training camp Thursday night were two free agents, forward Matt Hicks from Northern Illinois and guard David Green from Chicago's Wright College, who were both recently signed by the Bulls.

Chessman, the No. 6 draft pick, is 6-foot-8. Smith, the seventh round pick, is 6-foot-6.

MacPhail to comment on O's forfeit

BALTIMORE — American League President Lee MacPhail met Friday with Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver to discuss the Orioles' forfeiture Thursday night to the Toronto Blue Jays.

MacPhail said he would deliver an opinion before Saturday's game between the Orioles and the Boston Red Sox.

"I'm going to sleep on it," MacPhail said. "I want to talk to the umpires who worked that game one more time. So far, I have only gotten the viewpoint of the Baltimore club. I will render a decision before Saturday's game."

Weaver pulled his team off the field Thursday after complaining about a tarpaulin that was covering Toronto's bull pen. When the Orioles failed to return to the field, the Orioles were declared the losers by forfeit. Toronto was winning 4-0 when the Orioles left the field.

Defensive end Donnie Triplett scored the fourth TD on a 27-year pass interception. Then QB Mark Loeffler tossed two TD passes to ends Tom Zeken and Dave Storter, and finally Loeffler scored one himself on a 19-yard run around end. The Bills held the Colts to -11 yards rushing. The Lightweights are at home Sunday against the Zion Stingers at Buffalo Grove High School. Game time is 12:30 p.m.

Lights out, but Wheeling shines in 6-3 victory

by KEITH REINHARD

It was the night that the lights went out in Wheeling.

Not that the Wildcats were shining any less brightly. Sparked by their own emergency generator, Wheeling's football team shrugged off the electrical problems to rally for a 6-3 victory over Schaumburg in opening night Mid-Suburban League action on the Wildcat field Friday.

The triumph for coach Gerry Clinnin's fiesty band was the second in as many games this season and snapped a 14-game conference losing streak. Quarterback Steve Majkowski provided the necessary points by plunging over from the one-yard line in the fourth quarter after the Sixons had held the upper hand most of the game.

Well, actually it was the floodlights — or lack thereof — that dominated a goodly portion of the contest. "It was bad for both sides," Clinnin said. "Neither of us could get any momentum going in the first half."

THE POWER FAILURE only affected the east row of lights but it was enough to delay the game four times at more than 15 minutes a crack. The lights initially went out before the game even started, then once again midway through the first quarter and again just after the first period had been concluded.

With 2:13 left before halftime semi-darkness prevailed again and the officials wisely called for a mid-game break.

Meanwhile, the only gridders feasting on the situation were punters George Tuzil from Schaumburg and Wildcat Tim Miller.

the Saxons did put one decent drive together before the break however, keyed by Scott Wright's 10-yard pass to Jeff Ways and a 22-yard scamper around left end by Wright on a keeper.

When Schaumburg was slowed down inside the 10, Sal Viviano came in and kicked a 26-yard field goal. That score held up firmly until the fourth quarter was halfway over.

"Schaumburg's defense played excellently," Clinnin said. "We adjusted, readjusted and adjusted again but couldn't seem to make any headway. They really bottled up (Jeff) Starke."

STARKE, WHO HAD rambled for more than 130 yards and three touchdowns last week, was limited to just 36 yards by the Saxons. Coach Bob Ferguson's visiting defense also discouraged Wheeling's use of the airways by intercepting two first half passes.

When the fourth quarter started, Wheeling had noted only one first down. At that time Starke wound up running interference and Bob Steinberg became the sparkplug in the 'Cat advance.

The 5-8, 160-pound tailback carried five straight times to set up the TD and was again called on to keep his club moving while Wheeling ran out the clock.

There was jubilation on the field as Wildcat fans began to celebrate the best season at their school since 1971 . . . only two games into the season.

And as his players hoisted Clinnin on their shoulders to carry him off the field, typically, the east side lights went out again on the Wildcat field.

Crystal Lake nips Lancers in last quarter

CRYSTAL LAKE — Crystal Lake High School quarterback Tom Pence hit Mike Schaffer with a 12-yard scoring strike with just 24 seconds remaining in the game Friday night to lift the Tigers past Lake Park, 13-7.

Lake Park had carried a 7-0 edge into the final quarter of play on a 10-yard pass play from John Robinson to Chris Sanford at the end of the third period. Steve Aevermann booted the conversion.

But Crystal Lake, behind the running of Steve Ratcliff who rushed 14 times for 58 yards and Steve Gulgren who carried nine times for 59 yards, punched over the winner in the frantic final minute for its second triumph of the season.

Lake Park was led offensively by James Ellman who lugged the ball 15 times for 80 yards but Crystal Lake Defensive whiz Mike Olsen helped contain the Lancer attack with eight tackles and seven assists.

Bears, Lions to clash in dogfight

by BOB GALLAS

The Bears, promising what you've seen won't be what you get, open the 1977 National Football League season Sunday hopeful that this will be the year they erase 13 seasons of disappointment. And if history is any indication, their first test of the season will resemble a back alley dogfight.

After struggling to a frustrating 3-4 exhibition season, the Bears, who last won a championship in 1963, promised they'd have a few surprises when the regular season opened. Coach Jack Pardee indicated his club hadn't shown all of its new offensive weaponry yet. And he'll need all the help he can get, for every time the Bears and Lions get together, it's a classic struggle.

The Bears are favored to win tomorrow's opener, which is a Soldier Field sellout. But the basis for that probably is due to the fact that the game will be played in Soldier Field. For the last three years, the Bears have beat the Lions at home, then lost the rematch on the road.

BOTH CLUBS have struggled with their offense in the preseason, which saw the Lions finish with a 3-3 record. Offense will be a key factor in Sunday's game.

The Bears will send quarterback Bob Avellini out to lead their offense. Avellini will have to find the right combination of passing to running that will free running back Walter Payton, who has averaged only 1.9 yards per carry in four games against Detroit.

Another indicator will be what wide receiver James Scott can do against a pair of young cornerbacks for Detroit, Walt Williams and James Hunter. Hunter got behind Detroit's blitzing and stunting defenses last year and hopes to do even better against the inexperienced pair. Williams is a rookie while Hunter, listed as a 'questionable" starter due to a hip injury, is a second year pro who switched from the safety position he played last year.

The Lions also will be testing the Bears' defense as veteran quarterback Greg Landry will work with a variety of talented receivers and running backs but behind an offensive line that has been shuffled extensively in the past couple of weeks.

LANDRY MAY TEST second-year free safety Gary Fencik, who is making his first start for Chicago in place of Doug Plant, who was injured in the final preseason game.

Landry's favorite target will be J.D. Hill, who hasn't played since suffering a knee injury in last year's opener in Soldier Field.

The Lions are missing fullback Lawrence Gaines, but ex-Oakland Raider Marv Hubbard has filled in well. Dexter Bussey and Horace King will start.

Sunday's opener has been awaited by eager Bears fans since the close of last season as optimism abounds. Many picked the Bears to unseat division powerhouse Minnesota for first place. Pardee isn't so confident.

"I don't feel it's warranted to make us favorites. I don't see any Minnesota writers picking us to win it. The (Vikings) haven't fallen to pieces. They have an experienced team."

BEARS VICE-PRESIDENT and General Manager Jim Finks agrees. "It won't be a disaster if we don't make the playoffs," said Finks. "Our goal is to be a better football team at the end of the season than we were at the beginning and to be a better football team than we were last year.

"We don't have the luxury we had last year of some very fine football teams, like Los Angeles, Washington and Minnesota, coming in and saying 'we're only playing Chicago, we can take the week off,'" Finks said. "This year, they'll be ready for us."

BEAR FACTS: Pardee is expected to decide today whether rookie defensive back Len Walterscheid or newly acquired wide receiver John Gilliam will take Plank's spot on the active roster this weekend . . . Plank is out for at least two games with a knee injury . . . The Lions' place-kicking was terrible early in the preseason but was settled early this week when they decided to keep former 49ers kicker Steve Mike-Mayer . . . How much Wally Chambers plays depends on his up again, down again knee, but he'll probably work from the right defensive tackle spot, where he prefers to play, rather than from right defensive end.

Power boat race offers thrills, chills

by RICK BAMMAN

What kind of race starts with cannon shots, flags, and a very large clock? Powerboat racing, of course. Just like the Second Annual Powerboat Regatta which took place last week at Lake Zurich.

Proceeds from this race will be directed toward the dredging of the lake, a time-consuming and costly project, sponsored by the Lake Zurich Lions.

Nearly 100 drivers from around the nation took part in one of the fastest-paced and exciting events to be held in the area. It drew well over 2,000 speciators who came to see and hear these one-man powerboats.

EVEN BEFORE the races officially started, excitement was building during the trial runs. Each driver was given several practice runs so he could time himself to hit the throttle at exactly the right moment. Driver and machine meld into a single, coordinated unit as they go through their rehearsal in an attempt to beat the clock.

According to Lenny Szulc, of McHenry, "The boats must hit their top speed as they cross the start line. This enables the leader to hit clean water and his prop to get more bite." Zulc races and announces such events throughout the country.

Practice runs completed, drivers and crews rechecked their equipment while waiting for the official start. That's where the cannon comes in.

Three minutes before the official start, a cannon is heard across the calming waters.

This first shot is the signal for the racers to enter the course. A red flag is displayed while the racers take their positions. The giant clock is started and ticks off the seconds as the start time draws closer.

WHEN ALL BOATS are set, a second shot signals the start of the race and a white flag replaces the red. The race is on!

Once underway the speeding boats, often reaching speeds of 70 mph, skim over the water leaving roostertail wakes for their followers. The roar of outboards fills the air.

Powerboat racing is pure speed and excitement.

Sportsmen to turn out for NHF Day

STARTING EARLY. National Hunting and Fishing Day Sept. 24 gives youngsters an opportunity to discover the outdoor recreational activities.

Over 20 million sportsmen and women will focus their attention on the outdoors next Saturday in recognition of National Hunting and Fishing Day.

Activities will be devoted to promoting and teaching the values of conservation, safety and enjoyment of outdoor recreation.

Several local clubs have again planned special programs and displays in conjunction with the observance. Richmond Hunting Club in Richmond will conduct a Hunter Safety Training Course designed to teach youngsters the rules of shooting and safety as well as serve as a refresher for adults.

Jim Cook

Outdoor editor

SHOPPING MALLS at Randhurst and Rolling Meadows are annually the setting for collections by taxidermists decoy carvers, duck callers and even charter boat fishing captains who will gladly share their experiences.

Directed at the novice, most exhibits and demonstrations introduce and instruct the beginner in such activities as hunting, fishing, camping, snowmobiling, hiking, ecology and conservation.

The nation's hunters and fishermen have contributed more than $5 billion for licenses and fees during the past 50 years and continue to swell that figure by $250 million annually.

These financial contributions have paved the way for the purchase, preservation and improvement of millions of acres of wildlife habitat and have funded research that has helped to increase the populations of many wildlife species to near-record levels.

"The efforts of these dedicated sportsmen have been crucial in promoting the American system of conservation and wildlife management — a system now considered among the best in the world."

Hunting requests accepted Monday

Permit applications to hunt pheasant, ducks and geese on state-managed public shooting areas will be accepted beginning Monday. Applications received before Monday will be returned.

Permits are issued on a first come, first served basis, and each hunter will be allowed one permit to hunt pheasant, one permit for goose hunting and one permit for hunting ducks. Persons sending duplicate permit applications forfeit their right to a permit. No telephone permit requests are allowed and permits are not transferable.

Hunting permits for opening days, weekends and holidays traditionally are in greatest demand, and sportsmen should apply for other hunting dates when possible. Applicants also may list a second, alternate choice of hunting date when applying.

PHEASANT HUNTING will take place at seven sites. Number of hunters accommodated daily at each site will range from 90 to 230. Sites and numbers of hunters allowed each day are: Carlye Lake — 90, Des Plaines — 230, Green River — 120, Iroquois County — 125, Rend Lake — 160 and Richland County — 140.

The 30-day season begins Nov. 19 and continues through Dec. 18 at all but the Green River Conservation Area, where hunting begins on Nov. 21 and concludes Dec. 20.

Hunters using the pheasant areas during the firearm deer season are required to wear a hat and upper outer garment of blaze orange color. These rules are in effect on Nov. 19 and 20, and Dec. 9, 10 and 11.

Pheasant permit holders must check into the areas between 7 and 8 a.m. Any hunter openings during the season will be filled at the site on a first come, first served basis. A $5 daily usage fee is charged at the hunting sites.

GOOSE HUNTING at Horseshoe Lake and the Union County Wildlife Area begins Nov. 22 and closes on Jan. 20, or when 29,000 geese have been harvested. Each site can accommodate up to 100 hunters per day.

Both areas are closed on Mondays and Dec. 24 and 25. Sportsmen using 12 gauge shotguns are required to use non-toxic (steel) shot, in accordance with new federal regulations.

Hunters must check into the areas between 4 and 5 a.m., and drawings for blind sites begin at 5 a.m. Any blinds available after the drawings will be filled on a first come, first served basis. A $5 daily usage fee is charged at the sites.

Permits for hunting ducks at the Rice Lake Conservation Area will be issued on the basis of blind availability. Hunters may apply in groups of up to three for one of the 25 available blinds. Sportsmen who wish to hunt as partners must apply together. Hunters applying alone will be required to hunt alone. Hunting begins Oct. 22 and continues through Dec. 5. Rice Lake is closed when the lake is frozen.

HUNTERS MUST check into the area between 4 and 5 a.m. Drawings for blinds begin at 5 a.m. On days blinds are available after the initial drawing, they will be filled on a first come, first serve basis. There is a $3 daily usage fee and hunters are required to rent a boat at the site at a $2 per day charge. Hunters using 12 gauge shotguns will be required to use non-toxic (steel) shot.

Nonhunters will not be allowed in the field or in hunting blinds during shooting hours at any of the state-managed sites. The use of hunting dogs is encouraged at all areas.

A valid Illinois hunting license is required at the pheasant areas. A valid hunting license, plus state and federal migratory waterfowl hunting stamps, is required at the duck and goose areas, unless the hunter is exempt by law from these requirements by age or disability. Exempt persons are required to show proof of age or disability.

Applicants should give their name and address, area they wish to hunt, first and second choice of hunting dates. Send to Dept. of Conservation, Permit Office, 605 Stratton Building, Springfield, IL 62706.

Local angler wins Mepps award

Juergen Liepelt, Des Plaines, used Mepps spinners to catch fish which met certain size requirements and was awarded a Mepps Master Angler Award.

Liepelt caught king salmon, cutthroat trout, perch and smallmouth bass to earn his trophy awards.

The King weighed more than 15 pounds, the trout more than 2 pounds, the perch more than one pound and the smallmouth more than 2 pounds.

Another successful area angler was William Radar of Rolling Meadow who cashed in the second week of the Chain O' Lakes Fishing Derby by boating a 35-inch northern pike and registering it at the Channel Lake Boat House.

One week later, Kenneth Almbert of Arlington Heights nailed down the top spot in the northern pike division while Frank Wavra of Elk Grove netted the second largest bluegill of the week for his prize.

Farther south, Peter Johnson of Des Plaines, set the barbs into a 46-pound Wahoo that measured 62 inches while deep sea fishing out of Bahia Mar Yacht Basin in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

Power boat race offers thrills, chills

by RICK BAMMAN

What kind of race starts with cannon shots, flags, and a very large clock? Powerboat racing, of course. Just like the Second Annual Powerboat Regatta which took place last week at Lake Zurich.

Proceeds from this race will be directed toward the dredging of the lake, a time-consuming and costly project, sponsored by the Lake Zurich Lions.

Nearly 100 drivers from around the nation took part in one of the fastest-paced and exciting events to be held in the area. It drew well over 2,000 speciators who came to see and hear these one-man powerboats.

EVEN BEFORE the races officially started, excitement was building during the trial runs. Each driver was given several practice runs so he could time himself to hit the throttle at exactly the right moment. Driver and machine meld into a single, coordinated unit as they go through their rehearsal in an attempt to beat the clock.

According to Lenny Szulc, of McHenry, "The boats must hit their top speed as they cross the start line. This enables the leader to hit clean water and his prop to get more bite." Zulc races and announces such events throughout the country.

Practice runs completed, drivers and crews rechecked their equipment while waiting for the official start. That's where the cannon comes in.

Three minutes before the official start, a cannon is heard across the calming waters.

This first shot is the signal for the racers to enter the course. A red flag is displayed while the racers take their positions. The giant clock is started and ticks off the seconds as the start time draws closer.

WHEN ALL BOATS are set, a second shot signals the start of the race and a white flag replaces the red. The race is on!

Once underway the speeding boats, often reaching speeds of 70 mph, skim over the water leaving roostertail wakes for their followers. The roar of outboards fills the air.

Powerboat racing is pure speed and excitement.

Sportsmen to turn out for NHF Day

STARTING EARLY. National Hunting and Fishing Day Sept. 24 gives youngsters an opportunity to discover the outdoor recreational activities.

Over 20 million sportsmen and women will focus their attention on the outdoors next Saturday in recognition of National Hunting and Fishing Day.

Activities will be devoted to promoting and teaching the values of conservation, safety and enjoyment of outdoor recreation.

Several local clubs have again planned special programs and displays in conjunction with the observance. Richmond Hunting Club in Richmond will conduct a Hunter Safety Training Course designed to teach youngsters the rules of shooting and safety as well as serve as a refresher for adults.

SHOPPING MALLS at Randhurst and Rolling Meadows are annually the setting for collections by taxidermists decoy carvers, duck callers and even charter boat fishing captains who will gladly share their experiences.

Directed at the novice, most exhibits and demonstrations introduce and instruct the beginner in such activities as hunting, fishing, camping, snowmobiling, hiking, ecology and conservation.

Ask Andy

Stonehenge may have been study of sun

Andy sends the two-volume World Book Dictionary to Judy Kocherhans, 16, of Kearns, Utah, for her question of the week:

CAN YOU TELL ME ABOUT STONEHENGE?

An ancient monument, perhaps an astronomical observatory from a long-past age, was discovered in England when archaeologists from Edinburgh University came upon two underground holes which probably were ritual pits. Tests made on some charcoal found in the pits in the early 1950s indicated the area was in use in 1848 B.C., give or take 275 years.

The ancient monument called Stonehenge and established as being more than 3,500 years old was found on the Salisbury Plain in Wilshire, England. It proved to be a group of huge, rough-cut stones. The stones, found only in western Wales 300 miles away, were probably carried to the site by ancient residents.

For hundreds of years, archaeologists figure, the stones gradually fell and some were carried away by people to be used for making dams or bridges. But from the stones remaining, it was possible to guess how the original monument probably appeared.

Scholars say Stonehenge probably had an earth wall about 320 feet in diameter surrounding a monument that was made up of 30 blocks of gray sandstone, each standing about 13 and a half feet above the ground and each averaging about 28 tons. The tall blocks stood in a circle 97 feet in diameter and a continuous circle of smaller blocks stood on top of them. Inside this circle stood another circle of 60 blue stones with two horseshoe-shaped sets of stones inside it facing toward the northeast.

In the center of the Stonehenge stones was a flat sandstone block 16 feet long which probably served as an altar and may have stood upright. Eighty yards east stands a stone marker which throws a shadow onto the altar at dawn on the day of the summer solstice — about June 21 — probably indicating that Stonehenge was somehow connected with study or worship of the sun.

Gerald Hawkins of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory calculated the directions of the lines joining the various stones at Stonehenge in 1963. He found that the monument may have served as an astronomical calendar, able to predict the seasons and even eclipses of the sun and moon. With an electronic computer, he found an amazing correlation between the directions of these lines and the directions of the rising and setting of the moon and sun. The chances of these correlations being coincidental is about one in 100 million.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science Year Annual to Susan Thomas, 10, of Greencastle, Ind., for her question:

WHAT IS ATHLETE'S FOOT?

Athlete's foot is a contagious infection that is a type of ringworm usually found between the toes. It's not actually caused by a worm but is very similar to a fungus. If you have athlete's foot, you're bothered by itching, cracked skin and by a discoloration with ring-shaped patches covered with scales.

You may pick up athlete's foot around swimming pools or in gymnasiums. To guard against the disease you should rinse your feet in a 1 per cent solution of sodium hypochlorite when entering and leaving a pool or gym. Also keep your feet clean and dry.

Your doctor or school coach can usually diagnose and prescribe treatment for athlete's foot.

Send your question on a post card to Ask Andy in care of The Daily Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006, making sure to include your name, age and address. Entries are open to girls and boys 7 to 17.

Two-way finesse works?

Today's hand looks simple enough. South wins the club lead in dummy and decides to take a first round trump finesse in order to keep control of the trump suit. West takes his queen and South romps home with the rest of the tricks.

Then why are we bothering with this hand? Because when it was actually played the spade finesse worked since West didn't put up his queen. South promptly led a trump back to dummy's king. East showed out and South had a problem. He did his best to solve it, but his best — which consisted of coming to his hand with the jack of diamonds, ruffing a club in dummy and leading out good diamonds — left him one trick short when West ruffed the third diamond.

South could have made all the tricks after that first spade finesse succeeded by a rather unusual play.

He should have finessed spades a second time, and the other way. In other words, at trick three he should have led a low spade from his hand and let it ride. He would then have succeeded in successfully finessing both ways against the queen of trumps.

Ask Andy

Stonehenge may have been study of sun

Andy sends the two-volume World Book Dictionary to Judy Kocherhans, 16, of Kearns, Utah, for her question of the week:

CAN YOU TELL ME ABOUT STONEHENGE?

An ancient monument, perhaps an astronomical observatory from a long-past age, was discovered in England when archaeologists from Edinburgh University came upon two underground holes which probably were ritual pits. Tests made on some charcoal found in the pits in the early 1950s indicated the area was in use in 1848 B.C., give or take 275 years.

The ancient monument called Stonehenge and established as being more than 3,500 years old was found on the Salisbury Plain in Wilshire, England. It proved to be a group of huge, rough-cut stones. The stones, found only in western Wales 300 miles away, were probably carried to the site by ancient residents.

For hundreds of years, archaeologists figure, the stones gradually fell and some were carried away by people to be used for making dams or bridges. But from the stones remaining, it was possible to guess how the original monument probably appeared.

Scholars say Stonehenge probably had an earth wall about 320 feet in diameter surrounding a monument that was made up of 30 blocks of gray sandstone, each standing about 13 and a half feet above the ground and each averaging about 28 tons. The tall blocks stood in a circle 97 feet in diameter and a continuous circle of smaller blocks stood on top of them. Inside this circle stood another circle of 60 blue stones with two horseshoe-shaped sets of stones inside it facing toward the northeast.

In the center of the Stonehenge stones was a flat sandstone block 16 feet long which probably served as an altar and may have stood upright. Eighty yards east stands a stone marker which throws a shadow onto the altar at dawn on the day of the summer solstice — about June 21 — probably indicating that Stonehenge was somehow connected with study or worship of the sun.

Gerald Hawkins of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory calculated the directions of the lines joining the various stones at Stonehenge in 1963. He found that the monument may have served as an astronomical calendar, able to predict the seasons and even eclipses of the sun and moon. With an electronic computer, he found an amazing correlation between the directions of these lines and the directions of the rising and setting of the moon and sun. The chances of these correlations being coincidental is about one in 100 million.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science Year Annual to Susan Thomas, 10, of Greencastle, Ind., for her question:

WHAT IS ATHLETE'S FOOT?

Athlete's foot is a contagious infection that is a type of ringworm usually found between the toes. It's not actually caused by a worm but is very similar to a fungus. If you have athlete's foot, you're bothered by itching, cracked skin and by a discoloration with ring-shaped patches covered with scales.

You may pick up athlete's foot around swimming pools or in gymnasiums. To guard against the disease you should rinse your feet in a 1 per cent solution of sodium hypochlorite when entering and leaving a pool or gym. Also keep your feet clean and dry.

Your doctor or school coach can usually diagnose and prescribe treatment for athlete's foot.

Send your question on a post card to Ask Andy in care of The Daily Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006, making sure to include your name, age and address. Entries are open to girls and boys 7 to 17.

Gambling to hurt small businessman

Not all win with Atlantic casinos

ATLANTIC CITY — "It's playing a real-life game of Monopoly."

With these words, William Eames, managing director of the Greater Atlantic City Chamber of Commerce, captures the essence of the agitated wheeling and dealing in the city as it prepares for the debut as early as next March of gambling casinos.

Already, some of the big winners — and early losers — from the construction of between one and two dozen casinos are emerging.

Real estate agents, landowners, hotel conglomerates, lawyers, and the airlines have benefited or expect to benefit from Atlantic City's legalized gambling. The early losers are this resort city's small businessmen, who have seen their rents skyrocket in recent months.

An unexpected beneficiary of last November's referendum permitting casino gambling here is the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), which owns most of the city's municipal airport at Pomona, New Jersey. (Atlantic City owns only 79 acres of the 5,000-acre airport, in the immediate vicinity of the terminal.)

AN FAA spokesman at the airport, the site of the agency's National Aviation Facilities Experimental Center, said it would lease space to scheduled air carriers provided 'their (flight) schedules don't interfere with ours." Passenger airlines that use the airfield will "have to pay the federal government a landing fee," the spokesman added.

Allegheny Airlines already holds a certificate from the Civil Aeronautics Board to land at the field. And six other airlines now have petitioned the board to run scheduled service to the FAA-operated airport.

The city's second airport, Bader Field Municipal, within city limits, is served by Allegheny commuter service, but cannot accommodate big jets.

Topping the list of those "cleaning up" in the private sector, even before the first casino gambling chip hits a green felt table, are local real estate agents.

"Real estate agents have made a killing," says Eames. "There have been so many land sales recently the bookkeepers can't keep up with them."

And the profits landowners have reaped and expect to reap might astonish the most adept Monopoly players.

FOR INSTANCE, the Ambassador Hotel at 2831 Boardwalk was purchased by a lawyer, a car dealer, and other Atlantic City residents for some $900,000 in July, 1976. The owners of the hotel now are asking $11 million for the property, according to Elias Naame, one of the hotel's owners and an attorney for the Guarantee Bank in Atlantic City.

Playboy Enterprises, Inc., of Chicago appears to be another early winner. Included in the sale of a parcel of land for a new Playboy hotel are access rights "by direct passageway to Atlantic City's convention hall and rights to parking beneath the hall," according to the Chamber of Commerce. The special concessions were inducements to get the conglomerate to build a 664-room hotel and casino complex.

A prominent New York City real estate developer, Harry Helmsley, who is co-owner of the towering Empire State Building, could be yet another unexpected beneficiary from "Las Vegas East."

Helmsley is president of Helmsley & Spear, which owns the 390-room Holiday Inn in Atlantic City. Observers of the New York real estate market are surprised that the otherwise conservative property magnate would consider opening a casino when major New York commercial banks and insurance companies do not plan to put money into the proposed gambling houses.

So far, Helmsley says, the Holiday Inn "is a good property without a casino" and he has not made up his mind about adding a casino.

ALTHOUGH MOST of those interviewed felt that state officials will keep organized crime from even indirect ownership of casinos, at least one local citizen says there is no way to keep criminal elements from infiltrating Atlantic City businesses.

"Organized crime is going to take a strong hold on the small businessman and I don't think the state or the city can do a thing about it," radio personality Stu Sacks says.

Small businesses such as T-shirt shops, candy stores, and retaurants already feel the economic pinch of rent increases.

It also is possible that any unexpected delay in licensing and building the proposed casinos may hurt some real estate wheeler-dealers, who might not be able to sell their properties soon enough to make a profit.

Said Henry Glaser, owner of James's Salt Water Taffy, "I think a lot of people are going to lose money. They can't hold on that long."

Lagging pocket watch business alive and ticking

by JAK MINER

BOSTON — There he stood, tall, a little portly and with a lordly air. In his shiny blue serge suit and the kepi-like black hat with its red piping, the man, was indeed, the master of his fate. Around him scurried such lesser creatures as passengers frantic for the train to Cincinnati, baggagemen hauling two-wheeled carts, red caps, trainmen in blue overalls and porters.

The New York Central train stood quietly in the cavernous shed of the St. Louis Union Station, wisps of steam turning white in the cold night air.

Finally, everybody was aboard, baggage and postal car doors closed and locked, small footstools pulled up into the entryways of the long line of Pullmans, club cars, sleepers and chair cars. Yet the conductor, the captain of that 1941 night train to Cincinnati, held his ground as if his heavy, high-top black shoes had been nailed to the platform with railroad spikes.

THEN SLOWLY, deliberately, he reached into the lower right-hand pocket of the vest and pulled out the great, heavy, No. 16-size 21-movement gold pocket watch, flipped open the front cover and watched as the delicate black second hand swept upward across the heavy Arabic numbers. As it passed 9 he began swinging the lantern and then with "Aaaalll abooooaard," he snapped the cover closed as the second hand moved over the 12 and with a sweeping motion that belied his weight but attested to years of practice swung aboard the Pullman. Escaping steam and a screeching whistle signaled the first gentle tug as the train crept slowly out into the yards and toward the old Eads Bridge across the Mississippi and the cold frozen prairie of western Illinois.

That huge train shed is now home for pigeons and sparrows. Although a few Amtrak passenger trains pull in and out each day and only a few conductors remain, and even fewer of those conductor pocket watches.

BUT AS George Goodman, in the jewelry and watch reapir business for 61 years, observed in his Boston store reecntly, "New things become old and old things become new," meaning that the pocket watch, like old Victorian houses dripping with wooden gingerbread, like vested suits, Tiffany lamps and ragtime music, has become the rage.

Franz Brunner, executive vice-president of Arnex, one of the leading importers of Swiss pocket watches, said from his Manhattan office that pocket watches are about as trendy a thing as there is in the jewelry business today. Seven years ago, he said, Arnex did about $680,000 in wholesale pocket watch business. In 1975, the company's business was ticking at double time; doing about $13 million. "This year I estimate we'll hit $15 million," he says.

Most of the pocket watches imported today come from Switzerland, but the Japanese appear ready to wind up the stem of an export model and bring it into the United States.

"PRACTICALLY EVERYONE who comes through our door wants a pocket watch," Mr. Goodman says. "And almost everyone wants an old watch, an antifue. Hardest to get are the good American pocket watches. They're not being made anymore because the factories just stopped . . . after World War I; the old craftsmen are gone" Such timepieces as Hamilton, Elgin and Waltham are available, but they come in as trade-ins, from estates, he said. Americans don't make pocket watches anymore he sighed.

Today they range in price from $29.95 to as much as $8,000. The average price for a modern watch is about $45, says Mr. Brunner. A favorite watch before the 1930s was the split-minute repeater, which — with its chimes — would give musically the hour, minute and second. Such a watch back then, Mr. Goodman recalls probably would sell for $300. Today, he said, you probably would have to pay $2,000 or more.

Looking out through his shop window across narrow School Street at the gray eminence of the 1749 King's Chapel, George Goodman shrugs his shoulders, pulls his glasses down a little lower on the bridge of his nose and opines that the popularity of pocket watches may have something to do with the return of yet another golden oldie — the vest.

Local environmentalists join nuclear reactor foes

Polution and Environmental Problems,l Palatine's environmental watchdog group, has joined other area environmental agencies in forming the Illinois Safe Energy Alliance to oppose further financing of the proposed Clinch River Breeder Reactor planned for Oakridge, Tenn.

David Comey, chairman of ISEA, charged the proposed reactor is a waste of federal funds and already has tripled in cost since original estimates were presented to Congress in 1973.

The reactor is a project of Commonwealth Edison Co. and the Tennessee Valley Authority. The breeder reactor would produce plutonium, a radioactive element used in making nuclear weapons.

"IF THE U.S. House of Representatives votes to fund the breeder reactor, it will cost the American taxpayers billions of dollars in cost overruns, threaten their security and liberty and contaminate the environment with one of the most dangerous toxic substances ever discovered," Comey said.

Estimated cost of the project in 1973 was $700 million. Cost estimates today are $2.2 billion of which Commonwealth Edison has pledged more than $11 million, Comey said.

"Commonwealth Edison has pledged far more than any other utility toward construction of the plant and the longer the project goes on, the more Edison rate payers will have added to their electric bills," Comey said.

Pres. Carter has recommended halting further financing for the reactor project because it will undermine U.S. efforts to prevent nuclear proliferation, Comey said.

"I SEE NO reason why Chicago should finance a reactor that the President says is a threat to our security," Comey said.

The House is expected to vote Monday on a proposal to spend on additional $150 million in federal funds to proceed with the project despite Carter's opposition.

Other area groups joining in the ISEA include the Citizens for a Better Environment, the National Council of Jewish Women, Chicago Women for Peace, the Peace-Justice Center of Wheaton, Chicagoland Friends of the Earth and the DeKalb Area Alliance for Responsible Energy.

Maybe folks were a little skeptical about taking stock in America 200 years ago.

We were young. At war. With no experience.

And who knew if we'd ever pay back the money?

Well, 200 years have passed. And the U.S. government has always paid in full. To the penny.

Now that's not a bad record.

In fact, you might say we're now a pretty well-established outfit to do business with.

So join the Payroll Savings Plan and save with today's Bicentennial issue of Series E Savings Bonds. It's easy. It's automatic.

And it's safe. After 200 years, you know we're here to stay.

Now E Bonds pay 6% interest when held to maturity of 5 years (4% in the first year). Lost, stolen or destroyed Bonds can be replaced if records are provided. When needed, Bonds can be cashed at your bank. Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.

So far, Helmsley says, the Holiday Inn "is a good property without a casino" and he has not made up his mind about adding a casino.

ALTHOUGH MOST of those interviewed felt that state officials will keep organized crime from even indirect ownership of casinos, at least one local citizen says there is no way to keep criminal elements from infiltrating Atlantic City businesses.

"Organized crime is going to take a strong hold on the small businessman and I don't think the state or the city can do a thing about it," radio personality Stu Sacks says.

Small businesses such as T-shirt shops, candy stores, and retaurants already feel the economic pinch of rent increases.

It also is possible that any unexpected delay in licensing and building the proposed casinos may hurt some real estate wheeler-dealers, who might not be able to sell their properties soon enough to make a profit.

Said Henry Glaser, owner of James's Salt Water Taffy, "I think a lot of people are going to lose money. They can't hold on that long."

Lagging pocket watch business alive and ticking

by JAK MINER

BOSTON — There he stood, tall, a little portly and with a lordly air. In his shiny blue serge suit and the kepi-like black hat with its red piping, the man, was indeed, the master of his fate. Around him scurried such lesser creatures as passengers frantic for the train to Cincinnati, baggagemen hauling two-wheeled carts, red caps, trainmen in blue overalls and porters.

The New York Central train stood quietly in the cavernous shed of the St. Louis Union Station, wisps of steam turning white in the cold night air.

Finally, everybody was aboard, baggage and postal car doors closed and locked, small footstools pulled up into the entryways of the long line of Pullmans, club cars, sleepers and chair cars. Yet the conductor, the captain of that 1941 night train to Cincinnati, held his ground as if his heavy, high-top black shoes had been nailed to the platform with railroad spikes.

THEN SLOWLY, deliberately, he reached into the lower right-hand pocket of the vest and pulled out the great, heavy, No. 16-size 21-movement gold pocket watch, flipped open the front cover and watched as the delicate black second hand swept upward across the heavy Arabic numbers. As it passed 9 he began swinging the lantern and then with "Aaaalll abooooaard," he snapped the cover closed as the second hand moved over the 12 and with a sweeping motion that belied his weight but attested to years of practice swung aboard the Pullman. Escaping steam and a screeching whistle signaled the first gentle tug as the train crept slowly out into the yards and toward the old Eads Bridge across the Mississippi and the cold frozen prairie of western Illinois.

That huge train shed is now home for pigeons and sparrows. Although a few Amtrak passenger trains pull in and out each day and only a few conductors remain, and even fewer of those conductor pocket watches.

BUT AS George Goodman, in the jewelry and watch reapir business for 61 years, observed in his Boston store reecntly, "New things become old and old things become new," meaning that the pocket watch, like old Victorian houses dripping with wooden gingerbread, like vested suits, Tiffany lamps and ragtime music, has become the rage.

Franz Brunner, executive vice-president of Arnex, one of the leading importers of Swiss pocket watches, said from his Manhattan office that pocket watches are about as trendy a thing as there is in the jewelry business today. Seven years ago, he said, Arnex did about $680,000 in wholesale pocket watch business. In 1975, the company's business was ticking at double time, doing about $13 million. "This year I estimate we'll hit $15 million," he says.

Most of the pocket watches imported today come from Switzerland, but the Japanese appear ready to wind up the stem of an export model and bring it into the United States.

"PRACTICALLY EVERYONE who comes through our door wants a pocket watch," Mr. Goodman says. "And almost everyone wants an old watch, an antifue. Hardest to get are the good American pocket watches. They're not being made anymore because the factories just stopped . . . after World War I; the old craftsmen are gone" Such timepieces as Hamilton, Elgin and Waltham are available, but they come in as trade-ins, from estates, he said. Americans don't make pocket watches anymore he sighed.

Today they range in price from $29.95 to as much as $3,000. The average price for a modern watch is about $45, says Mr. Brunner. A favorite watch before the 1930s was the split-minute repeater, which — with its chimes — would give musically the hour, minute and second. Such a watch back then, Mr. Goodman recalls probably would sell for $300. Today, he said, you probably would have to pay $2,000 or more.

Looking out through his shop window across narrow School Street at the gray eminence of the 1749 King's Chapel, George Goodman shrugs his shoulders, pulls his glasses down a little lower on the bridge of his nose and opines that the popularity of pocket watches may have something to do with the return of yet another golden oldie — the vest.

Local environmentalists join nuclear reactor foes

Polution and Environmental Problems,l Palatine's environmental watchdog group, has joined other area environmental agencies in forming the Illinois Safe Energy Alliance to oppose further financing of the proposed Clinch River Breeder Reactor planned for Oakridge, Tenn.

David Comey, chairman of ISEA, charged the proposed reactor is a waste of federal funds and already has tripled in cost since original estimates were presented to Congress in 1973.

The reactor is a project of Commonwealth Edison Co. and the Tennessee Valley Authority. The breeder reactor would produce plutonium, a radioactive element used in making nuclear weapons.

"IF THE U.S. House of Representatives votes to fund the breeder reactor, it will cost the American taxpayers billions of dollars in cost overruns, threaten their security and liberty and contaminate the environment with one of the most dangerous toxic substances ever discovered," Comey said.

Estimated cost of the project in 1973 was $700 million. Cost estimates today are $2.2 billion of which Commonwealth Edison has pledged more than $11 million, Comey said.

"Commonwealth Edison has pledged far more than any other utility toward construction of the plant and the longer the project goes on, the more Edison rate payers will have added to their electric bills," Comey said.

Pres. Carter has recommended halting further financing for the reactor project because it will undermine U.S. efforts to prevent nuclear proliferation, Comey said.

"I SEE NO reason why Chicago should finance a reactor that the President says is a threat to our security," Comey said.

The House is expected to vote Monday on a proposal to spend on additional $150 million in federal funds to proceed with the project despite Carter's opposition.

Other area groups joining in the ISEA include the Citizens for a Better Environment, the National Council of Jewish Women, Chicago Women for Peace, the Peace-Justice Center of Wheaton, Chicagoland Friends of the Earth and the DeKalb Area Alliance for Responsible Energy.

Maybe folks were a little skeptical about taking stock in America 200 years ago.

We were young. At war. With no experience.

And who knew if we'd ever pay back the money?

Well, 200 years have passed. And the U.S. government has always paid in full. To the penny.

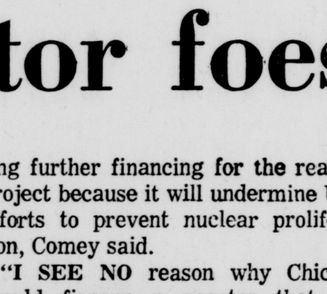
Now that's not a bad record.

In fact, you might say we're now a pretty well-established outfit to do business with.

So join the Payroll Savings Plan and save with today's Bicentennial issue of Series E Savings Bonds. It's easy. It's automatic.

And it's safe. After 200 years, you know we're here to stay.

Now E Bonds pay 6% interest when held to maturity of 5 years (4% the first year). Lost, stolen or destroyed Bonds can be replaced if records are provided. When needed, Bonds can be cashed at your bank. Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.



Take stock in America.

People travel to the East Coast to soak up the history of New England, to wander through homes and buildings and see the places history was made. It's part of the "Roots syndrome" but it's been going on long before the book was conceived.

You need not travel. History is here. There is history in the Glessner House, the Dawes Mansion, the Robie House and other magnificent homes that are among the few remaining historic structures in the Chicago area. The move is on to renovate and preserve these homes. Diane Mermigas reports on the progress being made on page 4.

The ArchiCenter is a real "find" for those who admire things like the Chicago skyline, the towering buildings and the old and new structures that make the city a paradise of discovery for students of architecture. Born during the Bicentennial celebration, ArchiCenter is dedicated to preserving the architectural monuments in the metropolitan area. Kurt Baer discusses ArchiCenter on page 9.

The wrecker's ball has spared few of the magnificent homes where Chicago's elite once resided. The scramble is on to save these opulent dwellings, return them to their turn-of-the-century splendor and open their doors to a history-hungry public.

by Diane Mermigas

The extreme and elaborate measures being taken to not only preserve but restore some of the Chicago area's last remaining historic homes signifies a renaissance in perpetuating "living" architectural history.

At every turn, communities and neighborhoods are joining forces to reclaim historic old residences that have rusted and worn at the mercy of the elements over the years and are now threatened with demolition to give way to architecturally starving new structures or concrete roads.

A surge of awareness has suddenly grabbed a coupling of generations by the hand and is now responsible for movements to save the old homes that are still in decent condition and that have some meaning.

Those who have shuddered at the thoughtless demise of these old structures in recent times claim that it may be too late to save what is left.

Surely, most of the splendid, dominant residences that graced the lakefront and outskirts of the city at the turn of the century are long gone. A glance backward into time at old photographs of some of Chicago's most prized homes in books like David Lowe's "Lost Chicago," causes many people to wonder what pressing matters were important enough to require the destruction of such buildings.

The "Old Virginia," red brick mansion of Archibald Clybourne, the Victorian residences of Park Row and Michigan Avenue, and the fairytale-like castle home of real estate tycoon and hotelman Potter Palmer were among those structures that met an early death.

Somehow, however,the feverish development of the city and outlying areas managed to bypass a few period homes that are fast being converted into historical museums and "living" historical residences.

"The systematic destruction over the past fifty years of America's oldest residences . . . has been one of the major factors in the architectural impoverishment of our cities," Lowe states in his book. "This vandalism also has created an almost insuperable barrier to a full understanding of our nation's past."

A major effort to re-create a typical 1880s city block is going on in the 1800 block of south Prairie Avenue.

The area, which is located between Michigan Avenue and the lake and is just two miles south of Downtown, was once the Fifth Avenue of the Midwest and the place that many of Chicago's most affluent residents called home.

Among the Prairie Avenue millionaires were George M. Pullman, the sleeping train car magnate; John B. Sherman, "the father of the stockyards"; and the merchant, Marshall Field. Other homes on Prairie Avenue between 18th and 20th streets belonged to such families as the Armours, Palmers, Searses, Kelloggs, Keiths, Kimballs and Colemans, representing the work of such great architects as H. H. Richardson, Solon S. Beman and Richard Morris Hunt.

The focal point for the Prairie Avenue restoration, being conducted by the City of Chicago and the Chicago School of Architecture Foundation, is the Glessner House, 1800 S. Prairie Ave.

Ironically, the home of John J. Glessner, a prominent business and cultural leader in the city who founded International Harvester, was one of the most criticized structures on the block when it was constructed in 1886. The innovative floor plan, lack of windows and domestic Romanesque facade that was the work of Architect Henry Hobson Richardson, represented a revolutionary departure from the accepted European styles and designs of other grand Chicago homes.

Glessner House remains the only example of Richardson's work in the city today. The unpretentious, almost somber exterior of the home gives way to a warm and rich wood trimmed interior. The Wellesley granite walls topped with red tile and steeply pitched gable roof sports little ornamentation.

An interesting feature about the house is that most of the principal rooms open into an interior courtyard rather than the street providing a place for Mrs. Glessner's Monday morning ladies' reading classes.

Ten fireplaces, oak floors and trim, and much of the Isaac Scott furniture, indicative of the craftsmanship revival of Glessner's time, still grace the massive home. The master bedroom and Glessner's library are surprisingly similar, almost to the detail, to the rooms as they were nearly a century ago. This was achieved by studying photographs taken of the rooms back then and through the use of original furnishings donated to the foundation by the Glessner heirs.

Other of the rooms in the house will be restored to their original state as more funds become available, said Jethro Hurt, the foundation's educational coordinator.

The two-story house, visited in its prime by the entire Chicago Symphony Orchestra, several presidents and many of Chicago's elite, was Chicago's first dedicated landmark and serves as a museum and as the foundation's main headquarters.

The city and the Chicago School of Architecture Foundation began planning the Prairie Avenue Historic District some eight years after the foundation had acquired Glessner House as a restoration project.

The Chicago School of Architecture Foundation has spent approximately $350,000 to restore Glessner House. Several rooms of the home are leased to the Chicago Chapter of the American Institute of Architects for office space.

Glessner House is open to public one-hour tours Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., and Sundays from 1 to 4 p.m., with $1 admission fee. (326-1393).

Four other Prairie Avenue edifices also date back to the same turn-of-the-century era and have survived and have been or will be restored to their original state in conjunction with the ongoing historic district renovation.

The William W. Kimball house, designed by Solon S. Beman in 1891, was patterned after the Chateau de Josseljin in France. The house, 1801 S. Prairie Ave., resembles a feudal castle and cost the one-time piano manufacturer an estimated $1 million to design and contract. Beman is the same architect who designed Pullman city, America's first model industrial town.

The Joseph G. Coleman house, 1811 S. Prairie Ave., was designed in 1886 and belonged to one of the city's most prosperous hardware manufacturers. Nearby is the Elbridge G. Keith house, 1871 S. Prairie Ave., designed in 1871. The hat wholesaler and banker's three-story brick house has oak paneled rooms and parquet floors that reflect the Prairie Avenue life style.

The last of the four remaining houses on the historic block, in addition to Glessner House, is the one-time mansion of Marshall Field located at 1905 S. Prairie Ave. The structure was designed by Richard M. Hunt, who also designed William K. Vanderbilt's New York mansion during the same era. "The merchant prince" had the mansion built in 1876 for an estimated $2 million and it became the first house in the city to have electric lights. Once the scene of many of the era's most glamorous and legendary social functions, the structure with the mansard roof is now deserted and decaying.

The relocation and renovation of the Henry B. Clarke house will round out the Prairie Avenue Historic District which is expected to be completed in several more years and will open to the public next fall.

The Prairie Avenue project, which will serve as a showcase for Chicago history and architectural design, is the first of its kind in the city although there are other districts in Chicago that include both historic and private residences.

The trend, however, is to restore individual old homes that are not part of a larger historic district. Numerous non-profit organizations have been transforming these old structures into museums or historical society headquarters at a quickening rate.

Some of the prominent and historic homes in the Chicago area that have been restored and opened to the public in recent years are as follows:

Jane Addams' Hull House, Polk and Halsted streets, Chicago. Visiting hours are weekdays 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sundays from 1 to 5 p.m. Admission is free. (996-2762).

The splendid, two-story red brick house that was the center of Hull House activities remains in the same fine condition that Ms. Addams kept it in during the turn of the century. Charles Hull, a real estate dealer, built the structure in 1856 as his suburban residence at a time when Chicago's population of 85,000 was thinly scattered.

By the time Jane Addams and her Rockford Seminary classmate, Ellen Gates Starr, opened a settlement house in the dilapidated mansion in 1889, the house was in the midst of an immigrant slum, sandwiched between an undertaking parlor and livery stable on one side and an Irish saloon and German bakery on the other.

Only two of the thirteen buildings that became known as Hull House remain on the original site, located near the main entrance to the University of Illinois Chicago Circle Campus at 800 S. Halsted Street. The site has been designated as a National Historic Landmark.

Although Hull House activities have scattered to various locations in the city, the two-story dining hall is furnished as it was in the 1920s and 1930s with great oak tables and bentwood chairs, and also boasts a fine collection of copper, brass and pewter.

The original Hull House still has the marble fireplaces, high windows, ceilings adorned with rosettes, carved woodwork and much of the furniture that was part of Ms. Addam's time.

The Nobel Peace Prize that was awarded to Jane Addams in 1931 is among the many items on display in the house which, along with the dining hall, has been reconstructed by the University of Illinois and integrated into its campus.

The Charles Gates Dawes Mansion, home of the Evanston Historical Society, 225 Greenwood St., Evanston. Open 1 to 5 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays. Adults 50 cents and children 25 cents admission. (475-3410).

The three-and-a-half story mansion, recently declared a National Historic Landmark, was the home of Dawes, a financier, brigadier general, Nobel Peace Prize winner and vice president of the United States from 1925 to 1929.

The house, deeded to Northwestern University and transformed into a museum by the Evanston Historical Society in 1960, is an example of French Chateauesque style designed by Architect H. Edwards Ficken of New York and built in 1894 on the lakefront.

The orange brick exterior gives way to a vibrant interior dominated by large stained glass windows, oak wood paneling and a sweeping stairway that winds its way up the center of the home to bedrooms on the second floor and servants quarter and a ballroom on the third.

The dining room with its monstrous wood carved hutch opposite a roaring fireplace, and the library, Dawes' favorite room and the place where he died in 1951, are the most impressive rooms in the twenty-eight-room dwelling.

The house contains many of the artifacts, memorabilia and furnishings of the Dawes family in addition to historical costume and antique doll and toy exhibits.

The Frank Lloyd Wright Home and Studio, 951 Chicago Ave., Oak Park. Open Tuesdays and Thursdays 1-2:30 p.m., Saturdays and Sundays 1-4:30 p.m. Adults $2 and youths $1. (848-1977).

There is a spaciousness here, a blending of the home and nature.

Wright designed and built the sprawling structure between 1889 and 1898, remodeling it constantly until 1911, using the buildings as experimental models as he created and developed the Prairie School of architecture.

The Nobel Peace Prize that was awarded to Jane Addams in 1931 is among the many items on display in the house which, along with the dining hall, has been reconstructed by the University of Illinois and integrated into its campus.

The Charles Gates Dawes Mansion, home of the Evanston Historical Society, 225 Greenwood St., Evanston. Open 1 to 5 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays, Tnursdays, Fridays and Saturdays. Adults 50 cents and children 25 cents admission. (475-3410).

The three-and-a-half story mansion, recently declared a National Historic Landmark, was the home of Dawes, a financier, brigadier general, Nobel Peace Prize winner and vice president of the United States from 1925 to 1929.

The house, deeded to Northwestern University and transformed into a museum by the Evanston Historical Society in 1960, is an example of French Chateauesque style designed by Architect H. Edwards Ficken of New York and built in 1894 on the lakefront.

The orange brick exterior gives way to a vibrant interior dominated by large stained glass windows, oak wood paneling and a sweeping stairway that winds its way up the center of the home to bedrooms on the second floor and servants quarter and a ballroom on the third.

The dining room with its monstrous wood carved hutch opposite a roaring fireplace, and the library, Dawes' favorite room and the place where he died in 1951, are the most impressive rooms in the twenty-eight-room dwelling.

The house contains many of the artifacts, memorabilia and furnishings of the Dawes family in addition to historical costume and antique doll and toy exhibits.

The Frank Lloyd Wright Home and Studio, 951 Chicago Ave., Oak Park. Open Tuesdays and Thursdays 1-2:30 p.m., Saturdays and Sundays 1-4:30 p.m. Adults $2 and youths $1. (848-1977).

There is a spaciousness here, a blending of the home and nature.

Wright designed and built the sprawling structure between 1889 and 1898, remodeling it constantly until 1911, using the buildings as experimental models as he created and developed the Prairie School of architecture.

He was an intriguing man who dressed in a cape and distinctive, flamboyant clothing. His father was a minister-musician, and Wright learned to perceive architecture as music — as elements being integrated to result in a harmonious blending, an appealing sight.

The low doorways, and the long, deep set windows provided a cave-like retreat from the world and meshed the home and studio with its natural surroundings in a very private manner. The children's rectangular playroom on the second floor is dominated on one end by an art deco, Egyptian seascape and by receding balconies on the other. A piano was hidden underneath the balcony stairway. The room filled with music and laughter when used as a neighborhood kindergarten that Wright's wife, Catherine, coordinated.

The simple, functional, daylight-filled studio on the second floor is where Wright designed the plans for many of the houses that dot the streets of Oak Park. After a break in business arrangements with architect Louis Sullivan, Wright went on to experiment with Japanese, Victorian and cubism influences in his work — plans of which are stored in his study.

Wright left his home in 1909 to work in Europe and other parts of the United States, divorcing his wife and adopting a scandalous social life. He died in 1959, and the studio and home have since become a monument to the evolution of his work.

The edifice at Chicago and Forest avenues, first built by Wright for his bride is now preserved and operated by the Frank Lloyd Wright Home and Studio Foundation which also operates the Oak Park Tour Center. The group is attempting to raise close to $1 million to restore the home and studio which is the major focus of a half-mile square historic district. The district encompasses 350 historically significant homes, twenty-five of which were designed by Wright.

A historic rather than "old" home is Wright's Frederick C. Robie House, 5757 Woodlawn Ave., adjacent to the University of Chicago (753-4429). Built in 1908 it is considered a pioneer in the modern movement of architecture and design that was based on the idea that the form of the house should be determined by its function and location.

The horizontal structure was designed to blend with the flatness of the surrounding prairie. Its long, low rooms were indirectly lighted from leaded windows and warmed by plain, brick fireplaces.

The Robie House, which later served as a woman's dormitory for the Chicago Theological Seminary, is now operated by the Adlai Stevenson Foundation which conducts public tours of the structure by appointment.

The Francis J. Dewes house, 503 Wrightwood, Chicago, now the home of the Swedish Engineers Society of Chicago. Tours by appointment only by calling 744-3200.

The baroque-revival exterior of the mansion, built from 1894 to 1896 after the World's Columbian Exposition, is a stunning contrast to the modern architecture of the North Side's Lincoln Park area. The house, constructed during a period of Architectural innovation just prior to the Wright era, is a monument to the old world grandeur.

Dewes, a millionaire brewer, commissioned German architects to design the house, which has a wealth of detail, ornamentation and female caryatids of ancient Greek sculpture on the outside.

The interior is even more elaborate with a fountain wishing well, with life sized cupids, in the front foyer and a drawing room done in rococo splendor.

The structure, although lacking most of its original furnishings, remains in remarkably good condition.

The Samuel M. Nickerson mansion, 40 E. Erie St., Chicago, tours by appointment only by calling 744-3200.

The three-story stone thirty-room mansion is one of the city's finest examples of Victorian architecture. The house, which cost an estimated $450,000 to design and build, was completed in 1883 for the financier and cultural leader and his family in what was then an exclusive North Side neighborhood.

The heavy, marble interior of the home dominates even the monumental staircase that winds up through all three floors of the house. The house has been occupied by the American College of Surgeons since 1919 and remains in exemplary condition.

The Robert Hall McCormick mansion, 660 Rush Street, Chicago, now occupied by Chez Paul restaurant. (944-6680).

The stately home was one of many brownstones in the North Side neighborhood. Robert was the nephew of Cyrus McCormick who had his three-and-a-half story house built in 1875 to house his world renown art collection. The house was later opened to the public as a tea room known as "Kentucky Serves a Meal" and is today, a public restaurant set in the elegance of the original home.

The George Martin II house, Rt. 65 (Aurora Avenue), Naperville, now the Caroline Martin-Mitchell Museum. Open Wednesday and Sundays from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. (355-0274).

The large, brick Victorian home, known as "Pinecraig" was built in 1883 by George Martin II, a brick, tile and limestone merchant in Naperville. The twelve-room mansion is furnished with many of the Martin family possessions and pioneer items from some of the town's founding families.

It was opened as a museum in 1939 and is maintained by the Naperville Park District and Naperville Heritage Society.

The Henry L. Glos Mansion, 104 S. Kenilworth Ave., Elmhurst, now the home of the Elmhurst Historical Museum. Open Tuesdays from 1 to 5 p.m., Thursdays from 1 to 5 p.m. and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is free. (833-1457).

Henry Glos, grandson of Elmhurst's first settler, built the Victorian mansion of Bedford limestone in 1892. The white oak woodwork, solid brass doorknobs and hinges and copper downspouts and gutters remain in perfect condition. The eighteen-room home of the village's first president was used from 1941 to 1970 as a city hall and was renovated with appropriations from the city council before being opened as a museum.

Lombard Historical Society Museum, 23 W. Maple St., Lombard. Open Wednesday and Sundays from 1 to 4 p.m. Admission is 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for youths. (629-1885).

Five years ago the society decided to renovate what was a middle income house built in the 1880s during the rise of the country's middle class. The design and detail of the house is very simple, becoming a common class, and it is furnished with items of the 1880s that are characteristic of the Victorian era.

The town of Pullman, a part of Chicago since 1889, includes a number of homes and buildings restored to their original state and purpose. The more than 600 buildings designed by architect Solon S. Beman include the Hotel Florence, 11111 S. Forrestville Ave. and the Historical Pullman Center, 614 E. 113th St. It was meant to be a "model city" financed and designed by sleeping car magnate George M. Pullman on 4,000 acres of Prairie along Lake Calumet. Walking tours of the first planned city in the country, which is now a national landmark, are available by calling 785-8181. §

Left: The Prairie Avenue District may be returned to the way it looked at the turn of the century. Through grants and private donations the area is being restored.

Below: Glessner House, 1800 S. Prairie Ave., was built in 1886 and now is the headquarters for the Chicago School of Architecture Foundation, the organization behind the renovation of the surrounding historic district. John Glessner, below left, had the house built when he moved to Chicago to oversee the Midwest expansion of his farm machinery business.

The Widow Clarke home makes its way back to Prairie Ave.

The only Chicago residence to have escaped destruction in the ravaging 1871 fire will be saved from the wrecker's ball next month by way of a complex and tricky move that will be one of the most curious architectural feats of this century.

The Henry B. Clarke house, the oldest in Chicago built some 140 years ago in a sweeping Greek Revival style, will be moved thirty-two blocks from where it now stands at 4526 S. Wabash Ave. to the western edge of the Prairie Avenue Historic District.

The new resting place for the two-story, frame house, at 1871 S. Indiana Ave., will be very near to where the structure was first built by Clarke, one of the city's pioneer hardware dealers and bankers.

Another of the city's prominent residents, John Chrimes, purchased the house from Clarke in 1871 and moved it from Michigan Avenue and 16th Street only months before the Great Chicago Fire.

The house, which was reportedly built in 1836 for $10,000, was supposed to have been a counterpart to the North Side mansion erected by William B. Ogden, Chicago's first mayor.

The story behind the old house with its pillar-supported portico and graceful curving stairway that leads to a small third floor cupola, is fascinating. But, the story of how the structure slowly will make its way back home again is even more intriguing.

It will take about five weeks to complete the entire move of the house.

The constant stumbling block in plans however has been the Chicago Transit Authority elevated tracks that divide the current and new locations for the structure. The house either has to go under or over the tracks in order to get from point "A" to point "B."

There were thoughts of dismantling the house into three layers, making part of the trip by barge on Lake Michigan or moving the house along the nearby railroad right-of-way.

However, the elaborate plan that has been settled on involves pulling the house on a 64-wheel truck trailer flat along 44th Street slowly hoisting the 180-ton structure over the elevated tracks and continuing its on-trailer journey down Martin Luther King Drive and Michigan Avenue to the Indiana Avenue site.

Most of the five weeks will be spent jacking the house 25 feet up in the air while supportive cribbing is placed beneath the structure every step of the way. Then, some Sunday morning the house will be rolled across the tracks along steel I-beams and will make its way down to the ground on the opposite side of the tracks with a reversal of the cribbing technique.

Only the cupola and the gables on either side of the house will have to be removed in the moving process to make certain that street lights and fixtures aren't knocked down as the structure inches its way across the city's South Side.

As the house nears its new location, it will be winched along the Michigan Avenue bridge that crosses over the Stevenson Expressway. Because of the weight of the house the city has considered underpinning the bridge to help support the excessive weight.

Moving a house over the elevated tracks is a "first" in the city, said Jerome R. Butler Jr., the city's architect who won national honors for the restoration of Navy Pier last spring.

However, buildings larger than the Clarke house have been moved across the city in the past. Butler and his men once moved a neighborhood fire alarm office a few hundred feet out of the path of the Dan Ryan Expressway while employes continued working in the offices and the alarm system remained fully operational.

"We have a long track record in moving buildings but this particular project certainly indicates a major commitment on the part of the city toward preserving a historical building and others like it," Butler said.

The sophisticated hydraulic and electronic equipment that will be used in the relocation process will make the job simpler than the first move of the house more than a hundred years ago. That was done strictly with mule power, Butler said. "Of course, the elevated tracks weren't around then and they didn't have to worry about going underneath or over them."

The estimated $126,000 cost of moving and insuring the structure will be paid for with federal funds. The securing of the house in its new location and the total restoration of the building to its original state will be included in the cost of constructing the Prairie Avenue landmark district.

Much of the interior of the house, which measures 42.7 by 47.7 feet, is in "splendid" condition according to William Wilbert R. Hasbrouck, an architect who specializes in the restoration or adaptive re-use of historical structures who is masterminding the restoration of the Clarke house. His offices are located in an old mansion in the 1800 block of south Prairie Avenue which is the heart of the landmark historic district.

Masterful, old-fashioned carpentry and construction are evident in the Clarke house, which still has a basement kitchen, first floor dining and living room area and second floor bedrooms intact. The original plaster, doors and window frames remain.

Hasbrouck and his colleagues have spent numerous hours cautiously studying the interior of the house and what lies beneath the fourteen coats of paint that have been applied to many of its walls. They have been examining old photographs of the house in preparation for returning it to its original state.

Furnishings of the period will be purchased to enhance the interior of the home which eventually will serve as a museum and "living" piece of history.

By next summer, the Clarke house will be ready for visitors as will most of the Prairie Avenue Historic District where workmen are installing curbing, sidewalks, street surfacing and street lights of the late 1880s. —D.M.

Dust off your walking shoes and tour these fine old homes

A walking tour of restored historic structures is as easy as pie these days with numerous printed materials and organizations eager to help the interested layman.

The Chicago School of Architecture Foundation provides a number of specialized walking, bike and bus tours that include structures located along the Chicago River and Lake Michigan on the North Shore, in Evanston, on the Gold Coast, Michigan Avenue, Lincoln Park, Hyde Park and the Prairie Avenue Historic District among others.

The foundation publishes a fold-out map and pamphlet, "A Unique Architectural Experience 1977," that details its nearly twenty different tours and other informational services.

The pamphlet and other printed information is available from the foundation headquarters at Glessner House, 1800 S. Prairie Ave., Chicago.

Another source for tour and printed information about historic and restored homes in the Chicago area is the ArchiCenter, 111 S. Dearborn St., Chicago.

Other preservation organizations eager to offer information and help are:

- Chicago Chapter of the Society of Architectural Historians, 1800 S. Prairie Ave., Chicago. 842-4634.
- Women's Architectural League, American Institute of Architects, 1800 S. Prairie Ave., Chicago. 842-4634.
- Frank Lloyd Wright Home and Studio Foundation, 951 Chicago Ave., Oak Park. 848-1976.
- Commission of Chicago Historical and Architectural Landmarks, 320 N. Clark St., Room 800, Chicago. 744-3200.
- Chicago School of Architecture Foundation, Glessner House, 1800 S. Prairie Ave., Chicago. 326-1393.
- Naperville Heritage Society, 1021 Jackson, Naperville. 355-1988.
- North Dearborn Association, 1454 N. Dearborn Pkwy., Chicago. 787-9015.
- Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission, 10 S. Riverside Plaza, Chicago. 454-0400.
- Oak Park Landmarks Commission, 2 Village Hall Plaza, Oak Park. 383-6400.

- Landmarks Preservation Council, Old Colony Building, 407 S. Dearborn St., Suite 1705, Chicago. 922-1742.

One other source of information about restored, old residences, both private and public, are books. One of the finest, most up-to-date guides to Chicago area homes is "Chicago on Foot," by Ira J. Bach, which offers walking tours of Chicago's architecture. —D.M.

over them."

The estimated $126,000 cost of moving and insuring the structure will be paid for with federal funds. The securing of the house in its new location and the total restoration of the building to its original state will be included in the cost of constructing the Prairie Avenue landmark district.

Much of the interior of the house, which measures 42.7 by 47.7 feet, is in "splendid" condition according to William Wilbert R. Hasbrouck, an architect who specializes in the restoration or adaptive re-use of historical structures who is masterminding the restoration of the Clarke house. His offices are located in an old mansion in the 1800 block of south Prairie Avenue which is the heart of the landmark historic district.

Masterful, old-fashioned carpentry and construction are evident in the Clarke house, which still has a basement kitchen, first floor dining and living room area and second floor bedrooms intact. The original plaster, doors and window frames remain.

Hasbrouck and his colleagues have spent numerous hours cautiously studying the interior of the house and what lies beneath the fourteen coats of paint that have been applied to many of its walls. They have been examining old photographs of the house in preparation for returning it to its original state.

Furnishings of the period will be purchased to enhance the interior of the home which eventually will serve as a museum and "living" piece of history.

By next summer, the Clarke house will be ready for visitors as will most of the Prairie Avenue Historic District where workmen are installing curbing, sidewalks, street surfacing and street lights of the late 1880s. —D.M.

The newest concept in recreational skiing, commonly referred to as free style or hot dogging, will be demonstrated by the Holiday Park Ski School Free Style Team today during Woodfield's Winter Sports Expo.

The four-member team will perform various ballet and aerial maneuvers on a portable ice deck in the Grand Court at noon and 2 p.m.

Dust off your walking shoes and tour these fine old homes

A walking tour of restored historic structures is as easy as pie these days with numerous printed materials and organizations eager to help the interested layman.

The Chicago School of Architecture Foundation provides a number of specialized walking, bike and bus tours that include structures located along the Chicago River and Lake Michigan on the North Shore, in Evanston, on the Gold Coast, Michigan Avenue, Lincoln Park, Hyde Park and the Prairie Avenue Historic District among others.

The foundation publishes a fold-out map and pamphlet, "A Unique Architectural Experience 1977," that details its nearly twenty different tours and other informational services.

The pamphlet and other printed information is available from the foundation headquarters at Glessner House, 1800 S. Prairie Ave., Chicago.

Another source for tour and printed information about historic and restored homes in the Chicago area is the ArchiCenter, 111 S. Dearborn St., Chicago.

Other preservation organizations eager to offer information and help are:

- Chicago Chapter of the Society of Architectural Historians, 1800 S. Prairie Ave., Chicago. 842-4634.
- Women's Architectural League, American Institute of Architects, 1800 S. Prairie Ave., Chicago. 842-4634.
- Frank Lloyd Wright Home and Studio Foundation, 951 Chicago Ave., Oak Park. 848-1976.
- Commission of Chicago Historical and Architectural Landmarks, 320 N. Clark St., Room 800, Chicago. 744-3200.
- Chicago School of Architecture Foundation, Glessner House, 1800 S. Prairie Ave., Chicago. 326-1393.
- Naperville Heritage Society, 1021 Jackson, Naperville. 355-1988.
- North Dearborn Association, 1454 N. Dearborn Pkwy., Chicago. 787-9015.
- Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission, 10 S. Riverside Plaza, Chicago. 454-0400.
- Oak Park Landmarks Commission, 2 Village Hall Plaza, Oak Park. 383-6400.
- Historic Pullman Foundation and Beman Committee, 614 E. 113th St., Chicago. 785-8181.
- Landmarks Preservation Council, Old Colony Building, 407 S. Dearborn St., Suite 1705, Chicago. 922-1742.

One other source of information about restored, old residences, both private and public, are books. One of the finest, most up-to-date guides to Chicago area homes is "Chicago on Foot," by Ira J. Bach, which offers walking tours of Chicago's architecture. —D.M.

The ArchiCenter

Dedicated to preserving architectural landmarks

by Kurt Baer

Cutting Chicago architecture down to size is a big job.

Most people turn off at the mere mention of words like "architectural awareness."

Complicated drawings, technical terms and condescending architects looking down and talking down to all of us. Who needs it?

But it does not have to be that way. Not at all. A stop by the ArchiCenter, 111 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, proves it.

Inside the second story exhibit area a congenial staff waits to provide as much, or as little help as you want in coping with Chicago's architectural trends and traditions.

"We are a tour and exhibition center devoted to architecture in the Chicago area and designed to teach the general public about the man-made environment. We're not necessarily out to bring architecture down to the public. We want to bring the public's awareness up," explains Vicki Latranga, 27-year-old director of ArchiCenter.

Admission to ArchiCenter is free. It is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and at 2 p.m. Sunday for a walking tour of the Loop. The story of Chicago architecture is told largely through photographic murals; maps and models locate important buildings in the city landscape.

The emphasis is on the need to preserve Chicago's landmark buildings and to remember those structures.

"There is, I think, a growing sense of loss today when old places are disturbed. People are realizing how important the built environment is to their own sense of self.

"You can see it in the popularity of 'Roots,' in the desire to search out the past. People are more realistic about saving old structures. It is no longer a shameful thing to say you live in an older house," said Ms. Latranga.

What the visitor to ArchiCenter does not find inside, he can look for on the street during any one of twenty-five different tours of the city and suburbs sponsored by the center.

For a small fee, trained guides will take you on a walking tour of the Loop Monday through Friday at 10 a.m., Saturday and Sunday at 2 p.m. The cost is $2.

"We talk about structure and style and point out the buildings that really made Chicago famous," Ms. Latranga said.

Saturdays at 9:30 a.m. a 3½-hour bus tour of Chicago's famous neighborhoods sets out from ArchiCenter. Along the architectural odyssey, travelers will encounter the birthplace of the skyscraper and the home of the prairie school of architecture.

The bus visits the Loop, North Michigan Avenue, the Gold Coast, Lincoln Park, the Prairie Avenue preservation district with its "Millionaire's Row;" the Near West Side, home of the University of Illinois Chicago Circle Campus; Hyde Park and Kenwood and the Illinois Institute of Technoogy. The cost is $7, and $3.50 for children under 12. Reservations are requested.

Other tours of Evanston, Oak Park, Riverside, and historic Graceland Cemetery also are conducted at different times and dates.

There is a special place at ArchiCenter for children. For example, the Chicago School of Architecture Foundation, which rents an office at ArchiCenter, is throwing a birthday party, Sunday, Sept. 25, for kids aged 6-12 at Glessner House, 1800 S. Prairie Ave., Chicago.

The price of admission to the party is $1.50, or preferably, a book of 25 rubbings children have made of parts of buildings using the very simplest of tools, paper and crayons.

"Rubbings are a highlight for kids. They can see the texture and ornament of a building," explains Ms. Latranga. Rubbings are a simple device that tell an important architectural story: the evolution of building ornament from the grooved surface of the 82-year-old Marquette Building, 140 S. Dearborn St., to the cold, smooth steel and glass walls of the Richard J. Daley Center.

Building styles are part of a special summer-long children's walking tour called "Put Your Arms Around a Building." That is precisely what youngsters aged 6 to 12 do. By touching, feeling and stretching their hands and arms across massive walls and around masonry columns, children are confronted with the scale and diversity of building in Chicago. It is another simple, demonstrative teaching method developed by ArchiCenter.

Some 700 children made the tour this summer.

"With young children we also can do a lot with blocks. We use ordinary building blocks to explain the concept of masonry construction, with its thick walls. Tinker Toys get across the idea of the steel frame, skyscraper building," said Ms. Latranga.

In addition to ArchiCenter's children's tour and other special programs for children, this year, for the first time, the Chicago School of Architecture Foundation has a contract with the Chicago Board of Education to present a fifth grade curriculum on Chicago architecture in all the city's public schools.

As with so many other issues, mass appreciation of architecture really rests with the education of tomorrow's population. It is somehow easier for young people to learn ArchiCenter's message.

"You don't look at a building the way you walk into a museum and look at a painting. Buildings are a part of life, not just filigree.

"In a city like Chicago, the average person may not have much access or input to building and development. But we encourage people to look at the issues, to question whether bigger is better, to get upset about cigar box buildings and highways that lead only to the next traffic jam," said Ms. Latranga.

For those who want to take an architectural story home, ArchiCenter has a carefully-chosen collection of books and drawings for sale. For the pop-minded, there are even T-shirts with the portrait and credos of four famous architects such as Mies van der Rohe: "Less is More" and Louis Sullivan: "Form Follows Function."

ArchiCenter was born in April, 1976, a child of the Bicentennial celebration and the Illinois Arts Council's statewide celebration of architecture.

Private fund raising and government grants have insured its continued existence to January, 1978. But there is an irony in the story of ArchiCenter that capsulizes the much grander saga of Chicago's drive to rebuild.

"The building we're in will be torn down and we're going to have to relocate," said Ms. Latranga.

"Just recently the University of Illinois Chicago-Circle gave its students a project, to design a new ArchiCenter. They came up with a 'dream' at Clark Street and Wacker Drive that, if we had an unlimited budget of $3 million, would be nice to have.

"But realistically, I would be delighted with a good ground floor location, where people would be free to come and go and feel that architecture is a permanent part of their life, a cultural part of their life," she said.

Noon-hour lectures, a library of ten films on architectural subjects, photo murals and captions that make for fascinating browsing, special exhibits on new building trends or especially talented architects, tours and a volunteer staff that stands ready to help anyone understand one of the world's most famous man-made environments, Chicago.

It's called ArchiCenter, 111 S. Dearborn St., Chicago. It's open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Saturday, year-round. And it's free. Stop in September 29th. It's H. H. Richardson's 139th birthday.

But please, leave your fears, prejudice and dislike for architecture on the doorstep.

JEFFERSON, TEX. — Nostalgia-bitten travelers who yearn for the rocking-chair pace of small-town America, perhaps the sort of place portrayed in such television favorites as Petticoat Junction, Green Acres and Andy Griffith, should come to the piney woods of Northeast Texas and set a spell.

While life here is not quite as rosy as in the imaginary TV towns of Mayberry, Hooterville and Petticoat, you sense you've escaped to a simpler era. The skyscrapers of Dallas and Houston seem light years, not hours, away. A touch of the Old South prevails.

Antique lovers can have a field day touring historic homes in places like Jefferson, Tex., or searching for bits of Americana at flea markets like the big one in Canton.

On a cobbled street in Jefferson you can relax in wrought-iron chairs on the front porch of an exquisite 19th Century hotel furnished with Victorian treasures.

East Texas also promises you a rose garden — the nation's largest — in Tyler.

The newest piece of nostalgia in the region is a restored steam locomotive that takes visitors through the nation's skinniest state park, the Texas State Railroad Historical Park, a 25-mile stretch between Rusk and Palestine. One of the engines was used in the movie "How the West Was Won" and another was originally chosen as the Hooterville Cannonball in the Petticoat Junction series. The Texas parks systems has invested $5 million in the project, the most expensive of the eighty antique railroad attractions in America.

The finished product is a gleaming yellow five-car train pulled by an authentic turn-of-the-century steam engine, complete with blasting whistle, billowing black smoke and clouds of hissing steam. The cavernous eighty-eight-seat cars, freshly painted and upholstered, once carried Rock Island Line commuters into Chicago's LaSalle Street Station.

In contrast to today's trains, this "iron horse" of yesteryear takes its merry old time, rocking along at 20 miles an hour, stopping nowhere. Instead of railyards and factories, you breeze through shady pine woods, cow pastures, red clay hills and isolated villages. The forests, covering one-fifth of Texas, would blanket all of New England. Crossing many rivers and creeks, the train travels over twenty-eight trestles.

On board there's a snack car with ice cream, sandwiches, potato chips and other goodies. At the new Victorian-style depots in Rusk and Palestine, you can pick up an engineer's cap, red bandana and other railroad souvenirs. Camping and picnicking facilities are available near both stations.

The track, just refurbished by convict work crews, dates from 1894 when the rail line transported iron-ore products from blast furnaces at East Texas State Penitentiary. Regular service was discontinued in 1921 after the prison was turned into a state hospital.

History lovers should not miss the town of Jefferson (population 2,500), once the state's second leading port (after Galveston) with ten times as many residents as today. In its heyday during the 1870s, sternwheelers, loaded with cotton bales and supplies for the early settlers, tied up at Jefferson's wharves on the Big Cypress Bayou. The townspeople became wealthy, and social life rivaled that of New Orleans.

When the bayou no longer was navigable, Jefferson faded commercially. But for tourists, the former river port remains a delightful outpost of the Old South.

Since 1947, well before historic preservation became fashionable, the "little old ladies" of the Jesse Allen Wise Garden Club have worked at saving the town's most noteworthy buildings. Junior historians from the local high school also take an active part. More than thirty structures bear the Texas State Historical Medallion.

Downtown stands the Excelsior House, a landmark hotel you can sleep in. If marble-topped dressers, oriental rugs, big guilded mirrors, high ceilings, chandeliers and carved mahogany bedposts do not strike your fancy, then choose a modern motor lodge. The Excelsior is like a museum. You'll find yourself gawking at antiques in the elegant public salons and peeking into open bedroom doors. Presidents Grant and Hayes were among the hotel guests 100 years ago.

This traveler was given the Lady Bird Room, named after Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson, who has family ties in Jefferson. Besides two Lady Bird photographs on the newly papered walls, a family clock sits on a marble-topped table. The rose-colored bedspreads, rug, and chair appear well-worn, mellow with time. A stylish settee, plus an old-fashioned washbowl and pitcher, contribute to the 19th Century ambience. The clothes closet — it must have been 10 feet high — held just two hangers.

The rooms have television but no phones. Rates for a double, with private bath, range from $14.70 to $18.90. The Presidential Suite is $31.50.

A breakfast of orange muffins, biscuits and jelly, and ham and eggs is served in the sun room overlooking a formal garden courtyard with brick paths.

Across the cobbled street, facing the Excelsior's front porch, is the private railroad car of tycoon Jay Gould, builder of the Texas and Pacific Railroad. Paneled in mahogany, the traveling suite has bedrooms, a stateroom, kitchen and bathtub — not to mention a pure silver sink.

It was Gould who angrily — and correctly — forecast economic death for Jefferson when the city, confident in the steamboat, refused his offer for a railroad. He wrote the prediction in the Excelsior's register, now preserved under glass in the lobby. One bedroom is named for Gould.

Adjacent to the hotel is the Jefferson Historical Museum, a former court house and post office, filled with artifacts relating

The newest piece of nostalgia in the region is a restored steam locomotive that takes visitors through the nation's skinniest state park, the Texas State Railroad Historical Park, a 25-mile stretch between Rusk and Palestine. One of the engines was used in the movie "How the West Was Won" and another was originally chosen as the Hooterville Cannonball in the Petticoat Junction series. The Texas parks systems has invested $5 million in the project, the most expensive of the eighty antique railroad attractions in America.

The finished product is a gleaming yellow five-car train pulled by an authentic turn-of-the-century steam engine, complete with blasting whistle, billowing black smoke and clouds of hissing steam. The cavernous eighty-eight-seat cars, freshly painted and upholstered, once carried Rock Island Line commuters into Chicago's LaSalle Street Station.

In contrast to today's trains, this "iron horse" of yesteryear takes its merry old time, rocking along at 20 miles an hour, stopping nowhere. Instead of railyards and factories, you breeze through shady pine woods, cow pastures, red clay hills and isolated villages. The forests, covering one-fifth of Texas, would blanket all of New England. Crossing many rivers and creeks, the train travels over twenty-eight trestles.

On board there's a snack car with ice cream, sandwiches, potato chips and other goodies. At the new Victorian-style depots in Rusk and Palestine, you can pick up an engineer's cap, red bandana and other railroad souvenirs. Camping and picnicking facilities are available near both stations.

The track, just refurbished by convict work crews, dates from 1894 when the rail line transported iron-ore products from blast furnaces at East Texas State Penitentiary. Regular service was discontinued in 1921 after the prison was turned into a state hospital.

History lovers should not miss the town of Jefferson (population 2,500), once the state's second leading port (after Galveston) with ten times as many residents as today. In its heyday during the 1870s, sternwheelers, loaded with cotton bales and supplies for the early settlers, tied up at Jefferson's wharves on the Big Cypress Bayou. The townspeople became wealthy, and social life rivaled that of New Orleans.

When the bayou no longer was navigable, Jefferson faded commercially. But for tourists, the former river port remains a delightful outpost of the Old South.

Since 1947, well before historic preservation became fashionable, the "little old ladies" of the Jesse Allen Wise Garden Club have worked at saving the town's most noteworthy buildings. Junior historians from the local high school also take an active part. More than thirty structures bear the Texas State Historical Medallion.

Downtown stands the Excelsior House, a landmark hotel you can sleep in. If marble-topped dressers, oriental rugs, big guilded mirrors, high ceilings, chandeliers and carved mahogany bedposts do not strike your fancy, then choose a modern motor lodge. The Excelsior is like a museum. You'll find yourself gawking at antiques in the elegant public salons and peeking into open bedroom doors. Presidents Grant and Hayes were among the hotel guests 100 years ago.

This traveler was given the Lady Bird Room, named after Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson, who has family ties in Jefferson. Besides two Lady Bird photographs on the newly papered walls, a family clock sits on a marble-topped table. The rose-colored bedspreads, rug, and chair appear well-worn, mellow with time. A stylish settee, plus an old-fashioned washbowl and pitcher, contribute to the 19th Century ambience. The clothes closet — it must have been 10 feet high — held just two hangers.

The rooms have television but no phones. Rates for a double, with private bath, range from $14.70 to $18.90. The Presidential Suite is $31.50.

A breakfast of orange muffins, biscuits and jelly, and ham and eggs is served in the sun room overlooking a formal garden courtyard with brick paths.

Across the cobbled street, facing the Excelsior's front porch, is the private railroad car of tycoon Jay Gould, builder of the Texas and Pacific Railroad. Paneled in mahogany, the traveling suite has bedrooms, a stateroom, kitchen and bathtub — not to mention a pure silver sink.

It was Gould who angrily — and correctly — forecast economic death for Jefferson when the city, confident in the steamboat, refused his offer for a railroad. He wrote the prediction in the Excelsior's register, now preserved under glass in the lobby. One bedroom is named for Gould.

Adjacent to the hotel is the Jefferson Historical Museum, a former court house and post office, filled with artifacts relating to frontier history. A short stroll away are several antique shops.

If you have time to see only one historic home in Jefferson, make sure it's the House of the Four Seasons, a flamboyant white frame mansion with tall arched windows, 16-foot ceilings, pine floors, and a square cupola with colored windows representing the four seasons. You can see the kaleidoscopic reflections from the main hall if you look up the circular three-story atrium. In addition to a new paint job, the home has been opulently furnished with Victorian antiques by a young Texas banker and his wife.

Because of growing interest in things old, the monthly flea market in Canton, a cattle-raising community an hour east of Dallas, is drawing bigger crowds than ever. You can leave this sprawling garage sale with a few choice pieces of genuine Americana or enough junk to fill a city dump.

First Monday Trades Day began in 1873 on the first Monday of every month, the day when the district judge would come to town. It now starts on Friday morning and lasts until 5 p.m. Monday.

Spread over 30 acres of flat field and wooded gulch, the market offers everything from rusty nails to valuable antiques. Collectors on the prowl may spot the very soft-drink sign, tobacco tin, beer can, or political button for which they've been looking.

Some sellers specialize in one product. A man from Fort Smith, Ark., peddles old Coca-Cola bottles, signs, serving trays, wall clocks and pocket knives.

Not everything is old. New jewelry and CB radios abound. A merchant from Oklahoma deals in toilet seats hand-painted with daisies, squirrels, and other nature scenes.

Most sellers operate from the back of a van or pickup truck. A few are a new breed of gypsies who flit from flea market to flea market in a trailer home. They display stuff across two or three adjacent lots.

Small-timers need only a table for the homely wares they've scrounged from an attic or tool shed. To many, just getting involved means as much as profits. It makes a good pastime for retired people. The majority of sellers are amateurs who rent a lot a few times a year.

The Excelsior House in Jefferson offers guests a 19th Century flair.

Festive and jammed with people, First Monday Trades resembles a fair, but rarely do the dirt paths become overwhelmingly crowded. While there are no rides or kewpie dolls, the smell of cotton candy reminds you of ferris wheels and games of skill and chance.

You could spend a whole day just buying food. Every few yards there's a stand selling snow cones, corn dogs, chili pie (with corn chips and onions) and nachos (tortilla chips with jalapena peppers and melted cheese). Also tempting are barbecue beef, fried chicken and pecan pie. The smoke from sizzling bratwurst entices as well. One vendor sells Saigon egg rolls and won tons.

The crowds consist of the poor and the rich, country folk and city slickers. A young Dallas couple searching for oak furniture will rub shoulders with ranchers in need of a used rifle or cactus cutter.

Attendance figures swell to 40,000 on Labor Day and Fourth of July weekends. Though the influx of traders creates a traffic mess in little Canton, a town of only 3,000 inhabitants during the week, the rental of lots at First Monday brings in 25 per cent of the town's revenue. In 1965 the flea market was moved off Canton's streets to its current home just steps from downtown.

An hour east of Canton, in the city of Tyler (population 66,000), you can buy a dozen roses on the street, from late March through October, for a mere 50 cents. The area's nurseries, with millions of blooms in rainbows of color, supply more than half the nation's roses.

The world-famous Tyler Rose Garden boasts 38,000 plants in 400 varieties. Symmetrical patterns of terraced rose beds create broad vistas of yellows, pinks and reds amidst towering pines and oaks. There's even a green rose. Slated for Oct. 13-16 is the city's annual Festival of Roses pageant.

Tyler also is known for its Azalea Trail, a dazzling 5-mile circuit that takes you past rambling ranch homes and pillared mansions whose yards glow with raspberry-red azaleas in late March and early April.

Though Tyler, an affluent city, is the commercial center of East Texas, it retains a comfortable, residential atmosphere. The city of roses, whose well-being dates from the discovery in 1930 of the great East Texas oil fields, prides itself as a wholesome place to raise a family.

Bermuda by moped

Spending time in Bermuda without renting a motorbike is like finally getting tickets to the World Series and then sitting in the last row of the centerfield bleachers. You're there but you're just not close enough to enjoy all the fine points.

For countless millions of vacationers who have visited the island during the past 30 years, Bermuda and 50cc motorized pedal bikes — mopeds, for short — are synonymous. Anyone who has straddled a chugging two-wheeler will readily attest that it is perhaps the best and definitely the most inexpensive way to see the island from stem to stern. In fact, a sunny day in Bermuda without a motorbike to ride is unthinkable to most visitors.

For moped travel, Bermuda is a natural. Twenty-one square miles in size, Bermuda is an oceanic island having only 100 miles of public roadways — most of them narrow; all of them originally built to accommodate pedal bicycles and horse-drawn buggies, wagons and carriages.

Their names suggesting their locations, three main arteries — North Shore Road, Middle Road and South Shore Road — run east and west across the length of the island. Scores of shorter roads, most running north-south with several running east-west, tie the three major roads together. To aid first-time moped operators in getting around, easy-to-read and carry Bermuda maps are readily available at no cost most anywhere on the island.

Starting out in St. George at the eastern tip of the island, an enthusiastic moped operator could conceivably spend two full days rummaging through 365 years of Bermudian, British and American history. The embryo of Bermudian culture, St. George was settled in 1612 and the town today is still littered with relics and fragments of the past.

Leaving St. George and heading west, a motorbike rider crosses over onto St. David's Island, travels across the Causeway, a half-mile span running along the northern rim of scenic Castle Harbour.

Picking up the road that winds its way along the southern edge of Harrington Sound, a rider can first stop off at Crystal Cave and then Leamington Cave. Later Devil's Hole — where multicolored reef fish, sea turtles, sharks and other denizens of the deep swim harmoniously — and Spittal Pond — a bird sanctuary controlled by the government — both add to the pleasure of a Bermuda moped experience.

Finding your way around Bermuda is easy on a rented motorbike.

Traveling along the eastern third of the island's south shore, a rider can look seaward a quarter to a half mile distant and see The Boilers, a six-mile stretch of reef paralleling the shoreline.

Continuing west, the Botanical Gardens is a haven for flora lovers, and a moped rider is free to pull in and spend a few hours meandering through the 36-acre government-maintained park which holds specimens of all the flowers, plants and trees found on the island.

Proceeding on in a westerly direction, Bermuda's famed south shore beaches stretch out in a seemingly endless string along the middle third of the island. For several miles the road passes high above the shore, affording camera buffs the chance to capture some of Bermuda's most magnificent scenery.

In Southampton Parish, Gibb's Hill Lighthouse provides one of the best and perhaps most eye-appealing views of Bermuda. Sitting on a hill with an elevation of 245 feet, the lighthouse is 117 feet from its base, and from the top a visitor can look north for a spectacular view of Great Sound.

At land's end — the northern tip of Ireland Island — sits the Maritime Museum and Keepyard which houses many of Bermuda's nautical artifacts, some going back several hundreds years to the time when ships of wood were sailed by men of iron.

Take a cruise down the Illinois on a 'magnificent floating palace'

Weekend

Smooth talking, fancy-pants dandies in ruffled shirts and Louisiana derby hats once called them home.

Cranky old Mark Twain, sighing as he recalled his own youthful days on the Mississippi River, said they were "magnificent floating palaces."

Huck Finn used to see their bright lights off the Hannibal docks.

And for most people in Illinois during the mid-1800s steamboats represented the height of travel sophistication; a practical, yet classy way to trek up or downstream.

If you feel like experiencing what it was like to churn down an Illinois river during the steamboat era there are a variety of tours and special charter cruises to choose from. What you can expect is anything from a one-hour trip to moonlight cruises that let you dine, drink and dance the night away.

And prices range from cheap to reasonable.

Here's where to go in Illinois:

Perhaps best known for its frequent races against other noted sternwheelers throughout the Midwest, the Julie Belle Swain of Peoria also doubles as a summer cruise vessel. New for this year's travel package down the Illinois River includes a trip from Peoria to Dickson Mounds Indian Museum southeast of Lewistown. The cruise includes brunch and dinner, admission to the prehistoric displays at the museum and commentary on local river lore by Julia Belle Captain Dennis Trone. Price for the tour is $25.

Sightseeing cruises aboard the Julia Belle Swain depart every day at 1, 3 and 5 p.m. The standard one and one-half hour trip costs $4 for adults, $1 for kids under 13. Evening dinner rides of two hours (optional dining) depart at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday — for $4. Kids are $1.

Those that feel like kicking up their heels aboard the old time sternwheeler can sign up for a "Moonlight Dance Trip" which leaves dock at 7:30 and 10 p.m. on Friday and Saturday. Cost is $5 for all ages. Live band music is included.

Peoria is about a 3-hour drive from the Northwest suburbs by way of I-55 and I-74.

The namesake of the steamboat Lincoln once guided down the Sangamon River near Springfield still makes daily trips from the small village of New Salem.

The 73-ft. Talisman, a replica of the vessel built in the 1830s, makes daily trips every hour beginning at 10 a.m. The 45-minute cruise takes you along a wooded shoreline which remains much the same as when the 16th President lived in the area as a young man. Standard cruise costs $1 and departs from the old mill site. New Salem features dozens of refurbished log cabin homes, including the old cooperage where Lincoln once studied his lawbooks by the light of a hearth fire.

New Salem is a 4½-hour drive from the Northwest suburbs by way of I-55.

The Addie May, docked eight miles south of Nauvoo, offers hourly cruises Saturday beginning 7 p.m. Sunday and Holiday trips start at noon. For the $2 ticket price ($1 for kids) you can snap photos of the hilly Mississippi River shoreline. If you have a large party you can rent the Addie May for two hours — at $75 a shot. For those who feel like sampling steamboat flavor, but don't want the actual cruise, there's a bar open daily from noon to 10 p.m. For information, call: 309/847-2181.

Nauvoo is about a 5-hour drive from the Northwest suburbs on I-80, I-74 and Rtes. 41 and 9.

The Mississippi River near Quincy provides another chance to cruise Father Water in an unusual manner. The Quinssippi Queen, named after the Western Illinois island which once served as a trapping ground for early explorers, departs on weekend at 2, 3 and 4 p.m. Weekday charters are available for $25 per hour, dropping to $15 after the second hour. The Queen holds forty-nine passengers and departs from mainland Quincy.

Quincy is about 120 miles southwest of Peoria on Rte. 24.

Bermuda by moped

Finding your way around Bermuda is easy on a rented motorbike.

Spending time in Bermuda without renting a motorbike is like finally getting tickets to the World Series and then sitting in the last row of the centerfield bleachers. You're there but you're just not close enough to enjoy all the fine points.

For countless millions of vacationers who have visited the island during the past 30 years, Bermuda and 50cc motorized pedal bikes — mopeds, for short — are synonymous. Anyone who has straddled a chugging two-wheeler will readily attest that it is perhaps the best and definitely the most inexpensive way to see the island from stem to stern. In fact, a sunny day in Bermuda without a motorbike to ride is unthinkable to most visitors.

For moped travel, Bermuda is a natural. Twenty-one square miles in size, Bermuda is an oceanic island having only 100 miles of public roadways — most of them narrow; all of them originally built to accommodate pedal bicycles and horse-drawn buggies, wagons and carriages.

Perhaps one of the most enjoyable aspects of motorbiking across Bermuda is the scenery which is always colorful and easy on a rider's eyes.

Their names suggesting their locations, three main arteries — North Shore Road, Middle Road and South Shore Road — run east and west across the length of the island. Scores of shorter roads, most running north-south with several running east-west, tie the three major roads together. To aid first-time moped operators in getting around, easy-to-read and carry Bermuda maps are readily available at no cost most anywhere on the island.

Starting out in St. George at the eastern tip of the island, an enthusiastic moped operator could conceivably spend two full days rummaging through 365 years of Bermudian, British and American history. The embryo of Bermudian culture, St. George was settled in 1612 and the town today is still littered with relics and fragments of the past.

Leaving St. George and heading west, a motorbike rider crosses over onto St. David's Island, travels across the Causeway, a half-mile span running along the northern rim of scenic Castle Harbour.

Picking up the road that winds its way along the southern edge of Harrington Sound, a rider can first stop off at Crystal Cave and then Leamington Cave. Later Devil's Hole — where multicolored reef fish, sea turtles, sharks and other denizens of the deep swim harmoniously — and Spittal Pond — a bird sanctuary controlled by the government — both add to the pleasure of a Bermuda moped experience.

Traveling along the eastern third of the island's south shore, a rider can look seaward a quarter to a half mile distant and see The Boilers, a six-mile stretch of reef paralleling the shoreline.

Continuing west, the Botanical Gardens is a haven for flora lovers, and a moped rider is free to pull in and spend a few hours meandering through the 36-acre government-maintained park which holds specimens of all the flowers, plants and trees found on the island.

Proceeding on in a westerly direction, Bermuda's famed south shore beaches stretch out in a seemingly endless string along the middle third of the island. For several miles the road passes high above the shore, affording camera buffs the chance to capture some of Bermuda's most magnificent scenery.

In Southampton Parish, Gibb's Hill Lighthouse provides one of the best and perhaps most eye-appealing views of Bermuda. Sitting on a hill with an elevation of 245 feet, the lighthouse is 117 feet from its base, and from the top a visitor can look north for a spectacular view of Great Sound.

At land's end — the northern tip of Ireland Island — sits the Maritime Museum and Keepyard which houses many of Bermuda's nautical artifacts, some going back several hundreds years to the time when ships of wood were sailed by men of iron.

Weekend

Smooth talking, fancy-pants dandies in ruffled shirts and Louisiana derby hats once called them home.

Cranky old Mark Twain, sighing as he recalled his own youthful days on the Mississippi River, said they were "magnificent floating palaces."

Huck Finn used to see their bright lights off the Hannibal docks.

And for most people in Illinois during the mid-1800s steamboats represented the height of travel sophistication; a practical, yet classy way to trek up or downstream.

If you feel like experiencing what it was like to churn down an Illinois river during the steamboat era there are a variety of tours and special charter cruises to choose from. What you can expect is anything from a one-hour trip to moonlight cruises that let you dine, drink and dance the night away.

And prices range from cheap to reasonable.

Here's where to go in Illinois:

Perhaps best known for its frequent races against other noted sternwheelers throughout the Midwest, the Julie Belle Swain of Peoria also doubles as a summer cruise vessel. New for this year's travel package down the Illinois River includes a trip from Peoria to Dickson Mounds Indian Museum southeast of Lewistown. The cruise includes brunch and dinner, admission to the prehistoric displays at the museum and commentary on local river lore by Julia Belle Captain Dennis Trone. Price for the tour is $25.

Sightseeing cruises aboard the Julia Belle Swain depart every day at 1, 3 and 5 p.m. The standard one and one-half hour trip costs $4 for adults, $1 for kids under 13. Evening dinner rides of two hours (optional dining) depart at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday — for $4. Kids are $1.

Those that feel like kicking up their heels aboard the old time sternwheeler can sign up for a "Moonlight Dance Trip" which leaves dock at 7:30 and 10 p.m. on Friday and Saturday. Cost is $5 for all ages. Live band music is included.

Peoria is about a 3-hour drive from the Northwest suburbs by way of I-55 and I-74.

The namesake of the steamboat Lincoln once guided down the Sangamon River near Springfield still makes daily trips from the small village of New Salem.

The 73-ft. Talisman, a replica of the vessel built in the 1830s, makes daily trips every hour beginning at 10 a.m. The 45-minute cruise takes you along a wooded shoreline which remains much the same as when the 16th President lived in the area as a young man. Standard cruise costs $1 and departs from the old mill site. New Salem features dozens of refurbished log cabin homes, including the old cooperage where Lincoln once studied his lawbooks by the light of a hearth fire.

New Salem is a 4½-hour drive from the Northwest suburbs by way of I-55.

The Addie May, docked eight miles south of Nauvoo, offers hourly cruises Saturday beginning 7 p.m. Sunday and Holiday trips start at noon. For the $2 ticket price ($1 for kids) you can snap photos of the hilly Mississippi River shoreline. If you have a large party you can rent the Addie May for two hours — at $75 a shot. For those who feel like sampling steamboat flavor, but don't want the actual cruise, there's a bar open daily from noon to 10 p.m. For information, call: 309/847-2181.

Nauvoo is about a 5-hour drive from the Northwest suburbs on I-80, I-74 and Rtes. 41 and 9.

The Mississippi River near Quincy provides another chance to cruise Father Water in an unusual manner. The Quinssippi Queen, named after the Western Illinois island which once served as a trapping ground for early explorers, departs on weekend at 2, 3 and 4 p.m. Weekday charters are available for $25 per hour, dropping to $15 after the second hour. The Queen holds forty-nine passengers and departs from mainland Quincy.

Added Quincy attractions include an aerial ride across the Mississippi from Quincy to Quinssippi Island, an old time train ride, a zoo, restored cabins and a museum. For information, call: 217/223-7703.

Quincy is about 120 miles southwest of Peoria on Rte. 24.

CANCER DETECTION HEART ATTACK PREVENTION

A resting electrocardiogram is taken at the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. to detect any heart abnormalities.

Of every six people who get cancer today, two will be saved and four will die. Of the four who would otherwise die, one might be saved with earlier diagnosis and prompt treatment. (According to American Cancer Society publication '76 Cancer Facts and Figures.)

The health examination services available at the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection include all cancer detection procedures recommended by the American Cancer Society, Illinois Division.

Heart Disease accounts for nearly half of all deaths each year. Unlike most Cancer, Heart Attack can be postponed through reducing one's risk factors such as diet, exercise, blood presure, smoking, etc. Dr. Morris Collen, a well-known specialist in preventive medicine, was quoted in the January, 1977 Issue of FORTUNE "if one has a checkup every year or two at age thirty-five and thereafter, directed at postponable diseases, the mortality rate from those diseases after seven years is approximately 50 percent of what it would have been without exams."

The Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. offers a preventive health screening examination designed for three purposes:

1. To establish a health profile for each individual to be used as a baseline for future care.
2. To analyze an individual's risk factors for heart disease and cancer and statistically forecast probable life expectancy and suggest ways it might actually be increased by reducing the risk factors found.
3. Screen for treatable disease. Early detection and prompt treatment increase the probability of a favorable outcome.

This meticulous 3 hour, low cost examination includes a computerized medical history, health risk analysis, physical examination, proctosigmoidoscopy, chest x-ray, electrocardiogram, blood pressure, over 30 chemical determinations on blood and urine, vision, audiometry, spirometry, glaucoma test, body measurements. Women also receive a pap smear and instruction in breast self-examination. Exercise stress test, 24 hour holter monitor, and echocardiography are available as options.

Give yourself the best protection available today against cancer and heart disease by calling your physician or the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. located at 1000 Grand Canyon Parkway, Hoffman Estates, Illinois (Near Woodfield Mall.) Thoughts on a Mattress

Poem: Back-ache Blues*

Once upon a midnight sleeping
Suddenly I woke up weeping.
Something happened in my mattress
To disturb my night's repose.
While I rested nearly napping.
Suddenly there came a snapping
As the springs unleashed their zapping
Every time I tried to doze.

Why is this mattress getting bumpy?
Why the surface worn and lumpy?
Could it be because I've used it
Every night for twenty years?
Maybe I should buy a new one
To replace this ancient ruin.
Could the Schaumburg Mattress factory
Drive away my back-ache tears?

Morning found me weak and worried.
To the Factory I hurried.
Bought a mattress and a box spring
To relieve my back-ache blues.
Now I sleep with blissful ease.
No more back-ache memories.
Now I know why Schaumburg Mattress
Well deserves its rave reviews.

The Bard of 'Catfish Bend'

by Jo Ann Levine

"Are you interested in cannibals? OK, I'll tell you a couple of cannibal stories:

"I was sitting under a tree in New Caledonia with a retired cannibal, only he wasn't so very long retired. There was a mobile of 12 or 15 dried skulls hanging above us . . . I was talking to him about the philosophy of cannibalism.

" 'Well,' he said, 'It's this way: you hated a man — and you killed him. And ate him. And after you ate him — why, you didn't hate him anymore.' "

Ben Lucien Burman is a storyteller. As the creator of a world called "Catifsh Bend," which is somewhere along the Mississippi River, he has just completed his twentieth book in his eightieth year. "High Treason at Catfish Bend" (Vanguard, $6.95) features Doc Raccoon; J. E., the fox; and Judge Black, the vegetarian snake, as have his four previous Catfish Bend books.

Burman spoke from the wilds of his Greenwich Village apartment. Wicked hunting knives and prayer flags collected in Sikkim when he and his wife, Alice Caddy, were invited there by the King and Queen ("you remember Hope Cooke?") make up what he called the "Caddy-Burman Museum."

Burman describes Judge Black in "High Treason":

"Judge Black, the wonderful black snake from Claiborne County, Mississippi, who was trying to live down the snake's bad reputation by becoming a vegetarian, looked at the young frogs as if he couldn't believe what he was hearing. His eyes were filled with tears; since he'd become a vegetarian he cried easily."

The Disney Studios have been working six months on the Catfish Bend movie, but estimate it will take three years to complete. "For animation, there has to be 50 drawings per second. If you have five characters, that's 250 drawings per second," said Burman.

A play based on Catfish Bend, to be produced by Ed Padula (of "Bye Bye Birdie" fame), has "one angel," said Burman, and needs another in order to have enough financing.

Burman doesn't consider that his Catfish Bend stories are children's stories.

In 1975, the Times Educational Supplement (of London) said of his first four Catfish books, (all of which are illustrated by his wife): "They join the bittersweet tales of E. B. White and Thurber, the wise sanity of "The Wind in The Willows," and Mark Twain.

"If Burman sounds derivative through all these analogies, don't you believe it! He has something valuable to say, and he happens to use animals to say it."

More than 500,000 copies of the Catfish stories are in print and in many translations, including Czechoslovakian. In his apartment, he picked up a volume in Czech ("I'm becoming the darling of the Iron Curtain countries, apparently.") "Look here, on the book jacket they write my name, 'Bormana and Bormanovich' and compare me with Marku Twainovi!"

Before the first Catfish Bend book appeared in 1951, Burman wrote the novels "Steamboat Round the Bend" and "Blow for a Landing." "Steamboat" was made into Will Roger's most successful movie.

Burman brought out a copy and opened it to the first inscription: "I only hope our version is one-tenth as good as the original — John Ford." Then he covered up the next name and asked me to read the inscription and guess who wrote it. It said, "For my good friend Ben Burman who writes good and his Canadian wife who draws good. I hope the picture is a hit, for it's a great book."

Burman took away his hand to reveal the signature, "Will Rogers," and added that Will Rogers really talked that way — he didn't know any better.

Because the Burmans had been living on lentils for breakfast, lunch, and dinner, when John Ford said in 1935 he wanted to buy the book for Will Rogers for '$10,000 cash or a percentage," Burman decided he was tired of living on lentils and took the $10,000.

In 1946, a "so-called friend of mine" looked up the percentage and figured that Burman would have made $350,000, if he had chosen to take it.

"I love to avoid making money," he said, and told of working as a young man on the New York World and refusing to go in with some fellows who published the first crossword puzzle book. They later organized a publishing firm. Their names? Dick Simon and Max Schuster.

With the Disney movie, Burman said, he will have a percentage. "So when the picture is finished, I'll give you a Catfish Bend T-shirt," he promised.

Burman wrote his first novel, which was about the Mississippi River, while staying on an oasis in the Sahara.

When World War II broke out, he signed up with the Scripps-Howard Newspapers and Reader's Digest, and thanks to a reader of his books, he was able to wangle his way into the heart of the Free French in French Equatorial Africa. He was the first American to arrive there.

"De Gaulle was my baby," Burman recalled. "Nobody had ever heard about him over here until I wrote that first story. I still remember it: 'The heart of France is no longer along the Seine of Paris; it is here in Brazzaville along the fevered Congo.' That was a world coup, a double banner headline, full-page, and it was in 800 newspapers."

Later, he was invited to tea with Charles de Gaulle. "I had been able to swing this country away from pro-Vichy to pro-Free France, but this guy didn't know how to say 'thanks.' And for 1½ hours, he couldn't do it. He never thanked anybody. He was the most arrogant man." (Burman was decorated by the French Government with the Legion of Honor.)

Storyteller Ben Lucien Burman

Burman, who grew up in Covington, Kentucky, a river town, and graduated from Harvard, said that when he wrote his first book, he was "still writing 'plot things.' And then I discovered that plot is not the way to write a novel."

"I'll tell you what my code is. I wrote it out for Ed Murrow once: "Never be cruel, always be artistic, and never lose your sense of humor.' With those three things, I think I get along!

"I've always been fascinated by animals and the strange things they do. In Free French Africa, we went over to visit a plantation and the plantation owner turned us over to a pet chimpanzee named Susie. Susie took Alice by one hand and me by the other and showed us around the plantation as host. We visited the mill where they squeezed palm oil, and when it was all over she took us back to the house, turned a triple somersault, and went off . . . I would love to have a chimp get down to Catfish Bend . . .

"Are you interested in elephants? I'll tell you a couple. . . ."

Entertaining history; scathing fantasy

THE PUBLIC BURNING by Robert Coover (Viking, $12.95).

Reviewed by Charles Dickinson

The execution by electrocution of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, on trumped-up charges of selling the secret of the atom bomb to the Soviet Union, is one of history's blackest marks against the United States of America.

From out of that dismal period in the early 1950s, Robert Coover has crafted a novel as ambitious and unsettling as any ever written.

Coover has returned that era to the pages of his book with an eye for detail and a taste for research that is mind-boggling. Eight years in the writing and rejected by many publisher's legal departments for its volatile content, "The Public Burning" is at once history, entertaingly told, and fantasy, scathing in its approach.

Indeed, it is sometimes difficult to tell where history leaves off and Coover's brilliant, cynical imagination begins. But that is no matter. Whether detailing an era or creating a myth, Coover is one of the best.

His skill as a novelist is perhaps nowhere more evident than in the fact that he makes our latest national embarrassment, Richard Nixon, into a sympathetic and even likable figure.

As Vice President during the Rosenberg executions, Nixon is the narrator of fully half this big (nearly 280,000 words) book. It is a credit to Coover's skill that Nixon remains believable throughout.

Most of all, Nixon comes across as a man in love with the political "arena" while at the same time intensely uncomfortable with the life he has chosen.

As he says: "My trouble . . . is that I'm an introvert in an extrovert profession."

While Coover's portrayal of Nixon is based on fact, his broadest fantasy creation — the fast talking, never-say-die Uncle Sam — is rooted in myth.

Uncle Sam is kept busy looking out for the interests of the Sons of Light in their never ending battle against the Sons of Darkness and their nefarious leader, The Phantom. It is Uncle Sam's fervent belief, in the midst of the Korean War and uprisings across the globe, that the forces of Light would best be served, not to mention dealing a swift and terrible blow to The Phantom's Red horde, by the public burning of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, famed Atom spies, in New York City's Times Square.

Uncle Sam is a composite of all the best characteristics of the presidents. Those thirty-four men are his Incarnation. He tests them sternly to be certain they are Presidential Timber.

For Nixon, the first test comes on the golf course at Burning Tree Country Club, where, not surprisingly, Uncle Sam is a crackerjack golfer. The testing continues throughout the events leading up to the night of June 19, 1953 and the public burning.

Coover's highest regard for any character in the book is reserved for Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas. It is Douglas who, after the Supreme Court has refused to intervene in the Rosenberg execution and recessed for the summer, granted a stay of execution. His bold action threw the nation into turmoil, delayed the public burning only a day and forced the hurried reassembly of the Supreme Court to vacate the say.

Such an action was unprecedented and possibly illegal. However, so anxious was the nation and Uncle Sam to see the Rosenbergs put to death that unprecedented actions seemed commendable at the time.

Coover wreaks his vengeance on those justices who vacated the stay with a rather broad piece of slapstick. He has the six who voted to vacate slipping and sliding in a pile of elephant dung onstage in Times Square, before an audience of millions.

Coover also becomes somewhat heavy-handed when he takes Nixon to Sing Sing's Death House for a last minute confrontation with the Rosenbergs. He goes with the hope not of getting a confession (he no longer believes they are guilty) but to enlist their help in a fight against the FBI and the U.S Government that railroaded them into being public symbols of the Red Menace.

Instead, Nixon falls immediately in love with Ethel. They are on the verge of making love in the Death House when the guards return. It is a touching, blackly humorous

by Jo Ann Levine

"Are you interested in cannibals? OK, I'll tell you a couple of cannibal stories:

"I was sitting under a tree in New Caledonia with a retired cannibal, only he wasn't so very long retired. There was a mobile of 12 or 15 dried skulls hanging above us . . . I was talking to him about the philosophy of cannibalism.

" 'Well,' he said, 'It's this way: you hated a man — and you killed him. And ate him. And after you ate him — why, you didn't hate him anymore.' "

Ben Lucien Burman is a storyteller. As the creator of a world called "Catifsh Bend," which is somewhere along the Mississippi River, he has just completed his twentieth book in his eightieth year. "High Treason at Catfish Bend" (Vanguard, $6.95) features Doc Raccoon; J. E., the fox; and Judge Black, the vegetarian snake, as have his four previous Catfish Bend books.

Burman spoke from the wilds of his Greenwich Village apartment. Wicked hunting knives and prayer flags collected in Sikkim when he and his wife, Alice Caddy, were invited there by the King and Queen ("you remember Hope Cooke?") make up what he called the "Caddy-Burman Museum."

Burman describes Judge Black in "High Treason":

"Judge Black, the wonderful black snake from Claiborne County, Mississippi, who was trying to live down the snake's bad reputation by becoming a vegetarian, looked at the young frogs as if he couldn't believe what he was hearing. His eyes were filled with tears; since he'd become a vegetarian he cried easily."

The Disney Studios have been working six months on the Catfish Bend movie, but estimate it will take three years to complete. "For animation, there has to be 50 drawings per second. If you have five characters, that's 250 drawings per second," said Burman.

A play based on Catfish Bend, to be produced by Ed Padula (of "Bye Bye Birdie" fame), has "one angel," said Burman, and needs another in order to have enough financing.

Burman doesn't consider that his Catfish Bend stories are children's stories.

In 1975, the Times Educational Supplement (of London) said of his first four Catfish books, (all of which are illustrated by his wife): "They join the bittersweet tales of E. B. White and Thurber, the wise sanity of "The Wind in The Willows," and Mark Twain.

"If Burman sounds derivative through all these analogies, don't you believe it! He has something valuable to say, and he happens to use animals to say it."

More than 500,000 copies of the Catfish stories are in print and in many translations, including Czechoslovakian. In his apartment, he picked up a volume in Czech ("I'm becoming the darling of the Iron Curtain countries, apparently.") "Look here, on the book jacket they write my name, 'Bormana and Bormanovich' and compare me with Marku Twainovi!"

Before the first Catfish Bend book appeared in 1951, Burman wrote the novels "Steamboat Round the Bend" and "Blow for a Landing." "Steamboat" was made into Will Roger's most successful movie.

Burman brought out a copy and opened it to the first inscription: "I only hope our version is one-tenth as good as the original — John Ford." Then he covered up the next name and asked me to read the inscription and guess who wrote it. It said, "For my good friend Ben Burman who writes good and his Canadian wife who draws good. I hope the picture is a hit, for it's a great book."

Burman took away his hand to reveal the signature, "Will Rogers," and added that Will Rogers really talked that way — he didn't know any better.

Because the Burmans had been living on lentils for breakfast, lunch, and dinner, when John Ford said in 1935 he wanted to buy the book for Will Rogers for '$10,000 cash or a percentage," Burman decided he was tired of living on lentils and took the $10,000.

In 1946, a "so-called friend of mine" looked up the percentage and figured that Burman would have made $350,000, if he had chosen to take it.

"I love to avoid making money," he said, and told of working as a young man on the New York World and refusing to go in with some fellows who published the first crossword puzzle book. They later organized a publishing firm. Their names? Dick Simon and Max Schuster.

With the Disney movie, Burman said, he will have a percentage. "So when the picture is finished, I'll give you a Catfish Bend T-shirt," he promised.

Burman wrote his first novel, which was about the Mississippi River, while staying on an oasis in the Sahara.

When World War II broke out, he signed up with the Scripps-Howard Newspapers and Reader's Digest, and thanks to a reader of his books, he was able to wangle his way into the heart of the Free French in French Equatorial Africa. He was the first American to arrive there.

"De Gaulle was my baby," Burman recalled. "Nobody had ever heard about him over here until I wrote that first story. I still remember it: 'The heart of France is no longer along the Seine of Paris; it is here in Brazzaville along the fevered Congo.' That was a world coup, a double banner headline, full-page, and it was in 800 newspapers."

Later, he was invited to tea with Charles de Gaulle. "I had been able to swing this country away from pro-Vichy to pro-Free France, but this guy didn't know how to say 'thanks.' And for 1½ hours, he couldn't do it. He never thanked anybody. He was the most arrogant man." (Burman was decorated by the French Government with the Legion of Honor.)

Storyteller Ben Lucien Burman

Burman, who grew up in Covington, Kentucky, a river town, and graduated from Harvard, said that when he wrote his first book, he was "still writing 'plot things.' And then I discovered that plot is not the way to write a novel."

"I'll tell you what my code is. I wrote it out for Ed Murrow once: "Never be cruel, always be artistic, and never lose your sense of humor.' With those three things, I think I get along!

"I've always been fascinated by animals and the strange things they do. In Free French Africa, we went over to visit a plantation and the plantation owner turned us over to a pet chimpanzee named Susie. Susie took Alice by one hand and me by the other and showed us around the plantation as host. We visited the mill where they squeezed palm oil, and when it was all over she took us back to the house, turned a triple somersault, and went off . . . I would love to have a chimp get down to Catfish Bend . . .

"Are you interested in elephants? I'll tell you a couple. . . ."

THE PUBLIC BURNING by Robert Coover (Viking, $12.95).

Reviewed by Charles Dickinson

The execution by electrocution of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, on trumped-up charges of selling the secret of the atom bomb to the Soviet Union, is one of history's blackest marks against the United States of America.

From out of that dismal period in the early 1950s, Robert Coover has crafted a novel as ambitious and unsettling as any ever written.

Coover has returned that era to the pages of his book with an eye for detail and a taste for research that is mind-boggling. Eight years in the writing and rejected by many publisher's legal departments for its volatile content, "The Public Burning" is at once history, entertaingly told, and fantasy, scathing in its approach.

Indeed, it is sometimes difficult to tell where history leaves off and Coover's brilliant, cynical imagination begins. But that is no matter. Whether detailing an era or creating a myth, Coover is one of the best.

His skill as a novelist is perhaps nowhere more evident than in the fact that he makes our latest national embarrassment, Richard Nixon, into a sympathetic and even likable figure.

As Vice President during the Rosenberg executions, Nixon is the narrator of fully half this big (nearly 280,000 words) book. It is a credit to Coover's skill that Nixon remains believable throughout.

Most of all, Nixon comes across as a man in love with the political "arena" while at the same time intensely uncomfortable with the life he has chosen.

As he says: "My trouble . . . is that I'm an introvert in an extrovert profession."

While Coover's portrayal of Nixon is based on fact, his broadest fantasy creation — the fast talking, never-say-die Uncle Sam — is rooted in myth.

Uncle Sam is kept busy looking out for the interests of the Sons of Light in their never ending battle against the Sons of Darkness and their nefarious leader, The Phantom. It is Uncle Sam's fervent belief, in the midst of the Korean War and uprisings across the globe, that the forces of Light would best be served, not to mention dealing a swift and terrible blow to The Phantom's Red horde, by the public burning of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, famed Atom spies, in New York City's Times Square.

Uncle Sam is a composite of all the best characteristics of the presidents. Those thirty-four men are his Incarnation. He tests them sternly to be certain they are Presidential Timber.

For Nixon, the first test comes on the golf course at Burning Tree Country Club, where, not surprisingly, Uncle Sam is a crackerjack golfer. The testing continues throughout the events leading up to the night of June 19, 1953 and the public burning.

Coover's highest regard for any character in the book is reserved for Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas. It is Douglas who, after the Supreme Court has refused to intervene in the Rosenberg execution and recessed for the summer, granted a stay of execution. His bold action threw the nation into turmoil, delayed the public burning only a day and forced the hurried reassembly of the Supreme Court to vacate the say.

Such an action was unprecedented and possibly illegal. However, so anxious was the nation and Uncle Sam to see the Rosenbergs put to death that unprecedented actions seemed commendable at the time.

Coover wreaks his vengeance on those justices who vacated the stay with a rather broad piece of slapstick. He has the six who voted to vacate slipping and sliding in a pile of elephant dung onstage in Times Square, before an audience of millions.

Coover also becomes somewhat heavy-handed when he takes Nixon to Sing Sing's Death House for a last minute confrontation with the Rosenbergs. He goes with the hope not of getting a confession (he no longer believes they are guilty) but to enlist their help in a fight against the FBI and the U.S Government that railroaded them into being public symbols of the Red Menace.

Instead, Nixon falls immediately in love with Ethel. They are on the verge of making love in the Death House when the guards return. It is a touching, blackly humorous

'Marathon' tells the inside details of Carter's win

MARATHON 1972-1976: THE PURSUIT OF THE PRESIDENCY by Jules Witcover (Viking, $14.95)

Reviewed by Steve Brown

Saying that something is the "most" or the "best" always creates the possibility that a topper will appear instantaneously. Washington Star columnist Jules Witcover's "Marathon" represents both categories when it comes to talking about post-election writing about the 1976 presidential election.

Witcover's 684-page account of the campaign and pre-campaign maneuverings of President Jimmy Carter and the losers makes for interesting reading even though the reader knows the outcome from the beginning.

A veteran political writer who has covered every presidential campaign since 1960, Witcover traversed the nation well before the beginning of the 1976 election to report on the developing campaign. His efforts prove invaluable in this recounting of the campaign year which saw an obscure southern politician narrowly beat an incumbent politician who very nearly lost his party's nomination to a conservative movie star turned politician.

Witcover also manages to spice his book with a few "insider" details that sometimes never see the light of day in the regular coverage of the campaign. Carter's penchant for being on time is fairly well known, but Alabama Gov. George Wallace's fear of flying may be a new nugget of knowledge for many political aficionados..

Also of interest is the role some Illinoisan played in the campaign. Witcover recounts in some detail how Chicago attorney Alex Seith, now a candidate for the U.S. Senate against U.S. Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., played the middleman in an effort to prevent Carter from snubbing the late Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley by cooperating in a fundraiser being planned by the Chicago Democratic organization's arch-foe former Gov. Dan Walker. Seith played go-between with Carter and the mayor, according to Witcover's account.

But while "Marathon" is heavy on detail, the book does not bog down with all of the ins and outs of the campaign, convention and other activities. Major primary races are dealt with thoroughly. Inconsequential events that may have seemed earth shattering at the time but in the long run, were not, are dismissed.

But under the weight of trying to retell the story, Witcover is sometimes short on analysis. Maybe it would have only served to confuse the scenario, but the author does little to explain how Carter managed to overcome the image that he was an unknown lightweight, shifty on the issues and short on experience.

Great emphasis is given to Hamilton Jordan, now Carter's chief of staff, and his precise memos detailing every step of the campaign. But there is no real explanation of whether Jordan was really an expert or merely as lucky as the man who won the dart game during the recent New York blackout.

This shortcoming is not really overpowering. The reader might be as well qualified as anyone to explain how Jimmy Carter won or how the other candidates managed to lose their respective campaigns.

The analysis is not as important as the value in seeing the whole election year process laid out in one place. Other writers have tried, but so far Witcover's background and ability makes his effort the best.

KEEP STOMPIN' TILL THE MUSIC STOPS by Stella Pevsner (Seabury, $7.50, ages 9-12)

Reviewed by Genie Campbell

I have enjoyed following the publishing career of Stella Pevsner ever since her first children's book, "Break A Leg!," came out in 1969.

She resides in Palatine and one is always more inquisitive and interested in those authors that pass on the street. That is how I happened to pick up her first book. A half dozen later I remain a faithful reader — not necessarily because of locale anymore — but because she is fun to read.

It is after picking up a new work by Pevsner that I am reminded how often we adults are verbally abused with run-on sentences and cold, abstract concepts that leave us tired or even bored. Somewhere along the way we've equated bigger and better concepts with bigger words. And it is only after putting down a children's book that I mindfully scold myself for having waited so long to pick up another.

Children's literature is not all frivolous. Authors are increasingly focusing on family and human discord, situations of life that kids today experience while growing up. Pevsner is conscious of these problems too, as her writing matures on an elementary level, to not sensationalize or despair, but offer compassion and a sensitive insight into everyday pressures and disappointments.

She focused on divorce in "A Smart Kid Like You" for which she recently won the Dorothy Canfield Fisher Award, and now she tackles a prominent but rarely recognized problem of youth — dyslexia — in a book released this summer, "Keep Stompin' Till the Music Stops." As a recent television special pointed out, learning disabilities touch 8 million children in this country alone.

Diagnosed as everything from minimal brain damage to retardation, learning disabilities spell out one thing for sure: A young child begins to fail in school through he or she may be as intelligent or more so, than everybody else in the class.

Written for grade levels three to six (though this is not meant to exclude anybody over 12), "Keep Stompin' Till the Music Stops" is about a young boy named Richard, who knows he is slow to catch on, but doesn't know why.

Every time he tries to concentrate, his mind wanders. It hurts him to see his Dad lose patience. Even his little sister calls him "Dummy-baby."

But on a visit to his grandfather's house in Galena, Richard gains the confidence and assurance he needs when he is signaled out by his cousin Alexandra to help solve a family crisis. He finds he can overcome his shortcomings just as his grandfather is able to face and rise above the demands placed upon him.

There is a warm coupling of the young and the old as Richard and his grandfather lean on one another and recognize that what they are individually experiencing isn't very different.

In researching "Keep Stompin' Till the Music Stops," Stella Pevsner volunteered at Summit School in Arlington Heights which specializes in helping children with learning disabilities.

"I wanted to offer children more of an understanding of what they are going through. It's like they're trapped in their own minds," said Pevsner.

"Above all I wanted to leave them with a feeling of hope — that if you hang in there, you can fight the problems. Or, if grandpa can do it, I can do it too."

Pevsner has just completed the manuscript for another book, this one about a young junior high school girl who feels overshadowed by her gregarious 16-year-old sister.

Pevsner measures her books by two criteria — an element of humor and a feeling of hope.

"Reading should be fun and children need to reach out and find that there is something in the world that's steady. Life isn't all gloomy."

scene, but it is also Coover's weakest moment in the book.

Coover has done his homework well. There is no doubt he spent a great deal of time poring over every possible research source linked with the Rosenbergs and that particular era. He has brought back Syngman Rhee and John Reginald Halliday Christie and Ev Dirksen and David Greenglass and Uncle Miltie and J. Edgar Hoover and the infamous Jell-O box. It is a marvel of research and writing.

Coover has delved deeply into the New York Times files and has proclaimed Time Magazine the National Poet Laureate, taking that magazine's reportage and setting it down verbatim in poetic meter.

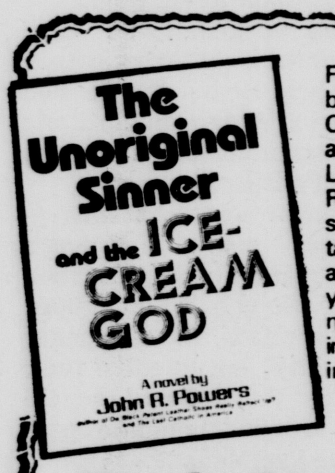
Coover captures the mood of the masses in Times Square. They are excited by the first two electrical charges to pass through Julius Rosenberg, but bored by the third.

The public burning of Ethel Rosenberg, who remains alive even after the three prescribed jolts, is horrifying and forces the people "to think about something or someone other than themselves, which is both disquieting and exciting."

Coover closes his book with an epilogue entitled "Beauty and the Beast." Uncle Sam is the Beauty. Nixon is the Beast .

It is in the epilogue that Nixon, who said earlier that he is only a "heartbeat away from the Incarnation," finally is told that he is one of the chosen. The epilogue might best be subtitled: "The Making of the President — 1953" for the way Uncle Sam goes about letting Nixon know, "You're my boy!"

Robert Coover has tried to write a Great American Novel. He is more than up to the task. It is unfortunate the America he has written about was not so great.



From the author of the best-selling "The Last Catholic in America" and "Do Black Patent Leather Shoes Really Reflect Up?" It's a spirited yet poignant tale of the coming of age of Tim Conroy, a young man who is not quite comfortable in the world that others insist he enters. 8.95

'Enola Gay' tells Hiroshima story without emotion

Reviewed by Linda Punch

The dropping of the first atomic bomb at Hiroshima thirty-two years ago thrust the world into a new era. Nations who placed total confidence in conventional defensive weapons realized mass death and destruction could be caused by a single blow. Philosophers and moralists cited the atomic holocaust as one more example of science gone mad.

In "Enola Gay," authors Gordon Thomas and Max Morgan Witts attempt to strip away the emotionalism surrounding the first attack of the nuclear age. They tell the story of military men — both American and Japanese — and their role in the events leading up to the first atomic bomb.

According to the authors, most of the people involved in the preparations for the mission had no knowledge of the weapon they were working with. Except for a handful of scientists and Colonel Paul Tibbets, mission commander, no one realized the horror that could be unleashed by the new bomb.

The authors trace the training of the 509th Composite Group, a group of men selected for the top-secret mission that would end the war. Unlike the stereotyped military heroes, the 509th was a mixed bag — gamblers, hell raisers and playboys. One pilot even borrowed an army bomber to fly home to New York for the Christmas holiday. He was let off with a minor punishment because of the importance of the mission.

The Japanese homefront is portrayed through the eyes of a young officer commanding anti-aircraft batteries at Hiroshima and through the eyes of the city's mayor. For the Japanese, food is in short supply and there are nightly bombing raids. Few, however, doubt that their nation will be victorious:

"The fall of Tinnian in late July had totally failed to shake Second Lieutenant Tatsuo Yokoyama's belief in the invincibility of the Imperial Japanese Army . . . This September evening, as usual before gunning practice, the forty men at the anti-aircraft gun post on Mount Futaba, in the northeastern outskirts of Hiroshima, were lectured by their commander on the need to keep faith with the high command's belief in ultimate victory."

Yokoyama's feelings were typical of the majority of the Japanese, a factor which led to the decision to drop the atomic bomb rather than become involved in a bloody struggle over the mainland.

The actual mission to Hiroshima was surrounded with publicity, despite the secrecy surrounding the project. Tibbets and his men departed for their historic mission only after posing for newspaper photographers and movie cameramen. The carnival atmosphere belied the seriousness of the mission.

While "Enola Gay" captures the military aspects and politics surrounding the dropping of the first atomic bomb, the book fails to give insight into the characters of many of the people involved. Col. Tibbets, whose marriage broke up during the months leading to the bombing, is depicted as a coldhearted militarist whose prime concern is the mission to Hiroshima. Tibbets, as portrayed by the authors, has little reaction to the death and destruction at Nagasaki, the second city bombed with atomic weapons:

"Early in September 1945 Tibbets . . . flew to Japan to inspect Nagasaki. After touring the city — a journey which had little emotional impact on Tibbets — he wound up shopping."

The authors wrote "Enola Gay" to clear away some of the myths and emotionalism surrounding the first atomic attacks. The book is well documented and they do uncover facts previously unreported, such as the presence of American prisoners of war in Hiroshima at the time of the bombing.

The book draws no moral conclusions and while the authors vividly describe the scenes following bombing, the book lacks the emotional impact of a work such as John Hersey's "Hiroshima."

'Enola Gay' tells Hiroshima story without emotion

Reviewed by Linda Punch

The dropping of the first atomic bomb at Hiroshima thirty-two years ago thrust the world into a new era. Nations who placed total confidence in conventional defensive weapons realized mass death and destruction could be caused by a single blow. Philosophers and moralists cited the atomic holocaust as one more example of science gone mad.

In "Enola Gay," authors Gordon Thomas and Max Morgan Witts attempt to strip away the emotionalism surrounding the first attack of the nuclear age. They tell the story of military men — both American and Japanese — and their role in the events leading up to the first atomic bomb.

According to the authors, most of the people involved in the preparations for the mission had no knowledge of the weapon they were working with. Except for a handful of scientists and Colonel Paul Tibbets, mission commander, no one realized the horror that could be unleashed by the new bomb.

The authors trace the training of the 509th Composite Group, a group of men selected for the top-secret mission that would end the war. Unlike the stereotyped military heroes, the 509th was a mixed bag — gamblers, hell raisers and playboys. One pilot even borrowed an army bomber to fly home to New York for the Christmas holiday. He was let off with a minor punishment because of the importance of the mission.

The Japanese homefront is portrayed through the eyes of a young officer commanding anti-aircraft batteries at Hiroshima and through the eyes of the city's mayor. For the Japanese, food is in short supply and there are nightly bombing raids. Few, however, doubt that their nation will be victorious:

"The fall of Tinnian in late July had totally failed to shake Second Lieutenant Tatsuo Yokoyama's belief in the invincibility of the Imperial Japanese Army . . . This September evening, as usual before gunning practice, the forty men at the anti-aircraft gun post on Mount Futaba, in the northeastern outskirts of Hiroshima, were lectured by their commander on the need to keep faith with the high command's belief in ultimate victory."

Yokoyama's feelings were typical of the majority of the Japanese, a factor which led to the decision to drop the atomic bomb rather than become involved in a bloody struggle over the mainland.

The actual mission to Hiroshima was surrounded with publicity, despite the secrecy surrounding the project. Tibbets and his men departed for their historic mission only after posing for newspaper photographers and movie cameramen. The carnival atmosphere belied the seriousness of the mission.

While "Enola Gay" captures the military aspects and politics surrounding the dropping of the first atomic bomb, the book fails to give insight into the characters of many of the people involved. Col. Tibbets, whose marriage broke up during the months leading to the bombing, is depicted as a coldhearted militarist whose prime concern is the mission to Hiroshima. Tibbets, as portrayed by the authors, has little reaction to the death and destruction at Nagasaki, the second city bombed with atomic weapons:

"Early in September 1945 Tibbets . . . flew to Japan to inspect Nagasaki. After touring the city — a journey which had little emotional impact on Tibbets — he wound up shopping."

The authors wrote "Enola Gay" to clear away some of the myths and emotionalism surrounding the first atomic attacks. The book is well documented and they do uncover facts previously unreported, such as the presence of American prisoners of war in Hiroshima at the time of the bombing.

The book draws no moral conclusions and while the authors vividly describe the scenes following bombing, the book lacks the emotional impact of a work such as John Hersey's "Hiroshima."

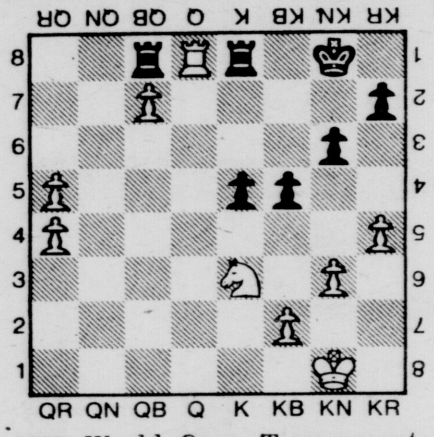
BEGINNER'S CORNER



The 1977 World Open Tournament was transplanted with tremendous success, last July 4th weekend, from its usual Manhattan site to the Sheraton Hotel in Philadelphia. Nine-hundred-and-twenty players participated — a record for non-scholastic events in the U.S.

Youth, which is riding a tidal wave in American chess, conquered this tournament in the person of 18-year-old John Fedorowicz of New Jersey. Tied for 2nd-5th were Kevin Spraggett, Mike Valvo, Peter Nurmi, and Antonio Palacios. The three grandmaster entries Lein, Shamkovich, and Bisguier lagged behind.

A sensation of the tournament was 13-year-old Joel Benjamin of Brooklyn, who gained a U.S. Chess Federation master's rating in June, at an age two-months-younger than Fischer's, when he broke that same barrier 21 years ago.

Joel, who was tied for first after five rounds, faded at the end — no doubt adversely affected by the huge crowds surrounding him as he played, according to tournament organizer and director Bill Goichberg.

Substantial footage of Benjamin playing was featured on NBC's local evening news. While network NBC filmed a special 90-second segment which will be aired this fall on its Saturday morning Junior Hall of Fame.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Handle money matters wisely, Ari, or you end up week with naught but a handful of beans. Don't hesitate to beat bushes. Goose that lays golden egg may emerge. Before week is complete, branches part — ever so slightly — and you catch sight of rare opportunity. Grab it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): If one who is close shows signs of becoming an emotional ham, take it with a wry smile, Taurus. Firm and final with a touch of sweet will do nicely. Otherwise this late bloomer will drain you of energy, time and capital. Week ends with a sigh.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Cover the "free square" and get ready for "BINGO!" Gem. Patience passes out her rewards and you're on her list. What you receive may be small, but then you know Patience, she's her own reward! Regardless, count prize as well deserved.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You and partner/mate can come to sudden understanding. In the interlocking of emotions, plans and dreams can mesh. Highlight common goals. Domestic waters calm considerably, Moon-baby, and on last day the Red Sea parts.

LEO (July 23-August 22): Leo love, you simply must slow down. Pull over to the side of the road before you burn your engine out. All this racing around has your tachometer (as well as your budget) in the red. Study words to Gem for secret message. Also, Leo, you might contemplate fair Prudence who is another lady nice to have around.

VIRGO (August 23-September 22): It's "home again, home again, jiggedy-jig" for you, Virgo, and the sooner the better. You've worn out your welcome well and out. Quickly make proper adieus and head for home base. On last day roll out the old welcome mat as prodigal heads your way.

LIBRA (September 23-October 22): Watch out for fast balls, Lib. The count is 3-2 and the bases (as well as some of the players) apt to be loaded. This week tests your mirth, your mentality and your mettle. Be alert. A square shifts to a parallelogram and you must see all angles. On last day steal home.

SCORPIO (October 23-November 21): Caring for the walking wounded isn't your little black bag, Scorp, but this is an emergency. You've tangled and buried your sting, and now this poor soul is walking around in pain. Apply TLC and that doesn't mean "tough luck chicklet!"

SAGITTARIUS (November 22-December 21): Changing your lot doesn't necessarily mean you'll improve it, Saj. Clear up rather than out. You will comprehend. Diet (or lack of it) could be cause of present downer. Pitch Oreos and Ho-Hos in garbage disposal and grind some of your troubles away.

CAPRICORN (December 22-January 19): Look down, Cap, for you may be walking on eggs. Keep your mouth shut and your eyes and ears open. Prudence pays off (again) and on last day you break bread rather than eggs.

AQUARIUS (January 20-February 18): Let demanding person know that your offer to lend a "helping hand" does not extend to an arm and leg. Being a giver doesn't mean being a fool. On final day do something for someone you love. Yourself.

PISCES (February 19-March 20): You've made up your mind to move in certain direction but partner/mate may be dragging feet. If sweet-talk doesn't work then pack essentials and go it alone. On last day, Pisces, tip the porter and lighten your load.

Bernadine M. Rechner

Stamp notes

The U.S. Postal Service will commemorate the 200th anniversary of the signing of the Articles of Confederation with the release of a 13-cent stamp on Sept. 30.

First day ceremonies will be held at York, Penn., where the Articles were drafted in 1777.

The stamps are standard commemorative size and will be printed fifty stamps to the pane with one plate number.

For first day cancellations, customers may affix their own stamps and mail them to "First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, York, Pa. 17405." There is no charge for this service.

Customers wishing the Postal Service to affix the new adhesive to their self-addressed envelopes, should send their covers to the "Articles of Confederation Stamp, Postmaster, York, Pa. 17405" enclosing the proper remittance which is the cost of the stamps to be affixed.

Topical stamp collecting is a pleasant change of pace with growing numbers of philatelic enthusiasts.

Topical collectors are more interested in the subject depicted on the adhesive than in the country which issued it. They search for seashells, authors, artists, eye glasses, railroads, ships, music, flags, women, buildings and almost any other subject you can think of from Africana to Zoology.

It is a very individual facet of the hobby and often a single, interesting subject stamp will spark an interest in philately that will last a lifetime.

Mounting topical stamps permits you to use your ingenuity in placing adhesives on blank pages and you can add as much or as little information about a particular issue as you desire. Quadrille pages, lightly lined for ease in placement, are available at most stamp dealers.

Over 10,000 topical collectors in ninety countries belong to the American Topical Association, an organization founded in 1949 and devoted to this philatelic specialty.

Their bi-monthly publication, "Topical Time," keeps collectors up to date on new issues, reviews publications, present articles relevant to the field and carries dealer ads for supplies and new issue services.

The ATA also has a variety of handbooks and checklists available for purchase as well as a booklet, "How to Collect Topical Stamps for Fun and Relaxation."

Full information about membership is available from the American Topical Association, 3306 N. 50th St., Milwaukee, Wis. 53216."

Also, Leo, you might contemplate fair Prudence who is another lady nice to have around.

VIRGO (August 23-September 22): It's "home again, home again, jiggedy-jig" for you, Virgo, and the sooner the better. You've worn out your welcome well and out. Quickly make proper adieus and head for home base. On last day roll out the old welcome mat as prodigal heads your way.

LIBRA (September 23-October 22): Watch out for fast balls, Lib. The count is 3-2 and the bases (as well as some of the players) apt to be loaded. This week tests your mirth, your mentality and your mettle. Be alert. A square shifts to a parallelogram and you must see all angles. On last day steal home.

SCORPIO (October 23-November 21): Caring for the walking wounded isn't your little black bag, Scorp, but this is an emergency. You've tangled and buried your sting, and now this poor soul is walking around in pain. Apply TLC and that doesn't mean "tough luck chicklet!"

SAGITTARIUS (November 22-December 21): Changing your lot doesn't necessarily mean you'll improve it, Saj. Clear up rather than out. You will comprehend. Diet (or lack of it) could be cause of present downer. Pitch Oreos and Ho-Hos in garbage disposal and grind some of your troubles away.

CAPRICORN (December 22-January 19): Look down, Cap, for you may be walking on eggs. Keep your mouth shut and your eyes and ears open. Prudence pays off (again) and on last day you break bread rather than eggs.

AQUARIUS (January 20-February 18): Let demanding person know that your offer to lend a "helping hand" does not extend to an arm and leg. Being a giver doesn't mean being a fool. On final day do something for someone you love. Yourself.

PISCES (February 19-March 20): You've made up your mind to move in certain direction but partner/mate may be dragging feet. If sweet-talk doesn't work then pack essentials and go it alone. On last day, Pisces, tip the porter and lighten your load.

Stamp notes

The U.S. Postal Service will commemorate the 200th anniversary of the signing of the Articles of Confederation with the release of a 13-cent stamp on Sept. 30.

First day ceremonies will be held at York, Penn., where the Articles were drafted in 1777.

Making his debut as a stamp designer is David Blossom of Weston, Conn. whose five figures around a conference table are meant to be symbolic and do not portray specific members of the Congress.

The stamps are standard commemorative size and will be printed fifty stamps to the pane with one plate number.

For first day cancellations, customers may affix their own stamps and mail them to "First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, York, Pa. 17406." There is no charge for this service.

Customers wishing the Postal Service to affix the new adhesive to their self-addressed envelopes, should send their covers to the "Articles of Confederation Stamp, Postmaster, York, Pa. 17405" enclosing the proper remittance which is the cost of the stamps to be affixed.

In both cases, covers must be postmarked no later than Oct. 15.

Topical stamp collecting is a pleasant change of pace with growing numbers of philatelic enthusiasts.

Topical collectors are more interested in the subject depicted on the adhesive than in the country which issued it. They search for seashells, authors, artists, eye glasses, railroads, ships, music, flags, women, buildings and almost any other subject you can think of from Africana to Zoology.

It is a very individual facet of the hobby and often a single, interesting subject stamp will spark an interest in philately that will last a lifetime.

Mounting topical stamps permits you to use your ingenuity in placing adhesives on blank pages and you can add as much or as little information about a particular issue as you desire. Quadrille pages, lightly lined for ease in placement, are available at most stamp dealers.

Over 10,000 topical collectors in ninety countries belong to the American Topical Association, an organization founded in 1949 and devoted to this philatelic specialty.

Their bi-monthly publication, "Topical Time," keeps collectors up to date on new issues, reviews publications, present articles relevant to the field and carries dealer ads for supplies and new issue services.

The ATA also has a variety of handbooks and checklists available for purchase as well as a booklet, "How to Collect Topical Stamps for Fun and Relaxation."

Full information about membership is available from the American Topical Association, 3306 N. 50th St., Milwaukee, Wis. 53216."

SHADED AREAS INDICATE NEW SHOWS

The 1977-78 commercial television season will be more diverse and unpredictable than any before in the history of the medium. Many of the network's new fall programs will not even premiere until the beginning of October. But, the prime time programming schedule as it appears at the moment is presented in this week's "TV Time" for the convenience of our readers. In a season where comedy, sexual permissiveness, specials and long-form dramas, it's best to consult each week's television guide and daily listings in The Daily Herald for last minute program changes.

The 1977-78 commercial television season will be more diverse and unpredictable than any before in the history of the medium. Many of the network's new fall programs will not even premiere until the beginning of October. But, the prime time programming schedule as it appears at the moment is presented in this week's "TV Time" for the convenience of our readers. In a season where comedy, sexual permissiveness, specials and long-form dramas, it's best to consult each week's television guide and daily listings in The Daily Herald for last minute program changes.

Kristy McNichol

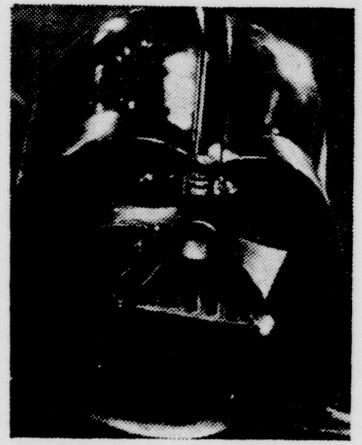
I would like to know where I could write to Kristy McNichol. Please give me her home address, if possible.

D.H.

Kristy (Buddy Lawrence of "Family"), like most celebrities, can't afford to disclose such information as a home address or phone Multiply, by the thousands, all the fans of Kristy you know (there certainly are a lot of mailbag letters for her)--and you can understand why the studio address is given. . If you want to reach Kristy McNichol, try writing to ABC-TV, 4151 Prospect, Hollywood,. California 90027.

After seeing the movie "Star Wars," I made a bet with my sister that Darth Vader is supposed to be a man who was hurt and then rebuilt with steel and strong powers. She says he is supposed to be a robot. Who is right? Also, who played Darth in the movie?

A.R.P.



Darth Vader

You are. As the legend tells it, Darth Vader, Obi-Wan Kenobi and Luke's father were together as young, forceful Jedi knights. Tempted by the "rewards" of evil, Darth broke away from the cause of the knighthood and became the villain who killed Luke's father. Ben and Darth then had a confrontation (years before the scene in the film) during which Ben almost killed Darth--but not quite. Darth plunged into the mouth of a volcano and was burned beyond human recognition. The suit and mask function as a sort of walking iron lung, according to producer George Lucas.

Darth Vader's body is that of actor-weightlifter David Prowse, but his frighteningly breathy voice belongs to the distinguished actor, James Earl Jones.

I recently had the pleasure of watching two movies starring Alan Arkin. They both were very fascinating, and led me to thinking of Mr. Arkin. Could you tell me what he's doing now, and how old he is?

S.E.G.

Arkin is indeed remarkable as an actor. But he is also, at age 43, an accomplished director. Right now he's waiting for the release of his directing achievements for the comedy film "Fire Sale" (starring Rob Reiner), as well "The Next Howling Wind" to be aired on NBC.
